Head of Employability
Euromed Management

In March 2013, Euromed Management signed an agreement with the French Civic Service Institute that is both innovative and "sustainable". The French Civic Service is similar to the US Peace Corps and AmeriCorps combined.

Every degree seeking student at Euromed Management has the obligation to carry out an internship and the majority must also carry out an international experience (study abroad, job or internship). The agreement that was signed this year now allows students to carry out a "civic service" mission rather than an internship. If the mission corresponds to their level of qualifications and capacity, the student can choose this more sustainable route.

In return, the school facilitates access and entrance into our Masters programs for youths that have carried out a civic service and wish to continue their studies. The School has also agreed to "incubate" entrepreneurial projects of former civic service members in the schools "Business Nursery".

Euromed is one of the few French business schools with a formal partnership with the Civic Service Institute.

As the head of the employability service and the internship division, I can attest that this initiative is both innovative and sustainable. It offers our students an opportunity to give back to their community on a local level but also globally. It is an alternative approach to personal development.
