Over 5 years ago, Universidad San Francisco de Quito USFQ developed its first sustainability report. Today, with a larger institution, an increased number of students, staff, professors and an established Sustainability and Innovation Office, we ratify our commitment to be leaders in sustainability in Latinamerica.

At USFQ we continue to stand for freedom, knowledge and community enhancement. We have been using our campus as a living laboratory for sustainable solutions with environmental, educational, community and economic benefits. Many initiatives and ideas came out of our first sustainability assessment and there are still many more to pursue in collaboration with many different stakeholders.

As our students become the leaders of their communities and organizations we are empowering them to carry this yearning to implement sustainable solutions. As educators, this is our main goal. We will fervently continue to create opportunities for everyone in the USFQ community to continue rethinking, learning and experimenting new ideas for a sustainable future for all.
