To Whom It May Concern:

As the program director and co-founder of Bike Pittsburgh, an 501(c)(3) organization founded in 2002 that works on behalf of the Pittsburgh community to make the city safe, accessible, and friendly to bicycle transportation, I can attest to the integrity of Chatham University's bike support program.

Chatham was one of the first employers to offer the federal bike tax credit to support bicycling as daily work transportation. The university also supports and participates in city-wide bike events such as Bike to Work Day. Their educational bike shop, Chatham Bike Works, offers bike maintenance, monthly hands-on workshops, and offers Chatham students a place to house their bicycles free of charge.

Bike Pittsburgh applauds Chatham University's committed approach to sustainability through educating and supporting bicycling.

All the best,
Lou Fineberg
