To Whom It May Concern:

The University of Louisville's preferred name option embodies creativity to meet the needs of serving transgender and international students. Many institutions of higher education are involved in fast-moving policy developments related to serving transgender individuals in particular. This is being done to build stronger, more diverse campus communities, that recognize changing times and demographics of our student.

While this initiative at the University of Louisville removes a common barrier in the pipeline for transgender inclusion, it does so in a comprehensive manner spanning identification cards, class rosters, and the institution's online learning platform. Innovative efforts such as this will strengthen recruiting, retaining, and empowering a diverse student body at the University of Louisville.

Its innovative work like this that dissects often complex issues and creates communities where everyone can be fully engaged – no matter who they are!

Sincerely,

Jody Cofer Randall, M.S.
