

To whom it may concern,

I would like to acknowledge and appreciate the innovative work that the Technology for People Initiative (TPI) has done in the technology and governance space since its launch in April 2012. The unique problem-solving approach that TPI has employed, especially the focus on the demonstration effect, is truly innovative and unlike what is common in the development sector. The ability to engage highly qualified academic faculty at the top university in the country on problems of the public sector is a great idea!

Google is proud to have provided seed funding to such an organization.

Best,
