

Radford City Council considers donation to save historic building

This circa-1929 building on East Main St., home to Radford's American Legion Howe Harvey Carper Post 30, is in disrepair and must have a new roof soon if it is to be saved. The city is considering a one-time donation to help the American Legion get the work done.

RADFORD – The Radford City Council is discussing the future of the historic building that is home to Radford's American Legion post and the possibility of donating funds to save the structure.

At the most recent Radford City Council meeting, held Monday, Aug. 23, council members discussed the possibility of funding the replacement of the building's roof and gutters and stopping further water damage. Doing that initial work will allow time for private fundraising, volunteer labor, and supplies to be gathered to complete the renovation of the building.

"There is water literally running down the walls," said council member Jessie Foster.

"This project is the first phase; it secures the building and ensures no more water penetration to the building," said Councilman Onassis Burress. "The longer we wait, the more damage that occurs."

The American Legion has gotten an estimate from a local company to complete the work for just under $46,000. Both Foster and Vice Mayor Naomi Huntington said they would like to see additional estimates before a final decision is made. Foster said she would try to get additional estimates before the city council

Fall convocation ceremony opens new academic year for RU faculty and staff

RADFORD – Radford University recently held its fall convocation, kicking off the new academic year and honoring several faculty members for their work.

It's a year "that promises to be full of excitement, positive momentum, and success," said interim Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs J. Orion Rogers, Ph.D.

The annual event, held Aug. 19 in Bondurant Auditorium, marks the beginning of the new academic year. Interim President Carolyn Ringer Lepre acknowledged a number of individuals and groups in attendance, including the newest faculty members to join the Radford family, who have come to the university from as far away as Oregon, Maine and Florida, as well as around Virginia.

"Thank you for choosing Radford; we are so grateful that you are here," Lepre said.

The interim president also greeted and thanked City of Radford Mayor David Horton and City Manager David Ridpath, as well as the Radford University Foundation, "for their support of the university."

Lepre recognized the 2020 Dalton Eminent Scholar Award winners; teaching and research faculty recently awarded tenure; and university employees who have reached service milestones of 20, 25, 30, 35, and 40 years of working and teaching at Radford.

A longstanding tradition at fall convocation is to announce the winners of the Radford University Foundation Faculty Awards. Those honors celebrate outstanding achievement among faculty members. Nominations are made by members of the Radford University community, and the award recipients are recommended to the president by the Faculty Awards Committee.

"Each award recipient receives a certificate and a monetary award and has the privilege of selecting an outstanding student, who will be recognized at a later time to receive a scholarship in the award recipient's name," Rogers said.

The most prestigious award bestowed to a deserving faculty member is the Donald N. Dedmon Distinguished Teaching Professor Award. It is named in honor of the university's fourth president. Nominees must have an outstanding record of teaching at Radford University, be professionally active in their discipline,

Miranda Epley awarded RHS Swim and Dive Coaches Scholarship

Josh Smith, Director of the Radford City Schools Partners for Excellence Foundation, presents a $3,000 check for the Radford High School Swim and Dive Coaches Scholarship to Miranda Epley.

RADFORD - The Radford City Schools Partners for Excellence Foundation has awarded Miranda Epley of Radford the 2020-2021 Radford High School Swim and Dive Coaches Scholarship.

The scholarship is awarded to a college-bound Radford High School senior based on the student's attitude, academic achievement, work ethic, and involvement with the RHS swim and dive team.

Heather Rowland, head coach of the Radford High School's swim and dive team, said Epley is a great example of the scholarship's ideal recipient.

"Miranda is extremely hard-working and positive," said Rowland. "She never shied away from a tough practice or multiple hard events at a competition. She accomplished her goals with a smile on her face, even when her tasks were difficult. Miranda was an invaluable asset to our swim and dive team all four years she competed.

"She made her teammates feel included and supported and first to lend a hand," Rowland said. "The team never heard a negative word uttered from her mouth. We proudly present Miranda Epley with the 2020-2021 Swim and Dive Coaches Scholarship for all of her hard work, enthusiasm, effort, positivity and determination, all characteristics of a true Bobcat."

Epley is attending Radford University in the Honors Academy.

Art Pannonia to present pieces by local artist Pam Sable Friday

"Mick Jagger of the Rolling Stones" by featured artist Pam Sable is one of the works at Art Pannonia's exhibit Friday, Sept. 3, from 5 to 7 p.m. The gallery is located at 114 N. Main St. in Blacksburg.

Art Pannonia will feature the works of local artist Pam Sable Friday, Sept. 3, from 5 to 7 p.m. Located at 114 N. Main St. in Blacksburg, the gallery displays original paintings and sculptures by local, national, and international artists.

A busy grandmother, Sable is a graphic artist and freelance illustrator and one of the first artists who came through Art Pannonia's doors twenty years ago. Since then, she has given the gallery a new show every two years.

Sable's works consist of a single line. She never picks up her pen until the project is finished with her signature. Her subjects are musicians, dancers, and people in various professions, often in humorous situations. She also loves to portray children and animals, and portraits of lovers, family, and friends. With a minimum of lines, she focuses on the significant motion and emotion, making recognizable the thought behind the message of the picture. Her husband, Dan, invents hybrid motors for cars and airplanes.

"What's My Line?" is the title of the show.

He's a lovable beagle who enjoys belting out some tunes so he will need a home that doesn't share walls with neighbors. Carson will need patient humans to teach him basic doggie manners. In a previous home, he got along with other pets.

Virginia Tech Women's Club to hold welcoming reception

The Virginia Tech Women's Club board members met recently to plan the organization's activities for 2021-2022. Photo by Therese Walters.

Because of safety concerns about COVID-19 and the Delta Variant, the annual welcome reception hosted by the Virginia Tech Women's Club (VTWC) will be held at The Holtzman Alumni Center this year on Wednesday, Sept. 15, 2021, from 4 to 5:30 p.m. In the past, the Grove has hosted the annual event, but Dr. Laura Sands, the club's honorary president, expressed concern about the possible spread of the delta variant, and the decision was made to move the event to the alumni center.

Dr. Sands and the women's club president, Dr. Debra Call, will host the reception.

"The food and company will be worth the visit," said Dr. Call. "The center has an outside patio with large doors that lead to a lovely inside facility, so members and guests will be able to meet safely in an indoor/outdoor facility. Guidelines from CDC and VT will be followed to ensure the safety of all who attend. Please wear a mask."

Last year, the welcome reception was not held because of the pandemic. This year, however, the club's board invites all women who are interested in enjoying the many activities offered by VTWC to attend the reception. Members will be available to talk about what the organization offers. Among its major missions is raising money throughout the year for the scholarship fund, which provides scholarships to female students at Virginia Tech. In 2020-2021, the VTWC awarded $24,000 in scholarships to 12 outstanding VT undergraduates.

In addition, VTWC provides the opportunity for women to meet in interest groups and socialize. Bridge, Canasta, Canoeing, Hiking/Walking, Ladies Who Lunch, and Serving Our Community and VT are among the groups that meet each month. Travel and Tours offers all-day trips by bus to areas all around Blacksburg. Several luncheons are held each year. In October, the annual fall luncheon will be at The Inn at VT and will feature well-known American poet and activist Nikki Giovanni. Friday Forums are held on the first Fridays in October, November, December, February, and April and feature talks and performances from a variety of disciplines.

All women who are interested in supporting women at VT and serving the community are invited to attend the welcome reception and become involved in VTWC's activities. The event is free and is open to the public. For more information, or to join this group of women, contact VTWC65@gmail.com.

Food City kicks off School Bucks Challenge, to award $700,000 to local schools

Food City kicks off its 2021-2022 School Bucks Challenge today, Sept. 1, with a pledge to contribute $700,000 to local schools.

For every $1 customers spend at Food City using their Food City ValuCard, they will receive one point.

"Our Food City School Bucks Program has provided much-needed support for thousands of schools throughout our market area, and our School Bucks Challenge makes points collection easy and efficient," said Steven C. Smith, Food City president and chief executive officer.

The 2021-2022 School Bucks Challenge continues through May 10, 2022. Food City customers may ensure their points are credited to the school of their choice by going online to <https://www.foodcity.com/schoolbucks> to link their Food City ValuCard to their preferred school.

School allocations for Food City's $700,000 pledge are based upon the percentage of customer purchases assigned to each school. Schools can monitor their progress biannually online at foodcity.com.

"Food City is committed to supporting the education of our youth," said Smith. "Since the program's inception, we've awarded over $20,700,000 in much-needed educational equipment and tools to more than 1,000 participating area schools."

For more information about the new Food City School Bucks Challenge, customers may contact their local school, visit foodcity.com, or contact the Food City School Bucks Coordinator, Lisa Johnson at 1-800-232-0174.

Headquartered in Abingdon, Va., K-VA-T Food Stores (Food City's parent company) operates 137 retail outlets throughout Southeast Kentucky, Southwest Virginia, East Tennessee, North Georgia, and Alabama.

Food City has a local presence at 1701 Tyler Avenue in Radford.

Virginia Cooperative Extension Director, VT dean, receives Distinguished Service Ruby Award

Virginia Cooperative Extension Director Ed Jones has recently received the 2021 Distinguished Service Ruby Award, the most prestigious level of recognition from Epsilon Sigma Phi, one of the oldest organizations of Extension professionals.

Virginia Cooperative Extension Director Ed Jones, who is also the associate dean of VT's College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, has received the 2021 Distinguished Service Ruby Award, the most prestigious level of recognition from Extension professionals.

The award is a reflection of Jones's dedication to and focus on the land-grant model, which in Virginia delivers the resources and knowledge of the commonwealth's land-grant universities, Virginia Tech and Virginia State University.

"I am extremely humbled to receive this honor," Jones said. "I have believed in the mission of Extension since my first interactions with it as a young boy growing up in Mercer County, Ill. Over the years, I have had the pleasure of working with so many talented and kind people who share in this belief that we can make a positive impact in our communities. This award is truly a reflection of the incredible members of Cooperative Extension with whom I have worked. Without the dedication of everyone in Extension, we would not be in the strong position we are today."

Jones was an Extension specialist and administrator across the Southeast before he became the director of Virginia Cooperative Extension and associate dean of the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Virginia Tech in 2011. During his tenure in Virginia, he has expanded Extension's reach and scope and helped provide its renowned services to the people of the commonwealth when they needed them most.

The Ruby Distinguished Service Award of Epsilon Sigma Phi is reserved for the most accomplished leaders of Cooperative Extension.

Jones forged his leadership style while he worked as the associate director of Extension at North Carolina State University. In 1999, Hurricane Floyd triggered the third-largest weather-related evacuation in the United States at the time, devastating communities along the East Coast. It was then, as he worked with the state of North Carolina to help with recovery, that Jones learned how to lead during major crises.

His leadership abilities are nationally known and recognized, including his service as chair of the Extension Disaster Education Network from 2004 through 2006; as a member of the Leadership Advisory Council of the Extension Committee on Organization and Policy from 2009 to 2010; as a member of the National 4-H Council Board of Trustees from 2017 to 2020; as the chair of the Extension Committee on Organization and Policy 4-H Leadership Committee from 2014 to 2017; and the chair of the Extension Committee on Organization and Policy from 2018 to 2019. His service was recognized with the Excellence in Leadership Award from the Association of Southern Region Extension Directors in 2020.

Jones has been an integral part of authoring or co-authoring publications, including some 15 peer-reviewed publications and proceedings dealing with wildlife, natural resources management, and leadership. He also helped secure more than $7 million in grants and awards for research and Extension work over the course of his career.

He has provided leadership to international Extension efforts in Brazil, China, Costa Rica, Haiti, Kenya, and Russia.

Jones has a bachelor's degree in zoology from the University of Washington and a master's and Ph.D. from Virginia Tech in fisheries and wildlife science. He has held leadership positions in the Extension Disaster Education Network, the National Association of Community Development Extension Professionals, and the Southern Region Program Leader Network.

Christiansburg finance department receives excellence award

The Town of Christiansburg's finance department has received the 2021 Association of Government Accountants (AGA) Certificate of Excellence in Citizen-Centric Reporting (CCR). AGA's CCR initiative is intended to simplify communication between governments and its citizens.

Intended to help citizens better understand the services provided by their governments, the CCRs are visually appealing four-page documents that include community information such as population figures, regional characteristics, and government goals for the community. Additionally, these reports feature detailed cost and revenue information, performance information for key service areas, and a look at "what's next" in the year ahead.

"In today's era of tight budgets, choices must be made and governments must be transparent to citizens about their decisions. CCRs are a useful tool in helping Americans become more active and better-informed voters," said AGA CEO Ann Ebberts. "AGA applauds The Town of Christiansburg Finance department's commitment to good government and responsible fiscal action reflected in the CCR they produced on behalf of the finance department. CCRs help citizens better understand the services provided by their government and at what cost."

The finance department teamed up with the Town of Christiansburg's public relations department to ensure creative, innovative and comprehensible communication through the CCR. Citizens may pick up a copy of the town's CCR at the town Finance Department to check out the town's mission, vision, goals, and financial and performance metrics for Christiansburg's last fiscal year.

Buddy King: “Matriculation”

Fifty years ago this month (September of 1971) I “matriculated.” That’s a word I would normally say I learned after I had done it, but I’m pretty sure that my dad had taught me the word before I actually did it, and he probably had told me that someday I was going to do it. Got that?

Anyway, it’s a good time to reflect on that long ago experience. I remember that my mom drove me up I-81 to I-64 and then down Afton Mountain to Charlottesville, C-Ville, the Hook, destination UVA. We were accompanied by my great friend John (about to start his sophomore year at Tech) and his mother, my mom’s best friend.

Looking back in my mind for material for this column, I remembered that my dad didn’t make the trip with us. I don’t have any recollection as to why he didn’t, but my guess is that he was playing in a golf tournament at Round Meadow and also wanted to miss my mother’s blubbering when she left her only child behind. Wise choice on his part, and he knew he would see plenty of the U and me over the next several years. I will say that I didn’t want to miss “move-in day” with either of my girls.

My strongest memory is of carrying bags across the street to my dorm - Tuttle House - in 100-degree heat

(I really don’t think you have ever lived on a college campus unless the temperature is 100 degrees the day you move in. I think it’s mandated somewhere.) I saw a girl in a halter top, and I heard Maggie May blaring from a speaker on the porch of my future residence, experiencing each for the first time. Each made a lasting impression on me.

I got to repeat this experience with my daughter Beth 30 years later at the U and with my other daughter Laura four years after that at Washington & Lee. Each time the thermometer verified the event, college move-in day, at 100 degrees.

When daughter Beth was accepted and decided to “matriculate” to my alma mater, much to my delight, I asked her if she was going to live in the “new dorms” (Tuttle was a “new dorm”) or the old dorms.” She said, “Dad, they don’t call them that anymore.” My first hint that maybe things had changed in 30 years.

A few years ago, I was back on “grounds” (what we call the campus at UVA) with a friend who had never visited. I was doing my tour-guide narrative as we walked towards the football stadium, and I pointed across the street and said, “there’s Tuttle House, the place I lived my first year.”

Only, it wasn’t. Gone. Confused, I crossed the street and tried to orient myself.

The university apparently had decided to take out a few of the “new dorms,” including mine, amazingly without consulting with me first, putting in their place what I think is a cafeteria. No more 144 Tuttle, no more post office on the first floor where everyone in the “new dorms” got their mail. No more Glass Hat next door where you could buy lunch and beer.

Just as it should be mandatory that it be 100 degrees the day you move into your first dorm room, it should also be required that your dorm remain intact until you pass away and no longer need to point it out to kids and grandkids and friends.

My roommate my first year was my great friend, Bob, a fellow Christiansburg High alum and pal since grade school. He and I and three other CHS classmates (Spencer, Russell, and Bruce) were the first Christiansburg kids to matriculate to Virginia since Cousin Joe had done so in 1958 with the exception of a nursing student or two.

Over the summer Bob and I had decided on the magazines to which we would subscribe. Probably Bob’s idea. He didn’t want us to “double up.” In keeping with our individual predilections and interests, Bob subscribed to Time, U.S. News and World Report and Life for our leisure reading, and I subscribed to Sports Illustrated, National Lampoon, and Playboy. Yes, Bob and I were a tad bit different, but we were, and remain to this day, best of friends.

The last publication mentioned above, the one that involved pictures of young ladies, ended up a point of controversy the next summer. I hadn’t realized that the university would automatically forward our mail home after the school year had ended. So, my Playboy subscription made the circuitous route from Chicago to 144 Tuttle to 120 Cherry Lane. My mother was “so embarrassed” that our mail man Mr. Brillheart “was forced to see that magazine” that she made me call and cancel the subscription. Personally, I bet Mr. Brillheart was not happy with my mom’s decision.

The “new dorms” had a different layout than traditional dorms of that era. Tuttle had suites with small central living areas with five double rooms opening off the living areas. The makeup of the residents of our suite was the quintessential UVA demographic mix of that time. We had two guys from Virginia Beach (John and Thorny, each a hybrid of surfer dude and aspiring hippy), two guys from Northern Virginia (Dave and Rich, children of federal government workers, aspiring to become the same), two from upstate New York (Larry and Dave, children of parents on the faculty at Colgate, serious students, socially as backwards as Bob and I, one becoming an Air Force pilot after school and the other a member of the original and infamous UVA Pep Band while in school), and Bob and me (public school goobers from the mountains who had always wanted to attend the U and were just darn glad to be there even if we didn’t fit in).

The fifth room was occupied by the coolest guy in the history of the University, Jim, a third-year and our R.A. He had a cavalier orange Volkswagen bug, he was also from the beach and he was a frat brother and friend of Barry Parkhill, an All-American basketball player at the U. Our dorm being co-ed, and the floor above us housing women, Jim soon picked the most beautiful girl in the dorm as his roommate, a shocking development to a boy from Christiansburg who didn’t really date in high school that cemented Jim’s status with me.

Jim went on to marry his

WalletHub: Virginia is eighth hardest-working state in the country

As the personal finance website WalletHub notes, Americans are hard workers, putting in an average of 1,767 hours per year as of 2021, according to the World Economic Forum. That’s 435 hours per year more than Germans work, but 357 fewer than Mexicans do.

To locate the states with the hardest workers, WalletHub compared the 50 states across 10 key indicators. The website then divided the metrics into two dimensions: direct work factors and indirect work factors. WalletHub then determined each state’s weighted average across all metrics to calculate its overall score and used the resulting scores to rank the states.

Virginia emerged as the eighth hardest-working state in the union. Among the factors that played into the commonwealth’s high ranking were average workweek hours, 15th; average commute time, 8th; employment rate, 13th; share of workers with multiple jobs, 22nd; annual volunteer hours per resident, 9th; and average leisure time spent per day, 20th.

The metrics used in the direct work factors dimension to determine the states’ rankings were average workweek hours, employment rate, the share of households where no adults work, the share of workers using vacation time unused, the share of engaged workers, and idle youth.

The metrics used in the indirect work factors dimension to determine the states’ rankings were average commute time, the share of workers of multiple jobs, the annual volunteer hours per resident, and the average leisure time spent per day.

The seven states that the website determined to work harder than the commonwealth’s citizens were 1. Alaska 2. North Dakota 3. Nebraska 4. South Dakota 5. Texas 6. Wyoming and 7. Oklahoma.

The ten states that wound up at the bottom of the rankings were 41. Massachusetts 42. New Jersey 43. Illinois 44. Oregon 45. Michigan 46. Rhode Island 47. Connecticut 48. New York 49. West Virginia and 50. New Mexico.

Financial Focus: Review your IRA, 401(k) beneficiaries

If you’ve had an IRA and a 401(k) for many years, you may occasionally ask yourself some questions: “Am I contributing enough?” “Am I still funding these accounts with the right mix of investments for my goals and risk tolerance?”

But here’s one inquiry you might be overlooking: “Have I used the correct beneficiary designations?” And the answer you get is important.

It wouldn’t be surprising if you haven’t thought much about the beneficiary designation. After all, it was just something you once signed, possibly a long time ago. Is it really that big a deal?

It could be. For one thing, what if your family circumstances have changed since you named a beneficiary? If you’ve remarried, you may not want your former spouse to receive your IRA and 401(k) assets or the proceeds of your life insurance policy, for which you also named a beneficiary.

However, upon remarrying, many people do review their estate plans, including their wills, living trusts, durable powers of attorney, and health care directives. If you’ve revised these documents, do you have to worry about the old beneficiary designations? You might be surprised to learn that these previous designations can supersede what’s in your updated will and other documents. The end result could be an “accidental” inheritance in which your retirement accounts and insurance proceeds could end up going to someone who is no longer in your life.

Furthermore, your retirement plans and insurance policy may not just require a single beneficiary. You may also be asked to name a contingent beneficiary to whom assets will pass if the primary beneficiary has already died. As you can imagine, the situation could become quite muddled if stepchildren are involved in a remarriage.

To avoid these potential problems, make sure to review the beneficiary designations on all of your accounts at some point, especially after a significant change in your family situation. If you see something that is outdated or incorrect, contact your retirement account administrator or your insurance representative in the case of life insurance to request a change-of-beneficiary form.

And if you really want to be on the safe side, you may want to enlist a legal professional to help you with this review to make sure the beneficiary designations reflect your current family situation and are consistent with what’s in your estate plans.

In fact, if you’re already working with an experienced estate planning attorney – and you should – you might also pick up some other suggestions for dealing with beneficiaries. Just to name one, it’s generally not a good idea to name minor children as beneficiaries. Because children can’t control the assets until they become adults, a court would likely have to name a guardian, one that you might not have wanted.

Instead, you could either name your own custodian to manage the assets designated to the minor or establish a trust for the benefit of the minor, which can distribute the money in several disbursements over a period of years, which is often a good move, since young adults aren’t always the best at managing large lump sums.

If you’re like many people, you have a strong desire to leave something behind. But you’ll want to do it in the right way. So pay close attention to your beneficiary designations when you first create them and throughout your life.

Turtle House roommate, Susanne, and from what I can tell on Facebook, they have a wonderful, successful family, made up of incredibly good-looking kids and grandkids, including a son who is a television star (The O.C., Nashville, and Grey's Anatomy) and country music singer and resembles both his rents (what the cool kids called their parents in my college days).

Another memory of Jim. He had a car and he was 21, two things lacking among his wards in our suite and the adjoining suite for which he also had responsibility. In keeping with the mores and habits of the time, Jim taped an envelope on the back door of the entrance to our suite for our weekend “alcohol orders.” You would write your order down on a slip of paper and insert it and your cash in the envelope. Everyone knew Jim made his liquor run at 3 p.m. every Friday. Standard operating procedure.

Everyone also knew there was a guy in a nearby dorm who sold “lids” - plastic bags full of pot. He left his room unlocked, and his customers were on the honor system, picking up their bags and leaving their cash. As an aspiring law student and also living in mortal fear of my dad's reaction if I had been arrested, I didn't partake myself, but I went to this guy's room a couple of times with friends just to witness the act. Thus were the college days of the 70's.

Other early memories included a huge “first night” Welcome to Virginia keg party for 2,400 incoming students, hosted by the U, despite the fact that the legal drinking age was 21 and none of us were, sleeping out in the basketball arena, U Hall, to get tickets for the first basketball game of the season, against Maryland and Lefty Driesell and the top recruiting class in the country, (We blew them out!) and pledging a frat and being told I needed to wear a coat and tie to initiation, (I had one coat with me, brown mustard yellow in color, and one tie, five and 1/2 inches wide and striped. The tie doubled as a table cloth in my apartment in future years.), unlimited chocolate milk and potatoes in Newcomb Hall (the cafeteria), and no longer playing sports, leading to the “freshman 20.”

Some memories stick with you for 50 years. Good luck to those HOO are matriculating this year. Make great memories, but be safer than we were back in the day.

meets again, on Monday, Sept. 13. The council agreed to revisit the project at that September meeting.

Huntington said she would also like to see what potential plans there are for the building beyond the monthly American Legion meetings that would be held there. Currently, since the building is uninhabitable, the American Legion meets at the VFW post home for its meetings.

“The investment from the city is ballooning,” she said. “I struggle investing that amount of money in a building if it is just going to sit there.”

Burress said possible plans include renting out the main floor for events and parceling out the ground floor for lease for office space. He also reported Home Depot has donated $8,000 in gift cards for supplies for the work that will be done after the roof and gutters are replaced. That work includes painting, plumbing, and floor refinishing. Volunteers from the community have also said they will help with that work, Burress added.

“The state of this building concerns me as a veteran and as a citizen,” said Foster.

“This building has meant a lot to this community and has served a lot of purposes,” said Burress. “The American Legion home, a temporary library, a voting precinct – you name it, this building has done it.”

The building has also served as offices for the Radford Chamber of Commerce, Main Street Radford, and the Radford tourism department. The city council will take up the issue again at its next meeting on Monday, Sept. 13, at 7 p.m.

RADFORD SPORTS

Friday previews: Radford, Christiansburg pick up opening wins

Marty Gordon
NRVsports@ourvalley.org

What did we learn in the first week of high school football?

Well, Christiansburg's defense is tough to score on and will dictate the number of wins the team picks up this season. Blacksburg can run the ball and will have a chance for a win in at least half of its schedule. Auburn is young and will have to have a lot of players grow up quickly because the Mt. Empire District schedule has at least four possible playoff teams. Radford has reloaded for new coach Michael Crist, and Eastern Montgomery is looking for a leader to push them over the peak of the mountain.

A side note on a former Christiansburg standout: Matson Stanley has left Emory and Henry and is looking for a new football home.

This week's schedule:

Auburn (0-1) at Craig (0-1)

Craig took an 8-6 loss to Bland to open the season and its first game since 2019.

Auburn ran into a wall in a 26-0 loss to Narrows, the defending Pioneer District champ. Isaiah Keith and John Keith combined for 89 yards rushing in the loss.

Prediction: Auburn 12, Craig 10

Lord Botetourt (0-1) at Blacksburg (0-1)

Botetourt is going to be upset after a convincing loss last week to E.C. Glass, and Blacksburg might not be ready for what that means for their second game of the season.

The two schools agreed to move the game to Thursday night because of a rare Virginia Tech Friday game.

Blacksburg had a 21-7 lead going into the second half in last week's game with Giles, who rallied for a 28-21 win. Bryce Ferguson rushed 10 times for 93 yards with two touchdowns for the Bruins.

Prediction: Lord Botetourt 30, Blacksburg 7

Christiansburg (1-0) at Abingdon (1-0)

Two regional mates will find out who's the real bad dog. Abingdon would not move the Friday contest despite the fact of a Virginia Tech-North Carolina game on the same night.

Abingdon rolled in a 41-0 win over John Battle. Despite the loss of its senior quarterback to a broken leg, Abingdon took to the air for 197 and rushed for 149 yards. Senior running back Malique Hounshell tallied scoring runs of 51 and six yards. 6-3 sophomore quarterback Lucas Brooks picked up the slack and hit 6-3 receiver Peyton McClanahan for a 20-yard score. 6-1 Haynes Carter and 5-11 Braidon Mock also had scoring catches. Hounshell finished with 93 yards in the win.

Christiansburg was sluggish in the first half but managed a 33-0 win over Floyd to start the 2021 season. The Blue Demons held Floyd to 52 yards rushing and picked off two passes enroute to the opening week-end win that was played on Saturday. Brady Gordon stripped the Floyd quarterback of a handout and ran it in from 21 yards as Christiansburg pulled away in the third quarter.

Kenyan Johnson-Buchannon scored twice and rushed 10 times for 80 yards. Travis Altizer added a touchdown reception from Casey Graham. Tanner Evans also picked up a score in the fourth quarter for the final margin.

Floyd was limited to 74 yards through the air.

Broadcast: 100.7 FM

Prediction: Christiansburg 28, Abingdon 10

Radford (1-0) at Gate City (0-1)

The two schools also moved their game because of Friday's Virginia Tech game. Radford will travel to Gate City on Saturday.

Gate City fell in their season opener 38-13 to Richlands after finishing the spring 2-5. The team returns only eight starters across both sides of the ball.

First-year Radford coach Michael Crist is no stranger to Gate City after spending the past five years at nearby Virginia High.

This past week, Radford's Marcell Baylor rushed eight times for 104 yards with two scores as the Bobcats beat Wythe 35-6. Tyrel Dobson added 66 yards on the ground.

Broadcast: 101.7 FM.

Prediction: Radford 30, Gate City 10

Rural Retreat (1-0) at Eastern Montgomery (0-1)

Rural Retreat outslugged county-rival Ft. Chiswell 12-7. Sophomore QB Caleb Roberts leads the Indians into this battle down US460.

Eastern Montgomery took a long trip to deep southwest Virginia and lost 38-0 to Holston. The Mustangs managed only 108 yards in total offense. The defense gave up 274 yards to the Holston rushing attack.

Prediction: Rural Retreat 40, Eastern Montgomery 6

Radford downs George Wythe

Receiver Allen Hamblin picks up yards after the catch in Friday's opening game. Radford gave first-year coach Michael Crist his first win 35-6 over longtime rival George Wythe.

Running back Tyrel Dobson sheds a defender for yardage in the Bobcats' victory.

Quarterback Marcell Baylor gashes the Maroons' defense for a big gain. Baylor rushed eight times for 104 yards with two scores.

Hokies open Friday night against UNC

The countdown is two days left until Virginia Tech opens its 2021 football season.

The Hokie defense will be front and center in trying to stop North Carolina quarterback Sam Howell, who begins his third season at the controls of UNC's Air Raid attack, which set school records for total offense (537.2 yards per game) and points per game (41.7) in 2020. He has 68 career touchdown passes, more than any player in ACC history through two seasons, and is projected to be a first-round pick in next year's NFL draft.

Graduate transfer Ty Chandler, who rushed for 2,046 yards during four seasons at Tennessee, leads the Carolina running back room.

Carolina is predicted to win the Coastal Division over the Hokies and face Clemson in the ACC championship game at the end of the season.

The Tar Heels are celebrating a commitment this past week from five-star defensive tackle Travis Shaw, the school's second-highest rated prospect in the history of the program. The 6-5, 310-pound Shaw from Greensboro, N.C., now moves the school's 2022 recruiting numbers from #13 in the ACC to third, behind only Florida State and Clemson.

Over his first three prep seasons Shaw has registered 57 stops behind the line of scrimmage and 17 sacks.

Notes on Friday's VT game:

Fans are encouraged to wear orange for the annual Orange Effect game.

The official Orange Effect shirt can be purchased online or at any Hokie Shop location on game day.

As previously announced, all concession stands will move to cashless payment this year and will require a debit or credit card for purchase. Fans who do not have access to a card should consider buying a prepaid credit card at Kroger in advance of the game. On game day, there will be a limited number of prepaid credit cards available

Hokie quarterbacks are thin on experience

PLAYER TO WATCH
Braxton Burmeister is the only quarterback on the roster who started for the Hokies in 2020, posting a 3-1 record in those four games.
Burmeister's return sets up a rare situation during the Justin Fuente era where Tech presumably knows its projected 2021 starter heading into a preseason game. The Oregon transfer ended last season on a positive note, leading the Hokies to 33-15 victory over Virginia to reclaim the Commonwealth Cup. He threw for a career-high 212 yards in the win, completing 15 of 22 throws with a touchdown.
The La Jolla, Calif., native

also guided Tech to victories against NC State and Duke a year ago. With two years of experience in Tech's offense and a larger leadership role inside the locker room, Burmeister will look to continue the momentum from last season's finale into 2021.
OTHERS IN THE MIX
Redshirt freshman Knox Kadum is the only other quarterback on the roster who has played in a game for the Hokies, doing so vs. Clemson last season. Kadum didn't blink when thrown into the fray against the eventual ACC champions. The Rome, Ga., native completed four of his six attempts for 68 yards and also rushed for 24 yards.

Connor Blumrick was recommended to Tech's staff by Fuente's former offensive coordinator at Memphis and current Texas A&M offensive coordinator, Darrell Dickey. Blumrick was listed as a running back and also made a move to tight end his sophomore season for Jimbo Fisher, in addition to working on special teams. A prolific passer in high school, Blumrick's experience and versatility should be a plus for Tech's quarterback room. And of course, Tech's coaching staff is anxious to see highly-touted Tahj Bullock get on the field.
POSITION NOTES

Burmeister completed the Hokies' longest pass of the 2020 season, a 60-yard touchdown to wide receiver Tayvion Robinson versus Virginia.
The Hokies had their most productive offensive outings in 2020 in the two games Burmeister started, racking up 495 yards in both the season opener vs. NC State and at North Carolina.
Burmeister led Tech to a season-high 8.5 yards per play average vs. NC State.
Burmeister accounted for the most yards of total offense of any returning Tech player after throwing for 687 yards and rushing for 182 more in 2020.
POSITION OUTLOOK

All signs point to Burmeister being the Hokies starter vs. North Carolina on Sept. 3 in Lane Stadium, which will be the second straight season the Hokies turn to the California native to begin the season, just the second time in the Fuente era a quarterback has started back-to-back seasons (Josh Jackson, 2017-18).
Burmeister showed flashes of his potential and big play capability last season, and a full complement of spring practices working with offensive coordinator Brad Cornelsen has been beneficial. Kadum and Blumrick will be the top candidates to compete for the back-up role.

Hokies

in the Hokie Shop in the West concourse.
In adherence to Virginia Tech's current policy, masks are required, regardless of vaccination status, in all indoor common areas, except for when fans are eating/drinking. This specifically applies to hallways between suites and club spaces.

Gate 7 (behind the Beamer-Lawson Indoor Practice Facility) will now be a STUDENT-ONLY gate. Students who wish to sit in the North end zone will need to get a wristband upon entry and these wristbands will be distributed only at Gate 7 until the area is at capacity. All other fans should make plans to enter Lane Stadium through a different gate.

In accordance with policies and the Virginia Tech campus plan to close the school at 2 p.m. on Friday, parking lots will not officially open until 3 p.m. that afternoon. Fans are encouraged not to arrive before noon on game day.

From 2-3 p.m., any car in gameday lots without a parking permit for game day will be towed.

If you arrive in the lot earlier in the day and your reserved space is open, feel free to park there immediately. No further action is required.

If you arrive in the lot earlier in the day and your reserved space is not open, park in an open spot in your assigned lot and move your car when your reserved space becomes available, but not after 3 p.m.

If you arrive after 3 p.m., you should not have any problem accessing your reserved space.

In the event that you do, a member of the guest services team in the parking lot will be available to assist you. Cars will be moved into the lots as quickly as possible, but expect delays on game day.

Public parking is available on game day for $20 beginning at 3 p.m. in designated parking lots on campus. These include the Prices Fork Parking Garage, the North End Center Parking Garage, the Ag Quad Lot, and the Squires Lot.

Hokie Village returns in 2021 with a renewed commitment to Hokie Nation. Live music is planned for four games this season (9/3 vs. UNC, 10/9 vs. Notre Dame, 10/16 vs. Pitt, 10/23 vs. Syracuse). Fans can enjoy food trucks and beverages (alcoholic and non-alcoholic) all season long with some additional options available in the circle drive on the West Side of Cassell Coliseum. At various games throughout the season, fans will find a rock-climbing wall, a petting zoo, and a bungee trampoline.

Hokie Nation will be able to welcome the Hokies football team as they arrive in Blacksburg once again this year. The buses will arrive on Beamer Way outside of Lane Stadium approximately 2.5 hours prior to kickoff.

The Marching Virginians will lead the March to Victory from the Marching Virginians Center to Lane Stadium approximately 75 minutes prior to kickoff. Joined by members of the HighTechs, the Corps of Cadets, and Skipper, the march will leave the Marching Virginians Center at the top of Chicken Hill and will wind through Lot 5 on to Sterrett Drive between Lots 2 and 3 and along the sidewalk outside of the South End Zone into Lane.

Also, a note on the Commonwealth Cup with the University of Virginia:

The rivalry between Virginia Tech Athletics and Virginia Athletics has a long and storied history dating back more than 125 years within the Commonwealth of Virginia. The Hokies and Cavaliers first faced off on the gridiron in Charlottesville in 1895. First coined the Commonwealth Clash during the 2014-2015 season, the rivalry has expanded and intensified across the 22 sports in which the two institutions face off in head-to-head competition.

Both institutions have announced the next era of the Commonwealth Clash through an expansive relationship with Smithfield Foods that will act as the presenting sponsor of the platform. With a fresh and redesigned trophy, both schools will seek to earn the distinction as Commonwealth Clash Champions.

"Virginia Tech is proud to align with the Smithfield brand as the Hokies and Cavaliers battle for overall sports supremacy in the Commonwealth of Virginia," Tech Director of Athletics Whit Babcock said. "The fan bases of both Tech and UVA are unquestionably passionate about these schools. Smithfield will serve as a great partner to further amplify the rich history of competition, sportsmanship, and tradition that has marked this rivalry for so many decades. We are excited to present the Commonwealth Clash in a fresh and exciting way thanks to Smithfield."
