Radford University honors education 'champion' through naming of McGlothlin Center

Radford University recently unveiled a new name for its international education center: the McGlothlin Center for Global Education and Engagement.

The name acknowledges the "dedication and leadership" of Thomas D. McGlothlin, president of the McGlothlin Foundation in Bristol, who "has been a champion of international education and engagement for years," said Radford University President Brian O. Hemphill in a private ceremony in May on campus in Cook Hall.

"There is a great deal of appreciation for you, your leadership and your support of this institution," President Hemphill said to McGlothlin, "and your mission to continue to drive that focus on international education and engagement."

The McGlothlin Center for Global Education and Engagement supports students, faculty, and staff who are interested in pursuing international initiatives that result in a positive impact for the individual and the Radford University community.

The McGlothlin Center manages international admissions and recruitment, international student and scholar services, and the intensive English program, which provides English language education for individuals who need assistance.

The center also manages an education abroad unit that provides support to students, faculty, and staff who are interested in pursuing study, research, and teaching opportunities outside the United States. Interested individuals may apply for McGlothlin International Education Funds that are available through the center.

At the ceremony, Thomas McGlothlin shared personal stories of traveling abroad and thanked Radford University "for all you do for students. Hopefully, we'll have all of them traveling soon and telling stories of their own."

National forests improvements to close Pandapas Pond area

Work to repair trails and bridges in the George Washington and Jefferson National Forests at the Pandapas Pond Day Use Area in Montgomery County will result in a temporary closing of the pond and surrounding trails beginning Monday, June 14.

According to Forest Service district ranger Beth Christensen, the work could take up to four weeks, and the area will reopen when the project is completed.

The lower parking lot closest to the pond will be closed. Visitors wishing to access the Poverty Creek Trail system can still park at the upper parking lot off US Highway 460 or at other access points off the Poverty Creek Road (Forest Service Road #708).

"The trails around Pandapas Pond provide opportunities to recreate and connect with nature close to the town of Blacksburg," said Christensen. "Trails at and adjacent to this popular recreation area have seen a large amount of use, which has contributed to the trails' degradation over time."

The Pandapas Pond project will repair deteriorated approaches to the walking bridges, level out the existing trail, improve drainage adjacent to the trail, reduce future trail erosion, and repair the trail tread on the Pandapas Pond Loop Trail (Forest Trail #74) and the Pandapas Wetland Loop Trail (Forest Trail #74a).

The forest service may also make improvements to the Poverty Creek Connector Trail (Forest Trail #74c) and the Woods and Field Trail (Forest Trail #74d). The trails will be closed while they are undergoing repairs.

Library's summer reading program underway

Radford Public Library's summer reading program is here.

Through Saturday, July 31, the library will be running its yearly summer program for kids, teens, and adults. The program promotes reading daily to earn prizes and to earn entries to win raffle baskets.

"The summer reading program is a fun way to promote literacy, encourage reading as a healthy habit, and help readers experience reading as fun and adventurous," according to the library.

This year the library is offering a new service called Beanstack for participants to easily track daily reading for the summer. Participants may register online at radfordva.beanstack.org. They can then log every day they read, write reviews, earn badges and prizes, and earn tickets to use to try and win a raffle basket.

Participants who do not wish to track their progress online can stop by the library to sign up and get a paper reading log.

As for the program's events in terms of COVID precautions, the library has this to say:

"It has been a difficult and challenging past fifteen months, and Radford

The Southwest Virginia Wildlife Center led an animal ambassador event last Saturday at the Radford Public Library to kick off the summer reading program.

Public Library has not had in-house event during this time out of an abundance of caution for the safety of staff and patrons. We are continuing to work with the safety of all in mind. Summer Reading Program events are often specifically geared for children, and we realize that children are not able to be vaccinated against COVID-19 at this time.

"For this reason, we will primarily offer SRP programs either outside or online. When this is not possible, some indoor events may be offered. Everyone who is not vaccinated must wear a mask within the library.

"We would also encourage families to maintain their distance from each other and will do our best to set up indoor events with spacing in mind. Library staff will wear masks when interacting with the public regardless of vaccination status per Radford City guidelines."

Krystal Thompson named new CEO for New River Community Action

New River Community Action's Board of Directors has named Krystal Thompson its chief executive officer.

As CEO, Thompson will be responsible for the successful leadership and management of the agency. She will oversee the planning and implementation of the agency's programs, services, and resources to ensure full compliance with regulations and that the needs of the community's low-income clients are being addressed.

Thompson is a human service professional with many years in the nonprofit, for-profit, and public arenas. She has experience in program development and implementation, grant writing, fundraising, strategic planning, budgeting, fiscal, regulatory compliance, and human resource management.

She comes to Community Action from the state director's position with Family Preservation Services. Previously, she was the executive director of Brain Injury Services of Southwest Virginia and the chief operating officer for Commonwealth Catholic Charities.

Thompson has a Master of Arts in Education degree in counseling education and student personnel services and a Bachelor of Science degree in family and child development from Virginia Tech. She also comes with her certification in mission-based leadership and organization development from the University of Notre Dame and Catholic Charities USA.

Thompson has been working with outgoing Community Action CEO Terry Smusz on the leadership transition that will occur when Smusz retires on June 30, 2021.

"The board reviewed over 100 applications from all around the United States as part of a months-long process," said the board's chairperson, John McEnhill. "We are confident that Krystal has the right mix of leadership skills and experience to work effectively with our diverse, active board of directors and our many valued community partners and to empower NRCA's dedicated staff guided by our mission."

Global internet outage points to weakness of the cloud infrastructure

After the recent massive internet outage that shut down websites and apps across the world, Virginia Tech computer scientist Ali Butt says the incident points to the weakness of the cloud infrastructure upon which many prominent websites are built.

Years of consolidation, Butt says, has slowly eroded the robustness of web service providers and also made them more vulnerable to cyberattacks.

"Over the years, the foundational infrastructure that powers websites and internet services has been consolidated into fewer cloud service providers such as Amazon and content delivery networks such as Fastly," says Butt. "While such consolidation has advantages of scale and cost, it has slowly eroded the robustness that comes from having many service providers that could seamlessly work with each other."

Butt said that an initial suspect for the recent outage has been a misconfiguration that led to an internal service outage that in turn took down the many services and websites which rely on the providers. "This is akin to replacing all local streets with a highway, where a single crash can shut down the highway, leaving users few alternate options," Butt said.

"Some would argue that this means we should have highways with more lanes for internet services," says Butt.

"That is good, but we should think about providing and supporting more alternate service providers as well. This would need a rethink and require the support of more cloud providers."

Butt says that another reason for this massive internet outage could be that the service provider was targeted by a cyberattack. "Though that has not been identified as a reason this time, it's an event waiting to happen," Butt said. "What is concerning is why there were not enough checks to prevent human or configuration errors in these crucial services. We need to make our cloud service infrastructure more

Radford PEO awards STAR scholarship

Chapter H, the Radford chapter of the Philanthropic Educational Organization (P.E.O.) Sisterhood, has awarded a $2,000 STAR scholarship to Grace Bailey, a senior at Pulaski County High School who also attended the Southwest Virginia Governor's School.

Bailey is described as "an outstanding student who has succeeded academically, has served in numerous school related leadership roles, enjoys collaborating with her classmates, and is compassionate about helping others." She will attend Radford University Carilion School of Nursing with a goal of becoming a nurse practitioner.

The P.E.O. STAR Scholarship was established in 2009 to provide scholarships for exceptional high school senior women to attend an accredited postsecondary educational institution in the U.S. or Canada in the next academic year. The competitive STAR scholarship is for women who exhibit excellence in leadership, academics, extracurricular activities, community service, and the potential for future success.

P.E.O. is a nonprofit organization that has helped more than 116,000 women pursue educational goals by providing more than $383 million in grants, scholarships, awards, and loans. One of the oldest women's organizations in North America, the sisterhood also owns and supports Cottey College.

"This outage is significant as it highlights the weaknesses of our cloud infrastructure," says Butt.

"In this time and age, we have to look at cloud services infrastructure as a national infrastructure that needs attention and security just like we do for our other infrastructure," says Butt. "To this end, the cybersecurity and secure management policy aspects also need to be a first class concern. Service providers are failing and have become vulnerabilities that we should address and proactively fix."

Montgomery County nonprofits to participate in annual giving day

CHRISTIANSBURG -- The Community Foundation of the New River Valley (CFNRV) is holding its eighth annual giving day, GiveLocalNRV, on Wednesday, June 23, 2021, to help organizations both big and small raise money in the New River Valley.

More than 40 nonprofits that are either in or serve Montgomery County are participating this year. More than 50 organizations located outside of Montgomery County provide services to the county and the entire New River Valley.

A special feature of this year's giving day will come from Maroon Door in Blacksburg, which has brewed a special GiveLocalNRV Kolch beer for the campaign. Maroon Door will donate to the GiveLocalNRV campaign $1 of each pint sold during June.

The annual online giving day has raised more than $1.6 million for over 100 nonprofit organizations in the New River Valley in the last seven years. The goal this year is $430,000 at a time when online support for nonprofits is more important than ever because COVID-19 has forced the cancelation of in-person fundraisers.

Pat Hyer, board chair for NRV Community Foundation, said, "If we have learned one thing during the COVID pandemic, it is how critical the local non-profits are to the well-being of our community. They feed the hungry, support kids trying to learn from home, provide emergency funds and mental health support to stressed families, and make sure that vaccinations reach everyone."

"GiveLocalNRV is the time to tell our non-profit organizations and their hundreds of volunteers how much they mean to us and to provide those ever-critical donations so they can keep serving Montgomery County residents in need," Hyer said.

In addition to donations from community members, organizations can earn additional grant money from the Community Foundation during the giving day. The CFNRV will be giving out $15,000 in grants to organizations that raise the most money, have the greatest number of unique donors during designated power hours, show creativity through videos, and more. Moreover, donors don't have to wait until June 23rd to support their favorite organizations. Any donation received through GiveLocalNRV through June 23 will count towards the organization's giving day total.

Donate online today to support your favorite organizations at givelocalnrv.org, which may be any of the following organizations that are located in or serve

Montgomery County:

Agape Center NRV, Blacksburg Community Band, Blacksburg Junior Women's Club, Blacksburg Museum and Cultural Foundation, Blacksburg New School, Boys & Girls Club of Southwest Virginia, Children's Trust, Community Foundation of the New River Valley - Fund for the NRV, Dayspring Christian Academy, DePaul Community Resources, Downtown Christiansburg, Friends of the Farmers Market, Friends of the Huckleberry, Habitat for Humanity of the New River Valley, Hacksburg, Historic Smithfield, Humane Society of Montgomery Co., Inmate Family Assistance of the NRV, Intellectual Disabilities Agency, Literacy Volunteers of the New River Valley, Live Work Eat Grow, Montgomery Co. Students help to clear up pandemic communication

Through 2020, the face mask proved to be an effective barrier to prevent the transmission of COVID-19.

But for many people who rely on facial expressions and lip-reading to communicate, masks also proved to be an effective barrier to understanding.

Such was the situation that students in Virginia Tech's Master of Public Health (MPH) program found themselves in the early days of the pandemic as they served alongside New River Health District staff to help senior citizens living in long-term care facilities.

"In the face of every resident, you see your loved ones and feel the pain and loneliness that isolation has brought them," Ella Rak, a Vienna native in the MPH-Doctorate of Veterinary Medicine program would later write. "How do you maintain quality and efficiency when communication is limited, resources are constrained, and risks are high?"

Thus was born TransparenSee — a group of four MPH students plus a graduate engineering student, who together produced a clear, fog-resistant face mask to allow for better communication with the deaf and hard of hearing community.

To date, TransparenSee has overseen the design, manufacture, and distribution of more than 1,400 masks sent for free to schools and families as far away as Wisconsin. "We even have a couple of businesses who have requested them so they can better communicate with customers," said Hannah Reed, of Pulaski.

From the beginning, the solution posed by opaque masks seemed obvious to the team of aspiring health professionals, which also included Jaelyn Abramson, of West Chester, Penn., and Teace Markwalter, of Vienna, Va. Less obvious were the challenges of designing a transparent mask that fit snugly on the wearer's face to keep potential virus droplets from escaping.

An opportunity to advance their idea came when Laura Hungerford, professor and head of the Virginia Tech Public Health Program, and Ron Fricker, professor and interim dean of the College of Science, worked with Virginia Tech's Fralin Life Sciences Institute to launch a campus-wide competition called TECH Together Campaign, which called upon Virginia Tech students' creativity and innovation in fighting coronavirus. Launched in July 2020, TECH Together ultimately received 76 applications from 20 different colleges and departments.

Designing low-cost plastic face shields for area hospitals was one thing, but TransparenSee's masks — with all the folds and curves necessary to provide a tight seal with the wearer's face — were another matter entirely.

The material TREC chose was durable, lightweight, relatively scratch-free polyester plastic with an anti-fog coating both inside and out.

The competition was held in three phases. For the first phase, applicants sent in a one-page proposal, and up to 20 teams were awarded $500 to prepare for phase two. During phase two, 10 teams were awarded another $1,000 to assist with strategy or prototype development to prepare for the final phase. At the end of the final phase, five winning proposals received a grand prize of $4,000 toward implementation.

Among the winners, TransparenSee used the prize money throughout fall and winter 2020 to fund experimentation and testing of their mask at nearby NanoSafe Inc. to ensure it provided at least the same protection as its cloth counterpart. Once the final design was approved, prize money went into full-scale production as well as marketing and packaging supplies so that they could make the mask available for free to anyone who wanted one.

"We wanted to use this project more as a community service rather than a business model," said Reed.

Delivery of the masks started up in March with orders coming in regularly online at bit.ly/ordertransparensee and social media channels (Facebook @TransparenSeeNRV and Instagram @transparen_see).

And when the prize money runs out?

"We hope that through more marketing and promotion the more businesses and people will want to contribute so we can keep providing more masks to the community," said Abramson.

Because while the money may end, TransparenSee members' enthusiasm for public health has not.

"They are really an amazing and dedicated group," Hungerford said, "currently balancing a full load of classes, serving on the front line of the vaccination and testing efforts, and continuing with the mask work."

Reed looks forward to the day when with increased vaccinations easing mask mandates their product won't be as vital.

"But we hope this allows for an opportunity to still effectively communicate with members of the deaf and hard of hearing community," she said, "and bring awareness to the issues that they face by making things more equitable and accessible."

New bill imposes heavier fines for illegal trash dumping on Virginia farms

Littering isn't just an eyesore that's harmful to the environment. It also can be detrimental to farming operations.

Acomack County farmer Sands Gayle said he's witnessed lots of illegal trash dumping along roadways and in the fields that he farms.

"On days that the public dumpsters aren't open, people will find a nearby back road and just throw it out," he lamented. "There's a lot of household trash. The problem is people just don't care."

Littering causes a multitude of problems for farmers. Trash dumped on farms can get caught in machinery, resulting in costly repairs. It also can get mixed in with crops during harvest, contaminating the yield and causing the farmer to lose money.

Illegal dumping also poses risks to livestock if they get tangled in trash or mistakenly ingest it while grazing.

Gayle said he tries to clean up what he can, "but if I end up stopping for every single piece of plastic I see, I doubt I'd get anything done in a day."

A new law taking effect July 1 is intended to curb Virginia's litter problem by doubling the minimum fine for illegal dumping from $250 to $500, with a maximum fine of $2,500. Violators also could face up to one year in jail or 10 hours of community service.

Del. James Edmunds, R-Halifax, introduced the legislation and supported its passing.

"We commend Delegate Edmunds for his leadership on addressing litter," said Ben Rowe, Virginia Farm Bureau Federation national affairs coordinator. "For too long litter has posed a risk to the environment, farm equipment, livestock, and crop quality. This new law will help ensure the minimum fine matches the impacts and risks of litter on farmers and deter littering in the commonwealth."

The Virginia Department of Transportation has launched an anti-littering awareness campaign called "Virginia is for Lovers, Not Litter." VDOT said it spends around $3.5 million annually cleaning up litter.

Gayle said he's pleased about the heavier fines

Thoughtless and illegal trash dumping on Virginia farms poses a risk to machinery and livestock.

and hopes more awareness will bring change.

"I think it's a good idea," he said. "If everybody's on the same page, it'll stop."

New River Health District task force update

The latest update from the New River Health District task force, issued Wednesday, illustrates the effect vaccinations and attention to pandemic protocols have had on the spread of the virus.

Only seven COVID-19 patients in the district were hospitalized with no case under investigation.

Only six new cases were reported Monday throughout the district: one in Floyd County, four in Montgomery County, and one in Pulaski County. One case in Radford City was removed from the count, leaving a net of only five new cases throughout the district. Over the past seven days, only four new cases were reported in the district.

The ongoing count for Floyd County cases since the beginning of the pandemic is 878. Only 31 persons have been hospitalized. Twenty-three persons have died. 11,073 persons in Floyd County have been vaccinated, representing 36.4% of the population.

Giles County has experienced 1,312 cases since the pandemic's beginning with 51 of those requiring hospitalization. Twenty-two persons have died. 12,994 residents of Giles County have been vaccinated, which represents 37.2% of the county's total population.

With its much denser population, Montgomery County has seen higher figures all around since COVID's beginnings. The county has experienced 9,412 cases requiring 192 hospitalizations and resulting in 96 deaths. 77,980 residents have been vaccinated, 38.3% of the population.

Pulaski County has reported 2,890 cases, 127 hospitalizations, and 62 deaths. 25,329 residents or 36.3% of the county's population have been vaccinated.

Radford City has experienced 2,167 cases during the course of the pandemic with 40 hospitalizations and 19 deaths. 12,814 Radford City residents or 33.4% of the population have been vaccinated.

Across the health district, 37.3% of the total population has been vaccinated. More than 43.5% of NRV residents aged 16+ have been vaccinated.

People ages 12 to 15 are now eligible for the Pfizer vaccine. Anyone can walk into any Virginia Department of Health clinic for vaccination. Appointments are preferred, but are not required.

A vaccine clinic will be held Thursday, June 17, from 4 to 7 p.m. at the Pulaski Juneteenth Celebration. Regularly scheduled weekly vaccination clinics are available at Christiansburg Pharmacy on Thursdays from 4 to 7 p.m. and at the Christiansburg Farmers Market at the Christiansburg Recreation Center, also on Thursdays.

Virginia soldier from World War II accounted for

The Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency (DPAA) announced Wednesday that Army Staff Sgt. Raymond C. Blanton, 19, of Richmond, Va., killed during World War II, has been accounted for.

In October 1944, Blanton was assigned to Company C, 1st Battalion, 60th Infantry Regiment, 9th Infantry Division. His unit was engaged in battle with German forces near Germeter, Germany, in the Hürtgen Forest, when he was killed in action on Oct. 14. Blanton could not be recovered because of the ongoing fighting.

Following the end of the war, the American Graves Registration Command was tasked with investigating and recovering missing American personnel in Europe. They conducted several investigations in the Hürtgen area between 1946 and 1950 but were unable to recover or identify Blanton's remains. He was declared non-recoverable in 1951.

While studying unresolved American losses in the Hürtgen area, a DPAA historian determined that one of two sets of unidentified remains, designated X-4491 Neuville and X-4492 Neuville, recovered comingled from the Raffelsbrand sector of the Hürtgen Forest near Germeter in 1946, possibly belonged to Blanton. The remains, which had been buried in Ardennes American Cemetery in 1950, were disinterred in September 2017 and sent to the DPAA laboratory at Offutt Air Force Base, Nebraska, for identification.

To identify Blanton's remains, scientists from DPAA used dental and anthropological analysis and circumstantial evidence. Additionally, scientists from the Armed Forces Medical Examiner System used mitochondrial DNA (mtDNA) analysis.

Blanton's name is recorded on the Walls of the Missing at Netherlands American Cemetery, an American Battle Monuments Commission site in Margraten, the Netherlands, along with the others still missing from World War II. A rosette will be placed next to his name to indicate he has been accounted for.

Blanton will be buried July 1, 2021 in his hometown.

OBITUARY

Horton, Lois Louise Lorton

Lois Louise Lorton Horton, beloved mother, grandmother, wife, daughter, friend, and colleague was born in Radford on Mar. 15, 1937, to William David Lorton, Jr., and Beulah Hanks Lorton.

As a child, she attended McGuffey Elementary School and later graduated from Radford High School in the Class of 1955 with many lifelong friends.

Always a loving caregiver, she became a nurse and received training at Washington, D.C., General Hospital. During her time in training, a snowstorm disrupted access to the city. The inauguration of President Kennedy was scheduled to take place, but many of the people who were to attend could not arrive. A friend of hers was dating a marine, and those young men were told to get to the inauguration ball because they needed people. Mom was fortunate to be able to attend and that event was a happy memory.

Lois worked at St. Albans Psychiatric Hospital for 40 years as a nurse and later as the director of in-service education, helping to keep the hospital staff trained and up-to-date to best serve the patients. The members of the St. Albans team were her extended family, and those relationships continued for the rest of her life.

She was married to Raymond Crockett Horton, and they were happy together even though they only had a few short years before his untimely passing.

She was a lifelong member of First Christian Church/Unity Christian Church in Radford. Over the years she helped with numerous projects, including the creation of Chrismon ornaments for the Christmas tree and working with youth group members.

She loved to cross-stitch and made thousands of ornaments, which she gave to her friends and family. Many of these adorn their holiday trees each year.

Lois was in every facet of her life a caregiver. She raised two children, Beth and David, as a single mother while working full time in an era when the support for single parents was much less available.

She helped in the care of her father and stepmother during the final years of their lives.

She helped care for her grandsons, Ryan and Matthew, who were the major joy in her life over the last 25 years. Her boys always made her smile.

Her neighbors and friends were dear in her heart for all of her days, and even when she was no longer able to live in the house on Kirkwood Drive, she thought of them and stayed in touch as she could.

A celebration of her life will be held at 12 noon on Tuesday, June 15, 2021, at Unity Christian Church with the Rev. Gina Rhea officiating. In lieu of flowers, please make contributions to Unity Christian Church, 400 Tyler Ave., Radford, VA 24141.

The Horton family is in the care of Mullins Funeral Home & Crematory. www.mullinsfuneralhome.com.

Virginia Tech concrete canoe team breaks a 16-year streak by winning regional competition

Concrete is heavy, which makes it strong and durable, so it's considered a top choice as a material for construction projects, but not an ideal choice for a canoe because it sinks easily.

Each year, the Virginia Tech Concrete Canoe team takes on that challenge – of making something easily sinkable float – to build a canoe that will not only stay afloat, but can be raced in water. And this year the team took home the championship in regional competition for the first time in 16 years.

During each competition cycle, the team designs, constructs, and races a 20-foot-long canoe made entirely out of concrete. The team spends about nine months designing the canoe's hull, concrete mixture design, and mold form. Once the structural properties are identified, they test the concrete for its compressive, tensile, and flexural strength.

In the spring semester, the team forms the canoe. Concrete is hand placed and allowed to cure for 28 days. Normally, the team then takes the canoe to the regional competition where they are judged on a technical paper, presentation, canoe appearance, and racing times.

Due to the pandemic, the 2021 competition was entirely virtual, which means the team did not get to race their canoe. Instead, the team was tasked with submitting only their proposal for the development of a standard canoe, said team captain Jessica Viehman.

This included many of the same initial steps of performing structural calculations and mixture design calculations, but kept the team competing solely in theory.

"The team then developed a complete design report with the projected schedule and construction techniques that we presented via Zoom," said Viehman.

By winning the regional competition, Virginia Tech will be competing in the national competition hosted virtually by the American Society of Civil Engineers on June 25-27. The winner from each of the 20 conferences will join to compete at the national competition.

"It was nice to be able to use what I'm learning in my classes to participate in a hands-on experience that relates to my future career," said team captain Nawras Zalzal.

Virginia Tech's team was smaller this year, with about 10 active members. Usually, there are up to 50 team members that are in-involved in all stages of the design and building process, but COVID-19 and the virtual work format made it difficult to recruit new members. Despite the smaller team, all of the team members agreed that the most worthwhile part of the experience was seeing their hard work pay off with a win in the regional conference.

"The most rewarding part was being able to virtually celebrate with my teammates," said team captain Zachary Hill. "Bringing the win back to Virginia Tech after 16 years made the late nights, lack of sleep, and hard work worth it."

In addition to the concrete canoe victory, a number of civil and environmental engineering students were honored with awards during the conference. Jessica Viehman won the 2021 ASCE VA Section Thompson Award Winner, which is given to an outstanding student in the state. Kelly Crocker and Rachel Johnson won the 2021 ASCE VA Section Scholarship. Delaney Snead won the Marr Technical Paper and the Hardy Cross Technical Presentation, which comes with the coveted Hardy Cross trophy, which will be held by Virginia Tech until the competition in 2022.

Tuesday virtual event to present vision for invigorating food, ag systems

At a virtual event at 9 a.m. on June 15, the Global Agricultural Productivity Initiative, or GAP Initiative, at the Virginia Tech College of Agriculture and Life Sciences will present a vision for invigorating food and agricultural systems. Experts working with large- and small-scale farmers around the world will share their perspectives.

During the next 30 years, the world's population will grow larger and more prosperous. Demand will soar for agricultural goods, especially high-value products, such as meat, milk, fruits and vegetables, timber, oilseeds, and bioenergy.

Agricultural productivity growth is imperative for meeting the needs of a growing world while addressing threats to human and environmental well-being, including climate change and food insecurity.

"Investments in productivity growth in agriculture will help us achieve sustainable agriculture and food security, even in the face of climate change," said Alan Grant, dean of VT's College of Agriculture and Life Sciences.

In agriculture, productivity is measured as total factor productivity. When more crops, livestock, and aquaculture products are produced using the same amount, or less, land, labor, fertilizer, machinery, feed, and livestock, that is an increase in total factor productivity.

To sustainably produce the food and agricultural products needed in 2050, total factor productivity needs to grow by an average of 1.73 percent per year.

"The most recent data show that we are consistently falling short of that target," said Ann Steensland, leader of the GAP Initiative.

Increased greenhouse gas emissions, food and nutrition insecurity, and land erosion are just some of the potential consequences of not meeting growth targets. Small-scale farmers and low-income households are particularly vulnerable.

"To accelerate this growth, we need to ensure that all farmers, especially those at smaller scales, have access to science-based innovation and information," said associate dean Tom Thompson.

A panel of GAP Initiative partners will discuss this challenge:

He Lives

Read Job 17:1 through 20:29

"I know that my Redeemer lives, and that in the end he will stand upon the earth" (Job 19:25).

Job listened to the second speech by Bildad. He then replied to his friends, asking them how long he would be tormented him by their words. He presented a long list of what had happened to him, including being berated by his friends and losing his family and fortune. But after this discourse, he said he still held true to the belief in the Almighty God. Not only did Job believe in God's existence, but Job believed that he would stand in God's presence someday.

consequences we experience, we should still believe in the sovereignty of God. When we are in the middle of a difficult time and we don't see an easy way out of our struggle, do we ask where God is instead of trusting Him in faith? When we have questions, we have to cry out to God and, with sheer faith, believe that whatever the outcome He will walk with us and see us through our valley.

Seltz, James "Jim" Monroe

James "Jim" Monroe Seltz, 79, of Radford, passed away on Saturday, June 5, 2021.

He was preceded in death by his parents, Lacy and Mae Seltz, and a daughter, Regina Mae Seltz.

Jim is survived by his wife, LaRhonda "Lynn" Seltz; daughters Renee Seltz Honeycutt and Rhonda Gail Seltz; a grandson, Jordan Seltz; a stepson, Kearsley "Bart" Lewis and wife Leslie, and grandchildren Kelly, Dillon, and Kristen; a stepdaughter, Kerry Lewis Bennett and husband Chuck Bennett, and grandchildren Kaiden and Layla. He is also survived by his sister, Doris and husband Clarence Ratcliffe; sister Billie Joyce and husband Don Gilbert; brother Jack Seltz and wife Frances; and a multitude of loving relatives and friends.

Jim spent the last years in a long battle with Lewy body disease and Alzheimer's, but he would not want that to define his life. He loved the Lord and all of God's creatures. He would strike up a friendly conversation with anyone and was always eager to help others. His sense of humor never left him, and he laughed often and knew everyone he loved till the end.

The great outdoors fed his love of life. As an avid fisherman, Jim especially enjoyed the waters of the New River. He appreciated all creatures both small and large and was always in awe of Mother Nature. He loved his furry, four legged canine friends, and their constant companionship kept him busy and happy after retirement. He loved family gatherings, all types of music, and scenic rides in the car. Most of all, Jim was passionate about the love of his life, Lynn. They enjoyed many Friday nights watching movies, eating pizza, and laughing together. They made many fun-filled and loving memories over the course of their 28-year marriage.

The family extends a special thank-you to all the caregivers from Good Samaritan Hospice for their extraordinary care and Chaplain Todd Triplett for his devotion to and guidance of Jim's family.

The family received friends on Thursday, June 10, 2021, from 1 p.m. until 2 p.m. followed by a service at 2 p.m. at Mullins Funeral Home, located at 120 Main St. Radford, with Chaplain Triplett officiating.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests making a contribution; please consider Good Samaritan Hospice, Advanced Illness Care Hospice or CAST for kids Foundation.

Online condolences may be made at Mullins Funeral Home & Crematory; Radford.

Stade, James

James Stade, 72, of Blacksburg, died May 30, 2021.

Jim was born in Chicago on Feb. 12, 1949 to the late John and June Stade.

He was a carpenter, a teacher, a preacher, and a newspaper delivery man who loved people with a whole heart. He was a son, a brother, a cousin, a husband, a father, and an uncle who was affectionately known as "Grumpy" to his grandchildren.

He grew up in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and attended Concordia Teachers College in River Forest, Ill., and Reformed Theological Seminary in Jackson, Miss.

Jim worked long and hard. He learned carpentry from his father and then became a minister in churches from Alabama to Ontario, Canada, and finally in Virginia and West Virginia. He delivered the Roanoke Times for more than 16 years, making friends with fellow delivery people and customers, all before his day jobs. He was an avid newspaper subscriber and reader. He also supported his family by working in construction and home renovation. He taught in several schools and ministered in five churches beginning in 1988.

He was a humble man who preferred the underdog in every situation. He loved Jesus and practiced an open, inclusive Christ-like faith. He was quick to recite John 3:16. He was known for simple acts of kindness and care, from mowing his neighbors' lawns, to leaving surprise Carol Lee Donuts on many a front porch.

Jim made his grandchildren laugh easily. He was sustained by friendships with the community members he encountered every day, from church, to the grocery store, to the county waste site. He loved animals and welcomed dogs, cats, and other adopted creatures into his home over the years, including Heidi the cat who curled up beside him until the end.

Jim treasured his family through his entire life despite distances. He carried them in his heart. He loved his remarkable wife of 43 years, Sue, the most. He is remembered for boisterous displays of affection for her such as shouting, "My Lover!" as she walked in the door from work. He liked to compare sunrises to sunsets with her every day. He could dabble beautifully on the piano and the harmonica. In the last few years, he sent quirky, daily text messages of "...love...!" to his family and friends on his flip phone. He doubtlessly looked forward to seeing his beloved parents again.

Jim is survived by his wife Sue Stade, of Blacksburg; brother JT and sister-in-law Marion Stade; son Trevor, and daughter-in-law, Jessica Stade; daughters Chrystie, Natalie, and Laura; sons-in-law Scott Greges and Kahlil Detrich; and grandchildren Isla and Avery Stade, Claire Greges, and Roan and Starlie Detrich.

A private ceremony with family will take place at home per Jim's wishes. In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made to the Rescue Mission of Roanoke.

Wright, Mary Elizabeth Brooks Jeffries

Mary Elizabeth Brooks Jeffries Wright (Mary J) was born Aug. 31, 1932 in Essex County, Va. to Lewis and Netta Brooks. She was the seventh of eight children.

When her mother died in childbirth after the eighth child, Mary, at the age of three, was taken in and later adopted by William and Irene Jeffries. One of her greatest joys was reuniting with her birth family when she was grown. She was so proud of all her siblings and the wonderful people they were.

When Mary J graduated from the Smith-deal-Massey Business College in Richmond in the early 1950's, one of her first jobs at the Edsel Ford Motor Company was short-lived because the flashy vehicles weren't popular, didn't sell well, and the company closed.

Mary and her husband, Shipley, had two sweet red-headed boys, Roland and Dennis. She doted on them and sacrificed to send both to Virginia Tech on her husband's bread man's income. When the children were in elementary school, she and her lifelong friend, Myrtle Owens, put together a Christian singing group with their combined children. Mary played the piano and they rehearsed the young singers. Their little group sang at their own and area churches for years.

For decades, Mary J worked the voting polls in Richmond alongside her neighborhood co-worker, best-selling author, David Baldacci.

Mary J served in several capacities at her home church, Shepherd's United Methodist in King and Queen County, Va. She was a pioneer in founding the JOY (Jesus, Others, You) service club in King & Queen County. This organization of community-spirited ladies continued to do good works in the area for many years.

She was preceded in death by her birth parents, Lewis and Netta Davis Brooks; adoptive parents William and Irene Jeffries; husband Roland S Wright, Sr; son Dennis Ray Wright; brothers Dr. George W. Brooks and wife, Beryl, Henry Brooks, Alvin Brooks, Irvin and Florence Brooks, Floyd Brooks, Henly Brooks, and a sister, Nell.

She is survived by her son, Roland S. Wright, Jr., and wife, Mary H. Wright; grandsons Chris Wright and his wife, Mandy; and Andrew Wright; great-grandsons Austin and Aiden Wright, sisters-in-law Suzanne Brooks, Margaret Brooks, and Virginia Brooks; many nieces and nephews; and special friends, Myrtle Owens, Jerry and Dee Dee Becker, Marie Collier, and many church family members.

Funeral services will be conducted today, Saturday, June 12, 2021, at 10 a.m. in the First Church of God, Dublin with Pastor Mike Hudson officiating. The family will receive friends from 9-10 a.m. prior to the service at the church. Burial will be Sunday, June 13, 2021, at 2 p.m. at Shepherd's United Methodist Church Cemetery, St. Stephens Church, Va. Arrangements by McCoy Funeral Home, Blacksburg.

Former NFL player to serve as VT's assistant director of player personnel

BLACKSBURG – Virginia Tech head coach Justin Fuente announced Wednesday that Kyshoen Jarrett has returned to Virginia Tech and will serve as assistant director of player personnel. Jarrett fills the post held the past year by Corey Fuller, who has accepted a position in the personnel department of the NFL's Carolina Panthers.

A team captain for the Hokies in 2014, Jarrett was a sixth-round selection of Washington in the 2015 NFL Draft.

"We are pleased to welcome Kyshoen and his family back to Blacksburg," Fuente said. "Kyshoen possesses a great appreciation for what it takes for a young person to excel in all facets of their collegiate experience at Virginia Tech. Kyshoen's NFL background, combined with his football acumen and passion for our program make him a great fit for this position. Just as importantly, his history as a mentor and his ability to understand and connect with young people will be a great resource for us."

Jarrett led the Hokies with 88 tackles (52 solo) and three interceptions as a senior in 2014. He saw duty in a total of 53 games in a Tech uniform, finishing his collegiate career with 249 tackles (155 solo), five interceptions (48 yards) and 8.5 tackles for loss, and 26 punt returns for 324 yards, including a 94-yard touchdown. He played in all 16 games (six starts) for Washington in 2015, racking up 58 tackles (39 solo) before an injury concluded his playing career.

The Tannersville, Penn., native coached defensive backs at Rock Ridge High School in Ashburn, Va., during the 2016-17 seasons. He then returned to Washington's NFL franchise as a defensive intern in 2018 before serving as a defensive quality control coach/assistant defensive backs coach in 2019. Jarrett has most recently worked as the director of athletics at a middle school and high school in Concord, N.C.

Jarrett graduated from Virginia Tech with a degree in human development and family studies with minors in sociology and communications.

RU looking for new softball coach

After four strong leading Radford's softball team to finishes of .500 or better against Big South competition, head coach Hope Creasy has decided to step down.

"I am thankful that (Director of Athletics) Robert (Lineburg) and the administration provided me the opportunity and trusted me to lead this program that I love so much," Creasy said. "The game of softball has been great to me, as has Radford University. I will forever be grateful for the time I have had as a player, assistant coach, and head coach. The friendships forged, relationships built, lessons learned, and memories made will forever be a part of me and who I am."

The 2021 season presented many challenges as the softball team navigated through a load-schedule of 54 games. The Highlanders finished strong, winning six of their last nine games that included winning a crucial regular-season series finale against Winthrop for the final spot in the Big South tournament. Radford advanced to the tournament semifinals before falling to USC Upstate.

"We wish Hope Creasy the very best of luck as she steps away from coaching," Lineburg said. "Hope will always be one of the greatest Highlander softball student-athletes to have ever played at Radford. She has also excelled as an assistant coach and as the head coach of the Highlanders. We hate to see Hope depart but I am certain she will have great success in any endeavor she chooses. She is a first-class person and has done a tremendous job as our head coach."

The Christiansburg native's first season came in the spring of 2018, and since then she has coached five Big South All-Conference selections and four Radford University softball's Hope Creasy is stepping down after four years as head coach.

All-Academic honorees that included the 2020 and 2021 Scholar-Athletes of the Year. On the field, she accumulated a 96-88 record through three full seasons and the shortened 2020 season.

In her first season at the helm, she guided her team to a 36-19 record. The 36 wins were the second-most for a first-year head coach and three of those victories came against ACC foes and two commonwealth rivals (Virginia and Virginia Tech). Radford would reach the Big South championship game that season after a thrilling 12-inning semifinal win over Longwood.

Year two at the helm presented more success for the Highlanders as they made another deep run in the Big South Tournament making it to the quarterfinals after two wins over third-seeded Campbell.

Radford was off to a strong 13-3 start in 2020 before the season was cancelled due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

Creasy's softball career has been rooted in the New River Valley ever since starting her collegiate career at Radford in 2006. She was a four-year starter for the program, leading the Highlanders to back-to-back Big South regular-season and conference tournament titles in 2009 and 2010. As a senior in 2010, she was named Big South Woman of the Year and was a first-team all-Mid-Atlantic region selection and an ESPN The Magazine/CoSIDA All-District second-team honoree. After coaching stints at Georgia Southern and Louisburg College, Creasy returned to Radford as an assistant coach in 2015 before being promoted to the head role in 2017.

A national search for the program's next head coach will begin immediately.
