Dear Members of the STARS Steering Committee:

Bryant University continues to be committed in strengthening sustainability on campus and around the world. Reflecting this University's effort, Bryant is pleased to submit our fourth STARS report. STARS has provided for us a tool to measure and advance campus efforts to increase energy efficiency, ensure social equity, and promote environmental stewardship.

It is with satisfaction that I endorse the accuracy of Bryant's fourth STARS Report for official submittal to the Association for the Advancement of Sustainability in Higher Education (AASHE) Steering Committee. In collaboration with our consultant, Coalesce, the Bryant community has worked hard to compile data that reflects the many areas of sustainability accomplishments across campus.

Our community has made significant headway in improving energy and environmental performance on campus through active student, faculty, and staff participation in the initiative. Moving forward, Bryant has room for even more improvements and thus, I encourage and support all campus stakeholders to actively participate in raising awareness and driving innovation for sustainability. The STARS framework has and will continue to serve as a guide to growing the Sustainability program at Bryant.

We are pleased to submit Bryant's STARS report as a testament to the University's longstanding commitment to environmental, social, and economic sustainability.

Sincerely,

Barry F. Morrison
Vice President for Business Affairs/Treasurer
