Dear Mr. Rowland,

As Euromed Management's Director General and Dean, I take great pleasure in confirming the School's STARS submission.

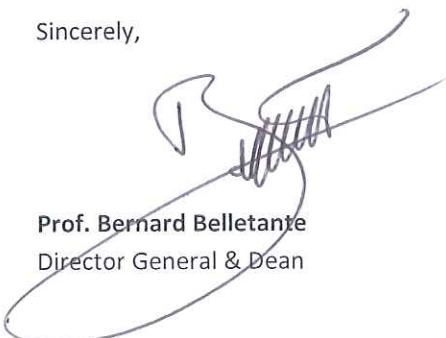

Fulfilling our role as an international pilot institution, our submission reflects the commitment and the hard work of Euromed Management's professors, students and staff. Although STARS is a tool created for and by American institutions, we responded to the best of our abilities. The STARS reporting tool has allowed the school to broaden its sustainability strategy and has inspired new actions and projects.

Euromed Management has been officially committed to sustainability since the signature of the Global Compact in 2005. With the creation of the Corporate Social Responsibility Department in 2007, the School began deploying a strategy that has made Euromed Management a Global Leader in this field. The mission to train responsible managers has become part of the schools DNA and the heart of our policies. In just a few short months Euromed Management will officially merge with Bordeaux Ecole de Management and become KEDGE Business School. Amidst the challenges of such a merger sustainability remained a federating force and helped inspire the new strategy: Create, Share, Care.

A committed school cannot content itself by solely working on their campus carbon and social analysis. They must also raise the bar for others. This is why Euromed Management is actively lobbying for change on the national and international levels. This is also why the School participated in the STARS International Pilot Program.

This year's submission gives us STARS silver and we are proud of this achievement. The next challenge will be to resubmit as KEDGE Business School and achieve STARS gold.

Sincerely,

Prof. Bernard Belletante
Director General & Dean
