Jimmy Fortune made his annual trek to the city as the headliner of the musical line-up with several other performers entertaining the sizable crowd throughout the day, including The Castaways, Neal Wymys, Wade Hayes, Faithful Praise, and Glen Shelton.

The night was capped off by a fireworks show that could be seen throughout the city, sponsored, as it is each year, by Third Securities.

VT Cadet Corps leadership and military science building construction project underway

A virtual groundbreaking ceremony for the building took place in June, featuring Maj. Gen. Randal Fullhart, commandant of cadets, and other university leaders.

Virginia Tech's Upper Quad will soon feature a showcase building for the Corps of Cadets.

Demolition has started to pave the way for the Corps Leadership and Military Science Building, a project many years in the making, which has drawn support from numerous generous corps alumni.

The three-story, 75,000-gross-square-foot building is expected to be complete in 2023. It will bring together the corps staff and the university's ROTC programs now dispersed across several locations and will include custom space for the Corps Museum.

The building will also be a hub for the university's Integrated Security Education and Research Center, a new facility designed to blend science, technology, policy, and ethics across homeland security, national security, and cybersecurity domains.

At its June meeting, the university's Board of Visitors approved the naming of nearly 30 spaces within the building for donors whose generosity has helped to bring this project to fruition.

I can think of no other building where every single element has a tie to an alumnus or friend of the corps," said Maj. Gen. Randal Fullhart, commandant of cadets. "When we say, 'It wouldn't be here except for all of you,' it is really, really true. And we are most grateful."

A virtual groundbreaking ceremony for the building took place on June 22, featuring Fullhart and other university leaders.

Radford enhances 911 services and emergency notification with Smart911

RADFORD – Public safety officials in the City of Radford have announced that Smart911 is now available to all individuals and families.

Smart911 is a free service that allows individuals to create a safety profile for their households that can include any information they may want 911 call takers and first responders to have in the event of an emergency. If they need to dial 911, their safety profile will immediately display on the call taker's screen, thus saving critical seconds and even minutes in response to the emergency. Coupled with Alert, individuals can receive notifications on potentially hazardous situations involving weather and traffic and other emergencies.

"Smart911 saves critical time in an emergency when seconds count," said Jenni Wilder, the City of Radford's Public Information Officer. "The key information provided in a Smart911 Safety Profile enables us to know exactly where we are going and who we are looking for if a child goes missing or there is a house fire. Those details can help us respond faster and more efficiently. Sending notifications through Alert allows us to keep the public informed of emergencies and how to be prepared and stay safe."

When a citizen makes an emergency call, the safety profile is automatically displayed to the 911 call taker to send the right response teams to the correct location with the correct information. Responders can be aware of many details they would not have known previously, and now fire crews can arrive at a house fire knowing how many people live in the home and the locations of the bedrooms, EMS can be advised of allergies or specific medical conditions, and police can have the photo of a missing child in seconds rather than minutes or hours.

Individuals can also opt-in for Alert, which allows citizens to receive timely and actionable emergency alerts via email, text or voice message on their cell phones. Individuals decide how much information they want to provide when they sign up, and the information is stored on the Smart911 secure online system. They can also identify when and how they are alerted and communicated with before, during, and after emergencies.

"Citizens will receive notifications that will improve safety in our county and help inform residents of potentially lifesaving actions they may need to take in an emergency," said Wilder. "The information in Smart911 safety profiles and the emergency notifications allows both residents and first responders to be better informed in an emergency situation."

With Smart911 and Alert, the community is more aware and better prepared in the event of an emergency. Smart911 enables citizens to link both home and work addresses to mobile phones, which can be passed on to responders in the field for a more detailed, rapid response.

Radford University Provost, academic VP named Interim President

RADFORD - Radford University has named Carolyn "Lyn" Ringer Lepre, as interim president until a national search is completed to choose a successor to former President Brian O. Hemphill.

Lepre previously served as the university's Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs, dual roles she has held since July 1, 2020.

In a video message to the community, Lepre said she is looking forward to continuing the positive path of the university President Hemphill's leadership offered.

"I am excited and ready to serve this great university as interim president," she said. "This is an exciting time to be a Highlander. We are confident moving forward. Dr. Hemphill leaves this university positioned for success, and I am committed to continuing that forward momentum."

As the university's chief academic officer and its vice president for academic affairs, Lepre served as a member of Radford's senior leadership team and reported directly to President Hemphill.

According to the Radford University announcement released when Lepre was named the provost, she is a "proven administrator and respected scholar," who came to Radford after "more than a decade-long and highly successful tenure at Marist College, a selective comprehensive liberal arts institution with locations on the banks of the historic Hudson River in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., on Fifth Avenue in Manhattan, N.Y., and in classical Florence, Italy."

Lyn Lepre has been named Radford University's interim president, pending the designation of a successor to former President Brian O. Hemphill.

Before Marist College, Lepre was an assistant professor at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, and at California State University where she worked for various national publications and media outlets. She has a Ph.D. in mass communication from the University of Florida, an M.S. in journalism from Ohio University and a B.A. in English and journalism from Miami University.

Lack of mill labor, truckers contributes to soaring lumber prices

When your date asks to go somewhere expensive, visit the local lumberyard.

While timber market specialists joked about the astronomical price of lumber at a recent Virginia Cooperative Extension webinar, they also explained what is driving the spike and offered insights for Virginia timber owners expecting a cut of those profits.

Neil Clark, Southeast District forestry Extension agent in Southampton County, presented data and anecdotal evidence behind the soaring lumber prices. He said a lack of mill labor and truckers has created bottlenecks in the lumber market, leading to the price spike.

"You can produce lumber flat out, but if you don't have anyone to truck and haul that lumber out of your mill to the distribution centers for retail, you're still stuck," Clark said.

This leads to less lumber availability even if there is plenty of timber.

"When demand is extreme and supply is low, the price goes crazy and increases quite a bit," he said.

But why is demand so high after decades of steady movement in the timber market? Clark said pandemic-related stress on the supply chain is likely the reason.

"When people started realizing it wasn't just going to be a two-week break, spouses started breaking out the honey-do lists, and the do-it-yourself folks kicked into gear," Clark explained. "That brought a good spike there in summer 2020."

Housing starts are up significantly, further squeezing the lumber supply and increasing the cost of real estate by an average of $36,000 for a new single-family home.

This national trend may spur Virginia forest owners to sell their timber now, but Clark said they need to look at market conditions close to home.

"Wood is local," Clark said. "Transportation costs are high because 50% of logs are water. It almost doesn't matter what the market is doing nationwide. What is the market doing 25 miles from your house? Even if the price is high, if you're not in range of a mill, you lose."

Clark reported the number of U.S. timber mills has declined as one new mill can displace about 15 older ones.

Bill Osl, chair of the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation Forestry Advisory Committee, said forestland owners should do their research before making harvest decisions.

"Many resources are available, including forest consultants who can provide you with an estimate of the board-feet, quality, and value to expect for your stand," he said. "Loggers and local mills will offer quotes by board-foot. And that research has to be done to make sure you get a fair value for your individual stand."

VT travel expert: Hard-hit by pandemic, business travel is bouncing back

"We are happy to see a consistent and steep increase across all forms of travel in the past two months. As business travel recovers, companies are realizing the need to balance in-person travel with online and virtual forms of meetings," says Nancy Gard McGehee, professor and former department head of the Howard Feiertag Hospitality and Tourism Management program in the Pamplin College of Business at Virginia Tech. "While the online format has its appeal for cost-efficiency, folks are realizing that sometimes much gets lost in translation," she says.

McGehee believes in the value of what happens before and after in-person meetings: "In-person consensus building, smaller break-out sessions, clarifications that lead to closing deals, and the opportunity to focus solely on the issue at hand and not be distracted by email, texts, colleagues, and family if you are working from home."

She points to September and beyond for a further uptick in business travel.

"We are seeing our industry partners planning and advertising meetings and conferences starting in the fall," she says. "The rest of the corporate world is following suit shortly thereafter. While the COVID vaccine is clearing the way for safe travel, it will take time for companies' budgets to strengthen to the point that they can travel."

One of the most encouraging signs, said McGehee, is the impact on hiring and salaries for those entering the hospitality business.

"I am getting daily requests for our students for internships," the professor said. "Our grads are turning down positions and accepting offers much higher than in previous years. Even last year's graduates had a whopping 93 percent placement rate."

Professor Nancy Gard McGehee's research focuses on rural tourism development at both the domestic and international levels.

Business travel has been among the U.S. industries hardest hit by the pandemic, but there have been incredible improvements just in the past two months, according to Virginia Tech travel expert Nancy McGehee.

Protecting species on the move within 13-state Appalachian region

Sunset at the New River Gorge Bridge in Victor, West Virginia. As temperatures and sea levels rise as a result of climate change, flora and fauna are migrating into new and unknown lands to survive. Some animal species will have to move farther north to stay cool, while trees and plants will have to increase the breadth of their seed distribution to ensure the success for generations to come.

And just as they are adapting to change, our ideas of how we successfully engage in conservation needs to as well.

With a grant from the National Science Foundation's Dynamics of Integrated Socio-Environmental Systems program, an interdisciplinary team of researchers from Virginia Tech; the University of Tennessee, Knoxville; and the University of Southern California are helping conservation agencies and other stakeholders across state and local boundaries to rethink biodiversity protection approaches for this new era of climate change.

"Conservation efforts have often traditionally been established around this notion that species exist within certain places and not others," said Todd Schenk, an associate professor in the Urban Affairs and Planning Program of the School of Public and International Affairs at Virginia Tech. "It has become clear that that is not true anymore, if it ever was. We are reaching the point where climate change and other global change drivers are changing ecosystems at rapid rates."

With this project, the team of researchers will be zooming in on one of the most biologically diverse regions in the temperate world: the central and southern Appalachian Mountains. The region will serve as a test-case landscape for the development of a more dynamic vision of conservation.

Within the lower 48, Appalachian ecosystems stand out for their incredible biodiversity. Covering an area of 737,000 square miles and home to tens of thousands of species, these mountain ecosystems have played, and will continue to play, critical roles in enabling species movements as the climate changes.

The Appalachian Mountains transect 13 states. Taking into account all of the federal agencies, state agencies, tribes, and non-profit organizations that share responsibility for their protection, the Appalachian Mountain range is a prime example of the management challenges that will arise as species face new, growing threats.

Schenk said that there is one issue that is well worth noting: our state lines. Long ago, state borders were drawn largely without considering certain ecological features.

"Our boundaries are rarely drawn on the basis of ecosystems, like river basins or watersheds, to begin with," said Schenk. "If anything, we have done the opposite. Many states have rivers that serve as boundaries. Of course, we didn't draw political boundaries accounting for the ecology of regions. We drew them for other reasons."

For those in charge of environmental policy, planning, and management, these artificial boundaries become all the more problematic. Environmental changes are going to inevitably cross these boundaries, which necessitates significant coordination across those boundaries.

"Much that we do as a society to protect species is ultimately tied to fixed geographies," said Paul Armsworth, an ecologist at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville, and principal investigator on the project. "We protect special places on the landscape in nature reserves or ask state agencies to lead on protecting species found within their borders. But, we are going to need much more flexible and dynamic approaches if we are to continue to protect species as climate change accelerates."

Researchers believe this kind of collective thinking is going to require cultural and institutional changes within natural resource management agencies and conservation NGOs, and facilitating such changes takes time.

To explore these issues further, the team is planning to directly engage agency officials and others who are responsible for integrating climate change into State Wildlife Action Plans (SWAPs). With each state adhering to its own plan, coordination to tackle wicked problems, like climate change, can be difficult. Coordination is essential.

The team is also seeking knowledge from those who have cared for the land long before Europeans arrived. Various Indigenous tribes inhabit the central and southern Appalachian Mountain ranges, and the team will be learning from them, while helping them enhance their management approaches in the face of a changing climate.

"They are critical partners in this project given their longer-term relationships and stewardship with the land," said Schenk.

With the blending of various kinds of research expertise and experts from different organizations, the team is confident this new project can really make a difference to future conservation in the Appalachian region and beyond.

Virginia Department of Transportation road watch

ROUTE 11 BRIDGE DECK REPLACEMENT - Work is underway on Route 11 southbound to replace the bridge deck over the Norfolk Southern Railroad. The bridge is located .4 miles north of the intersection with Route 748 (Big Spring Drive) and .4 mile south of the intersection with Route 603 (North Fork Road). The left lane of both Route 11 north and south is closed with a detour in place until the completion of the project. Once in place, the detour will re-route Route 11 south traffic through the left lane of Route 11 north, limiting each direction to a single lane. The expected completion date is November 2021.

TRAFFIC SWITCH: A new traffic pattern is in place detouring Route 11 southbound traffic through the left lane of Route 11 northbound between the intersections above, limiting each direction to a single lane.

ROUTE 636 BRIDGE REPLACEMENT AT SENECA HOLLOW - Work has begun replacing the bridge on Route 636 over the Roanoke River at Seneca Hollow. A detour will be in place. The detour will restrict access to Route 460 at Seneca Hollow and will require travelers to enter/exit Route 460 at Friendship Road near Wheeling Hollow. The project is expected to be completed in Fall 2021.

ROUTE 685 TURN LANE CONSTRUCTION - Contractors are constructing several turn lane and road improvements on Route 685 (Prices Fork Road) between Route 1145 (Stratford View Drive) and Route 654 (Brookfield Road). Motorists should expect daily shoulder closures with intermittent lane closures controlled by flagging forces. Current work hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., but are subject to change as construction progresses. Work is expected to last through Summer 2021.

overhead lines along a general corridor alignment following Route 114 (Peppers Ferry), Route 460 Business (Franklin Street) and Route 11/460 (Roanoke Road). The work zone will span from the Pulaski/Montgomery county line to the Montgomery/Roanoke county line. In addition, various side roads will be impacted by intermittent closures for crossings. Motorists should expect shoulder closures and lane closures for travel in both directions. Intermittent full closures of the roads will be required for periods lasting no longer than 15 minutes. Work hours are scheduled for 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. daily. Advance warning for weekend work involving closures of primary highways on weekend mornings from 6 a.m. to 10 a.m. will be provided via message boards once scheduled. Work is scheduled to last until Fall 2021.

INTERSTATE 81 SAFETY IMPROVEMENTS AT S-CURVES IN BOTETOURT COUNTY - A project to improve the S-curves along southbound I-81 in Botetourt County between mile markers 167.4 and 169.5 is underway. This project will enhance safety and improve vehicle traction. Work includes repaving the travel lanes, applying new pavement markers and installing underground pavement drains. Nighttime lane closures will be in place and the speed limit will be reduced to 60 mph in the work zone. ## Into the Big House

At my age, the future is necessarily considerably shorter than my past, so I spend some time rummaging around in the attic of my long ago.

I've noticed that as I've gotten older I might not be able to remember where I left my wallet ten minutes, but I can recall something that happened five decades ago. One of those distant incidents is a trip I once made to a local prison.

I recall being slightly unsettled when heavy iron doors clanged shut behind me.

Concertina wire coiled atop a chain link fence like some loopy silver snake.

The people closest to me wore blue uniforms and carried side arms. Loaded, I presumed.

I was in the Big House. My sins and crimes had finally caught up to me; the truth about my secret life had finally come out.

Actually, I was in prison back decades ago when my wife and I were living in a wonderful little town called Hawkinsville in Pulaski County (Yes, Virginia, they have one of those in middle Georgia, too.) I was on the grounds of the Pulaski State Women's Prison, but I didn't have reservations or plans for an extended stay no matter how hospitable the staff was.

Younger folks who have never seen the Paul Newman flick Cool Hand Luke will not know what I mean when I say that when I was in there I never heard anyone say, "What we have here is a failure to communicate."

The truth is the warden, a lady named Rose Williams, led me on a brief tour of the facility as part of a story for the local weekly newspaper I was working on. In that prison, the women at the time were working on garment manufacturing, not license plates.

The facility didn't have much in common with Hollywood's version of prisons, even the ones in the movies today. I didn't see any leg irons or a "hole" in which unruly prisoners could be put until they learned some manners or got some religion, though something called a lockdown was pointed out to me as a place where lessons were taught. I got the point.

I did peer into the prison laundry where awful things happen in many prison movies. (See Redemption, Shawshank.) This one, however, was neat and bustling.

I didn't hear anybody scream or shout. Not a voice was raised the whole time I was there except to talk over the rattle of machinery in the industry building.

The grounds were neat and clean. The prisoners were neat and clean. The buildings were neat and clean. Almost like a dormitory atmosphere. The operative word is "almost."

But everyone who was incarcerated wore the same khaki outfits, and they didn't walk up on or approach those who didn't wear khaki. They stopped at a respectful (read "safe") distance, faced the non-khaskians, and waited for instructions until they passed by.

This was clearly not a small college with the doors locked to keep the residents safe. It was a prison with the doors locked to keep the residents inside.

And no matter how courteous everyone was and no matter that no one was shackled or chained or abused -- those doors were still locked and those walls were still there.

My trip taught me that a manifestation of Hell can be neat, clean, and polite.

The author is a man of a certain age whose guided tour of the Pulaski State Women's Prison made an impression on him that still remains.

WalletHub: Virginia not among best states for teen-aged drivers

The personal finance website WalletHub last week released the results of its survey to identify the best and the worst states for teen-aged drivers, and Virginia showed up down the list at No. 28 among the 50 states.

As the website pointed out, getting a driver's license is considered a rite of passage in American culture. But this exciting coming-of-age has instead become a death sentence for thousands of teens each year. Motor-vehicle accidents are the second leading cause of death among the population aged 16 to 19, which also happens to be the age group with the highest risk of crashes.

The financial implications are staggering, too. In 2018, motor vehicle crashes involving 15- to 19-year-olds resulted in $4.8 billion in costs from medical expenses and work loss. That's not counting the costs of auto maintenance, insurance premiums, possible traffic citations and other vehicular incidents, expenses that can pile up over time.

To help parents ensure their teens' safety while also safeguarding their finances, WalletHub analyzed the teen-driving environment across three key dimensions: safety, economic environment, and driving laws in each of the 50 states and also used a collection of 23 metrics.

Among the metrics used in the safety dimension were teen driver facilities per 1,000 teens; vehicle miles traveled per capita; traffic indiscipline (a composite metric that measures incidents due to poor behavior such as phone use, speeding, aggressive acceleration, harsh braking, and poor turning.) teen 'under the influence' traffic violations per 1,000 teens; the share of teen drinking and driving; the share of teen texting/emailing while driving; and the share of teenagers age 18 to 24 who always or nearly always wear a seat belt.

Among the metrics used in the economic environment dimension were the maximum cost of speeding tickets; the maximum cost of red-light tickets; the maximum amount of first-offensive fines for not wearing seat belts; the premium increase after adding teen drivers to the parents' auto insurance policy; and the average cost of car repairs.

Among the metrics used by WalletHub in the driving laws dimension were the provision of teen drivers' graduated driver licensing program laws; the presence of occupant protection laws; the presence of impaired driving laws; the presence of distracted driving/texting while driving laws; the presence of red light and speeding camera laws; and the leniency toward DUI violations.

The ten states WalletHub determined to be the safest for teen drivers were New York, Oregon, Connecticut, Alaska, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Texas, Maryland, and New Jersey.

The ten states WalletHub determined to be the most dangerous for teen-age drivers in order to the worst were South Carolina, New Hampshire, Arkansas, Nebraska, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, South Dakota, Idaho, and Wyoming.

PETS-OF-THE-WEEK

Each Saturday the paper features pets from the Montgomery County Animal Care and Adoption Center (480 Cinnabar Road, Christiansburg). Those interested in adopting a pet can call 382-5795 or visit www.montgomerycountyva.gov/acac. Hours are 11 a.m.-6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 11 a.m.-4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Walk-ins are welcome.

Due to no fault of her own, Raven returned to the Animal Care and Adoption Center in late April. As one can imagine, it's impacting her level of happiness and she's a little blue. Raven would really love to get back to being her cheery self, and she'll do just about anything to find her furever home, including putting on a shark costume to show her fun personality. She is a sweet gal who enjoys being with her favorite people to get some affection. Raven would do best in a home where she is the only pet. She is house trained.

Say "Yo!" to Adrian. While he doesn't know much about Rocky movies or putting up a fight, he does know he is hoping for his purrfect match. Adrian is just a gentle senior cat looking for a loving home. He is laid back and calm and enjoys being petted. Adrian's adoption is sponsored by Montgomery County Friends of Animal Care and Control.

Former Highlander is chasing a dream on the U.S. paralympic track and field team

The United States Olympic and Paralympic Committee announced Thursday afternoon that Radford men's soccer alumnus Nick Mayhugh has been named to the United States Paralympic Track and Field team.

Mayhugh graduated from Radford University after a stellar career on the soccer field including time spent on the U.S. National Paralympic Soccer team that played on the international stage.

From Charlotte, Mayhugh set a new world record for the 100-meter event at the Paralympic Trials and a new American record for the 200-meter event, thus becoming a national champion in both events as well as being ranked first in the world for both events.

For Mayhugh, soccer was a lifesaver. He had always noticed something wrong with the left side of his body, thus he worked even harder to use just his right side on the soccer field.

"I never wanted to be looked at differently or treated differently because my norm was different," Mayhugh said. "I remember being in my room and spending hours trying to teach myself how to tie my shoes with both hands, teaching myself to walk without a limp and even getting dressed without falling over. Going into middle school, I made a decision not to tell anybody and to keep it to myself."

He initially had told his parents and medical personal, but no one really believed something was wrong because he was so active.

The problem made him work even harder. "I used to leave practices crying because I couldn't use my left foot as well as I could my right; I couldn't really feel it," he said. "I think my self-awareness played a huge part as to why I am in the position I am in today. I spent countless hours after practice working extra or at home with my brother working on my left foot and doing cone drills to make myself better technically."

He continued to work hard at the game he loved, and nothing was going to stop him from playing at a higher level. But in 2010 as a ninth grader, he suffered a grand mal seizure.

"I'll never forget the first words my doctor spoke," Mayhugh said. "I interrupted her and asked when I could play soccer again and she said she didn't think I would ever be able to play soccer again. She initially thought I had a brain tumor. I remember seeing the life get sucked out of my mom when she heard those words, but I knew that couldn't be true. It had to have been something else."

The family got a second opinion, but it still wasn't the message they wanted to hear.

Mayhugh was told he had a unique situation that medical personnel had not seen before. An MRI showed a grey circle on the right side of his brain called a dead spot.

Doctors said it was the result of a stroke in utero (before birth) or shortly after birth. Then all the dots sort of started to connect.

"The dead spot was just an inactive part of my brain and it made sense as to why I couldn't really feel my left side, my arm, fingers, my leg and my foot, everything. All the nerves and pathways were inactive," Mayhugh said. "I finally had an answer for everything, and my parents finally believed me and understood why I complained and said everything I did growing up. It was like a huge weight was lifted off my shoulders, a big sigh of relief because they finally believed me."

Doctors told him he would never play soccer ever again, but he was determined to continue the game he loved. He took the field on a youth team of the D.C. United Soccer Academy, and soccer seemed to be the only way he could prove to the world he was not different. After some coaxing of the coaching staff at Radford University, he walked on the men's team.

"I have always wanted to represent my country on the Olympic stage and Team USA gave me an opportunity to do that in track," Mayhugh said. "After soccer was cut from the (2020 Tokyo Summer) games, Team USA recruited me to run track, and I have dedicated everything mentally, physically, and emotionally to track and field. I wanted to challenge myself and see how far I can go. To see if I really can do it, and here I am, proving myself right and a lot of people wrong."

Because of his medical condition, he was invited to the U.S. Paralympic team camp for players with neurological conditions.

Mayhugh said representing his country in international play was an indescribable feeling.

During the Paralympic Games, track and field will be contested between August 27 and Sept. 5, 2021, at the Olympic Stadium. At the last paralympics in 2016 at Rio, the track and field team brought home 43 medals. The full 2020 U.S. Paralympic team roster will be announced in early August and will feature an estimated 250 athletes.

The success at the global level just keeps coming for Mayhugh as he has collected many accolades while playing for the U.S. Paralympic soccer team. In 25 national team games, he has scored 34 goals and notched 31 assists while playing for 1,384 minutes. In 2019, he was named the U.S. Soccer Player of the Year with a Disability.

He led the charge on offense for the fourth-ranked national team, its highest-ever world ranking. As a midfielder, he scored 19 goals in 11 games at the International Federation of Cerebral Palsy Football World Cup and the 2019 Para Pan-American Games.

Mayhugh continues to overcome many obstacles.

"It's a personal vendetta I have with myself," Mayhugh said. "I want to push myself to be the best athlete and person I can be. And until I do that, I will strive for what's next, what else can I do, how far can I really go? And no matter what it is, I know I'll be successful. It's just the way I'm wired."

Now he runs for the United States, Radford University and himself.

"I am going to Tokyo with my eyes set on gold. I am going to come home with two gold medals and two world records. Anything less is a failure to me," he said.

Hokies living Olympic Dream for Tokyo

Hokies Youssef Ramadan and Antani Ivanov have both qualified for the 2020 Olympic Games as have Hokie alum Marcel Lomnický and signee Barbora Malíková. Ramadan and Ivanov are the first two current student-athletes at Virginia Tech to head to Tokyo.

Ramadan swam an Olympic standard A-Cut time on Sunday, qualifying him for competition in the 100 butterfly for Egypt. The freshman is no stranger to the big stage in the 100-fly as he had his most notable performance of the season in the event.

At the 2021 ACC Championships, Ramadan had a record-breaking time in the 100 butterfly at 44.32, the third fastest time ever in the NCAA, the fastest time swum by a freshman in NCAA history, and the No.1-time in the country at that point in the season. Ramadan's time also broke the ACC record, the ACC meet record, the school record, and the Greensboro Aquatic Center record.

Ivanov qualified in both the 100 and 200 butterfly earlier this month for Bulgaria. Although this is Ivanov's first Olympic appearance, he has competed on the Bulgarian Junior National and National Team for several years.

This past season, Ivanov, a junior, earned a bronze medal in the 200 fly at the 2021 NCAA Championships back in March with a time of 1:39.26. Ivanov also took sixth place in the 100 fly, earning his second individual All-American honor of the season. At the ACC Championships he placed second in the 200 fly and third in the 100 fly.

Ramadan and Ivanov will be joined in Tokyo by Hokie alum, Ian Ho. Ho will compete in the 50-freestyle sprint for Hong Kong.

The 2020 Olympic Games will begin July 23 and will conclude on August 8 in Tokyo, Japan. Swimming competition will run from July 24 through August 1 at the Tokyo Aquatics Center in Koto City, Tokyo.

Hokie alum Marcel Lomnický and signee Barbora Malíková punched their tickets to the Tokyo Olympics at their respective national championships this weekend.

Lomnický '12, the two-time NCAA champion while at Virginia Tech, qualified for his third Olympic games in the hammer throw with a heave of 259' 10" (79.19m) to win the Slovakia National Championships.

Lomnický advanced to Tokyo having competed for Slovakia at both the London and Rio Olympics, finishing fifth at the 2016 games. The 33-year-old Slovak enters the Tokyo games ranked seventh in the world with his throw from this weekend.

Malíková delivered a blazing performance in the 400m, winning the national championship with a time of 51.23 seconds and securing her spot at the Olympic Games.

The 19-year-old won the gold medal at the 2017 World U18 Championships and the silver medal at the 2019 European Junior Championships, both in the 400m.

Malíková also owns the Czech Republic's U20 national record in the 800m at 2:03.14.
