Radford City Council seeks nominees for council vacancy

The Radford City Council is looking for input on who will serve an interim role on the council until next year's election.

The vacancy occurred when Onassis Burress stepped down from his role as a council member because he moved out of the area, leaving three years remaining in his term. When a vacancy on the council occurs, the remaining four members appoint an interim replacement to serve until a special election takes place. In this case, the special election will be held in conjunction with the next city council election scheduled for Nov. 8, 2022.

In the past, council members have often asked a recently serving former member of the council to serve an interim role.

"The reasons for this are numerous, including the individual has extensive service to the citizens of the City of Radford, has familiarity with the process, activities, and operation of the city council and with the issues facing the current city council, and has placed his or her name before the public at large and has been elected to office at some point. And the individual can begin service quickly, serving effectively with experience," according to information released by the city.

"The current city council respects the historic process but also wishes to engage with the citizens of the City of Radford to help inform the members' appointment process," the statement reads. "As such, the city council is requesting a statement of interest from citizens to aid their efforts. This communication can include qualities desired for the interim appointee, nominations of self or other individuals for consideration to serve in the role on an interim basis, as well as any general support for council members to consider.

"Ultimately, the remaining members of the Radford City Council will nominate a candidate or candidates for the role and vote to appoint an individual to serve," the statement reads.

The city council is required to appoint an interim member within 30 days following the vacancy. To nominate an individual or yourself, email a statement of interest to City Clerk Jenni Goodman at Jenni Goodman at Jenni.Goodman@radfordva.gov by Sunday, Nov. 21, 2021, at 5 p.m.

The following information should be included in the statement of interest: name of the individual, any qualifications for service, and contact information including email address, mailing address, and phone number.

Any person qualified to vote in the city is eligible to be a member of the city council.

Radford University honors veterans' service and sacrifices with solemn ceremony

In paying tribute on Veterans Day to the men and women who have served in the United States military, Radford University observed a custom even older than Veterans Day itself.

The school's event, "Saluting Our Veterans," began promptly at the 11th hour on the 11th day of the 11th month: Nov. 11 at 11 a.m. That timing mirrored the schedule of the armistice that in 1918 ended World War I and spawned the federal holiday that eventually became what we now know as Veterans Day.

Held at the Hurlburt Student Center Auditorium, "Saluting Our Veterans" opened with recognition of the many veterans present, including numerous members of Radford University's faculty and staff as well as graduates and current students.

"Today, we recognize many who have come before us to pave that way to freedom and who have demonstrated the example of leadership, sacrifice, honor, and duty to this great nation," said Maj. Melissa Manigault, assistant professor of military science and chair of the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

"Veterans Day is a time to remember that our freedom is not guaranteed. It is protected by the men and the women of our armed forces," Manigault told attendees.

Radford University's Chief of Police, Eric Plummer, Ph.D., is a U.S. Army veteran and was a faculty guest speaker. He described how military service led to his extended career in law enforcement.

"For me, it all started with that first step forward in basic training. I still have the honor of serving my community and upholding the basic tenet of an organizational purpose and service," Plummer said. "To those we are honoring here today, you, too, took that step into service of a cause greater than yourself, and I am grateful to be in the company of such people."

NRV vaccine clinics designed to reduce anxiety for ages 5-11

Children get vaccinated at an NRV clinic for 5- to 11-year-olds.

The Virginia Department of Health's New River Health District held two large-scale COVID-19 vaccine clinics for children ages 5-11 Thursday and Friday.

Martin's Pharmacy hosted the clinics from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 18, at Christiansburg High School and from 3 to 6:30 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 19, at Christiansburg Recreation Center.

The clinics were scaled and designed for children with distractions to help them successfully and calmly receive vaccines. Those distractions included a bubble machine, play stations, and furry friends like a calm petting dog and various mascots. The Hokie Bird and the Highlander visited Thursday.

"Our children have waited the longest for a vaccine and have been incredible at wearing masks and doing their best to stop the spread of COVID at school," said Dr. Noelle Bissell, Director of the New River Health District. "We are happy we could finally offer them a vaccine and could welcome them and their parents to as stress-free a location as we could create," she said.

Community Foundation of New River Valley awards grants to local nonprofits

Through its Responsive Grant Program, the Community Foundation of the New River Valley (CFNRV) throughout the fall awarded $184,772 in grants to 56 local and regional nonprofits for operational support.

The CFNRV manages over $14.3 million in assets in 200 endowed funds created by NRV individuals, families, and businesses to award grants to charitable organizations and scholarships to students. In prior years, the Responsive Grant Program has awarded operating and programmatic support on issues like poverty, natural resource conservation, education, the arts, and housing.

In 2020, the CFNRV Board of Directors decided to award up to $4,000 in only operational support to organizations, as starting or continuing projects during the pandemic was challenging. In 2021, the CFNRV Board of Directors decided to continue and award only operational support as the pandemic is ongoing. The CFNRV received over one hundred applications, and staff and volunteers then vetted the applications and made grant awards from dozens of endowed funds managed at the foundation.

In addition, the CFNRV once again opened grants to the public through a grant catalog, allowing public contributions from individuals to help fund nonprofits.

Eric Chapman, CFNRV board member and chair of the distribution committee, said of the awards, "Each year, we are able to give more money out to local nonprofit organizations that are making a positive impact in our community. Unfortunately, we always run out of money and can't fund every worthy organization that applies."

"As the Foundation grows and more funds are started, we will continue to see the number of grants increasing," Chapman said. "The great thing about the CFNRV is that even a small fund will give out a little money each year, and while we wish we could fund them all 100%, having the ability to give more than $184,000 because of the generosity of so many people in our community is something that we are proud of."

The 2022 Responsive Grant Program will open online in June 2022 with a deadline in late July. Anyone interested in starting an endowed fund to support charitable work in the New River Valley should contact the CFNRV at 540-381-8999 or email jessicawirgau@cfnrv.org.

COVID-19 update: Cases in district, Virginia, and nationally have plateaued; Pfizer vaccine demand outstrips supply for ages 5-11

“New cases of COVID-19 have plateaued in Virginia and in the New River District; we may have plateaued, but are still on a very slow decline,” Dr. Noelle Bissell, director of the New River Valley Public Health Task Force, told the media Monday at her press conference.

Dr. Bissell cautioned, though, that “some areas are starting to see a surge from the delta variant, such as in the Southwest and some Midwest states as well as some of the northern states. Europe, specifically Germany and Austria are seeing cases rise as are countries who had severe lockdowns. Basically, the numbers are telling us you are not going to avoid delta. It’s going to run through every community.”

“The vast majority of hospitalizations and deaths are in unvaccinated populations,” Dr. Bissell said. “Most of the New River Health District is still at high community transmission as defined by the CDC while Montgomery County is considered to be at substantial transmission.”

“Monday, the New River Health District hospitals reported 28 COVID-19 patients with one person under investigation. Our numbers overall have come down, at peak we had upwards of 60 people hospitalized with COVID-19. Our hospitals are still very busy.

“Non-COVID patients are coming to the hospital sicker than they were pre-pandemic because many people put off medical care,” the health district director told the media. “The COVID patients on top of this add significant stress to our hospitals. Although our hospitals are still very busy, they remain at normal operations. COVID cases tend to stay in the hospital for a long time, and we’re also seeing flu cases and some hospitalized with flu and COVID.”

“We are still asking everyone who has respiratory symptoms such as a cough, stuffy nose, runny nose, fever, or unexplained headache to get tested for COVID and to stay home from work or school. The Health Department offers free testing with results in 36 hours. You can also get tested at pharmacies, doctor’s offices, and urgent cares.”

“We’re asking people not to go to the hospital to get tested,” Dr. Bissell said. “The Virginia Department of Health is starting a pilot program where the public library systems will be a distribution point for rapid tests. In the New River District, the Montgomery Floyd library system is expected to have some of these rapid tests available this week. The library staff will distribute tests only; they won’t be available to answer questions or assist with administering the test.

“If you get a positive test, isolate for 10 days from the date of your positive test or from symptom onset and resume normal activities on day 11 if you are fever free for 24 hours without medication,” Dr. Bissell cautioned. “If you get a positive test and you are at risk for poor outcome, such as medical conditions or age, please ask your doctor or health department for monoclonal antibodies. We have monoclonal antibodies available and they decrease risk of hospitalization.”

“Our health department focus continues to be on getting vaccines into the arms of the unvaccinated. We are vaccinating people age 5 and up with the vaccines approved for their age. We have Pfizer, Moderna, and Johnson & Johnson for first doses, second doses, third doses for the immune-compromised and boosters.”

“Infection does give immunity, but public health is always going to advocate vaccination. The long-term side effects from infection are much less predictable.”

“We still have higher demand than supply for the Pfizer vaccine for ages 5-11. We expect this to last for another week or so, until all those who want a shot now have received one. We expect that about 50% of this age will be getting shots immediately. For second shots, the interval for children is the same as for older groups: three weeks. However, it is fine to wait up to six weeks for that second shot. We have been assured by the federal government that there is enough supply for all.”

Dr. Bissell also reported “a supply glitch with getting Moderna vaccines last week, but we were able to secure a little more on Monday and are hopeful we will get our regular supply next week.”

“The Community Vaccination Center at Valley View Mall has all vaccines and is accepting walk-ins. Remember flu season. We and the pharmacies still have flu shots available. You can get your shot at the same time as your COVID shot.”

“If you are an employer in the New River Valley, you can get advice and assistance on mandates and other COVID-related topics from the Business Continuity Team of the New River Regional Commission,” Dr. Bissell said. “Contact Ashley Briggs, abriggs@nrvc.org.

“We are all looking forward to our national Thanksgiving holiday, to be with family, friends, or just to have some time to unwind. Please remember there is a highly transmissible disease circulating everywhere,” the district director warned. “Each person and family needs to do their own risk assessment. It helps to know the immunity status of the people you’ll be in close contact with. Stay outdoors as much as possible. Bundle up if it’s cold. If you can’t be outdoors, make sure your indoor space is well ventilated. If you aren’t sure about the ventilation, open some windows. In the UK, they have been advising people to open windows and doors for 10 minutes every hour.”

“While we gather with people or wish them well from afar, let’s remember to give everybody grace, even our family members with different viewpoints,” Dr. Bissell suggested. “Everybody is more stressed because of this pandemic, and many people are shorter tempered and not reacting as calmly as they did in the before times. Let’s give each other more grace and temper our own reactions. Everybody is doing the best they can, and we all need to have a little more patience right now.”

Virginia ranks first among all states in new scorecard on patient safety in hospitals

Virginia tops all states in the Fall 2021 Leapfrog Group Hospital Safety Grade state rankings that are based on the share of hospitals in each state that earned “A” grades.

In the current rankings, 56.2 percent of Virginia hospitals graded received top marks. That reflects improvement from the Spring 2021 rankings when 50 percent of Virginia hospitals had “A” grades and the commonwealth ranked fourth among all states.

The commonwealth has consistently been a high-achieving state in the bi-annual Leapfrog rankings: Virginia ranked sixth among states in the Fall 2020 rankings, third overall in the Fall 2019 rankings, second overall in the Spring 2019 rankings, third overall in the Fall 2018 scores, and fifth overall in the Spring 2018 grading period.

“Virginia is blessed to have a vast network of hospitals to care for people in their hour of need,” said Steve Arner, Carilion Clinic Executive Vice President and Chief Operating Officer and the Chair of the Virginia Hospital and Healthcare Association (VHHA) Board of Directors.

“While these hospitals are each unique in their own way, they share a strong commitment to ensuring all patients receive safe, effective, high-quality care,” said Arner. “The latest Leapfrog Group Hospital Safety Grades scorecard listing Virginia first among all states in the rankings confirms that our hospitals consistently strive for excellence on behalf of the patients, families, and communities we serve.”

“Caring for the health and medical needs of patients and communities across Virginia is a duty our hospital members and their teams hold sacred,” said VHHA President and CEO Sean T. Connaughton. “It is something we have all been reminded of while living through the COVID-19 pandemic. Virginia hospitals are committed to the wellbeing of patients, which is reflected in Virginia’s consistently strong performance in the Leapfrog

Group Hospital Safety Grades.

These scores are a testament to the ongoing collaborative work by Virginia’s hospitals to intentionally focus on patient safety and health care quality improvement as part of a broader goal to make the Commonwealth the healthiest state in the nation.”

The Leapfrog Group Hospital Safety Grades assign letter grades to more than 2,700 general acute care hospitals across the nation. In the latest rankings, 41 of 73 Virginia general acute care hospitals evaluated earned “A” grades, placing the commonwealth first among states in the nation.

length about his academic career as a Highlander, his stint in the ROTC, and his time in the army, which saw him deployed to Kuwait in early 2003 and participating in the invasion of Iraq.

The journey led him through a palace abandoned by Saddam Hussein and across “the ruins of the ancient city of Babylon,” and those experiences left him with advice for those following a path similar to his.

“If at first some things seem hard, I would encourage you to keep with it,” Humble said. “You may not recognize the progress that you’re making since it will be incremental. You will improve with hard work, effort, and determination. “This isn’t about being the best, but about being your best, and becoming a valued contributor to a team.”

Speakers also addressed the darker ongoing challenges of serving in the armed forces: coping with physical injuries, post-traumatic stress disorder, survivor’s guilt, and elevated suicide rates recorded among veterans.

“Folks, the crisis does not go away after the war,” said Mark Shelton, a first-year graduate student, an army veteran, and the president of the Student Veterans Organization at Radford University, which provides resources, support, and advocacy for those who served.

“Those coming home feel confused, conflicted, distrustful, and tired. Tired from their own battles and tired from the battles they fought,” Shelton said, calling for greater attention and care for veterans returning from service. “This isn’t just the newer generation, but every generation.”

Chris Nelson, a senior housekeeper on campus who served on active duty in the U.S. Marine Corps from 1992 to 1997, was deployed to Somalia just days after the Battle of Mogadishu and the Black Hawk Down incident.

Going in, the then-19-year-old had to write and file his will as a precaution, and he stayed in Somalia for four months during Operations Restore Hope and Restore Hope 2.

Nelson recalled that when he later started working at Radford University, the transition from military to civilian life was difficult until he discovered the Military Resource Center on campus, and he thanked the school for supporting it.

“Without the MRC, I don’t know where some of these kids would have a place to go and feel the camaraderie that they have today,” Nelson said.

At the close of Thursday’s ceremony, Plummer, Humble, Nelson, and music instructor and United States Air Force veteran Dayl Burnett, Ph.D., all received Challenge Coins, presented by the MRC to acknowledge their ongoing service.

Long-banned class of psychedelics shows promise in treating mental illness

One in five U.S. adults will experience a mental illness in their lifetime, according to the National Alliance of Mental Health. But standard treatments can be slow to work and cause side effects.

To find better solutions, a Virginia Tech researcher has joined a renaissance of research on a long-banned class of drugs that could combat several forms of mental illness and, in mice, has achieved long-lasting results from just one dose.

Using a process his lab developed in 2015, Chang Lu, the Fred W. Bull Professor of Chemical Engineering in the College of Engineering, is helping his Virginia Commonwealth University collaborators study the effects of psychedelics.

Their findings give insight into how psychedelic substances like psilocybin, mescaline, LSD, and similar drugs may relieve symptoms of addiction, anxiety, depression, and post-traumatic stress disorder. The drugs appear to work faster and last longer than current medications all with fewer side effects.

The project hinged on Lu's genomic analysis. His process allows researchers to use very small samples of tissue, down to hundreds to thousands of cells, and draw meaningful conclusions from them. Older processes require much larger sample sizes, so Lu's approach enables the studies using just a small quantity of material from a specific region of a mouse brain.

And looking at the effects of psychedelics on brain tissues is especially important.

Researchers can do human clinical trials with the substances, taking blood and urine samples and observing behaviors, Lu said. "But the thing is, the behavioral data will tell you the result, but it doesn't tell you why it works in a certain way," he said.

But looking at molecular changes in animal models, such as the brains of mice, allows scientists to peer into what Lu calls the black box of neuroscience to understand the biological processes at work. While the brains of mice are very different from human brains, Lu said there are enough similarities to make valid comparisons between the two.

VCU pharmacologist Javier González-Maeso has made a career of studying psychedelics, which had been banned after recreational use of the drugs was popularized in the 1960s. But in recent years, regulators have begun allowing research on the drugs to proceed.

In work by other researchers, primarily on psilocybin, a substance found in more than 200 species of fungi, González-Maeso said psychedelics have shown promise in alleviating major depression and anxiety disorders. "They induce profound effects in perception," he said. "But I was interested in how these drugs actually induce behavioral effects in mice."

After one dose of DOI, a drug similar to LSD, the mice that had reacted to fear triggers no longer responded to them with anxious behaviors. Their brains also showed effects, even after the substance was no longer detectable in the tissues, Lu said. The findings were published in the October issue of Cell Reports.

It's a hopeful development for those who suffer from mental illness and the people who love them. In fact, it wasn't just the science that drew Lu to the project.

For him, it's also personal. "My older brother has had schizophrenia for the last 30 years, basically. So I've always been intrigued by mental health," Lu said. "And then once I found that our approach can be applied to look at processes like that — that's why I decided to do research in the field of brain neuroscience."

WORSHIP DIRECTORY

I NEED HELP
Read Psalms 11:1 through 18:50

Many of the Psalms are full of praise to God. We sometimes visualize David as peacefully strumming a harp as he quietly watches a flock of sheep grazing on a grassy slope. Psalm 13 presents a different picture.

David apparently had doubts, troubling thoughts, and enemies. Things did not always go well for him. In the first part of this psalm, David, in authentic transparency, expressed some real concerns. He apparently had enemies who were getting a little too close for comfort. The amazing part is how, in spite of the chaos around him, David made a decision to trust God.

But I trust in your unfailing love; my heart rejoices in your salvation (Psalm 13:5).

Everything does not always go well for us either. We face challenges that seem overwhelming, and we do not always see a clear path through the jungle of everyday life. But God is our Source of help, and we can trust Him to get us through!

Prayer Suggestion: Father, I do not feel up to the task that is before me at times, but I have decided that I will trust You.

Defensive effort leads Virginia Tech past Radford 65-39

The Virginia Tech men's basketball team limited Radford to a 28-percent shooting performance, including 2-for-24 from three, in a 65-39 win Monday inside Cassell Coliseum.

The Hokies (3-0, 0-0 ACC) had three players score in double figures, led by Storm Murphy, who had 17 points. Justyn Mutts added 11 points and eight rebounds, and Keve Aluma helped out with 10 points and two blocks.

Tech out-rebounded Radford (1-2, 0-0 Big South) 41-32, led by Hunter Cattoor's nine boards.

Virginia Tech's defense held Radford to only 8.3-percent shooting from beyond the arc. The Hokies also limited Bryan Hart to 0-of-7 shooting from downtown and two points in the game. The Highlanders did not have much luck cleaning up their misses on the offensive glass either, as they finished with seven offensive rebounds and managed zero second-chance points while Virginia Tech cleared 34 defensive rebounds.

How It Happened

After being tied at 7-7, Tech went on a 13-0 run with 14:03 left in the first half, culminating in a bucket from Cattoor, to take a 20-7 lead. The Hokies then lost some of that lead, but still entered halftime with a 25-18 advantage. The Hokies did most of their first-half damage in the paint, scoring 14 of their points close to the basket.

Following intermission, Tech kept widening its lead, expanding it to 54-39 before going on an 11-0 run, finished off by Sean Pedulla's three, that grew the lead to 65-

Guard Storm Murphy, a graduate student, scored a season-high 17 points in the Hokies' defeat of the Radford Highlanders Monday in Cassell Coliseum. With the win, Tech improved to 3-0 for the season.

39 with 1:07 to go in the contest. That was the final score. Virginia Tech shot well from three-point range in the second half, hitting seven shots from deep to score 21 of its 40 points.

Game Notes

The Hokies shot well from three-point range, knocking down 10 of 23 long-range attempts.

Storm Murphy led the Hokies with a game-high 17 points.

Virginia Tech never trailed in the second half on its way to the win.

Tech's defense forced 18 turnovers.

Hunter Cattoor led the team with a career-high nine rebounds.

VT men's tennis team hosts weekly wheelchair tennis clinics

For the past six months, the Virginia Tech men's tennis team has hosted a weekly wheelchair tennis clinic at the Burrows-Burleson Tennis Center.

Head coach Jim Thompson's student-athletes voluntarily have led instruction for local adaptive athletes seeking to dive into the sport. On Sunday, Nov. 14, members of the United States Paralympic Wheelchair Tennis team held a public exhibition and clinic in partnership with Hokies tennis.

"It's been super eye-opening for me to make friends that are in a wheelchair and want to play a sport that we always played," Thompson said. "We have a vision to grow this and get more people aware of it."

When Thompson had the idea to get his team involved in wheelchair tennis, he wanted every age group to be represented. Seemingly all ages on the spectrum have shown up. Attendees at Sunday's exhibition and clinic ranged from Scott Willis, 48, to Parker Burgard, 8.

"With any adaptive sport, people kind of have this idea that, 'Oh, this is sort of a rec thing,'" said Jacob Tyree, 29, who previously played for the U.S. National Wheelchair Basketball team. "We are here to compete."

The idea to start the clinic originated when Thompson met Burgard through his wife, B'easy, a school psychologist in Floyd County. Thompson and his son, Frank, who is also a member of the Tech men's tennis team, started practicing with Burgard when he was four years old. Burgard was diagnosed with spina bifida as an infant and has used a wheelchair and crutches his entire life.

VT student-athletes Michael Shepherd, Jordan Chrysostom, and Frank Thompson usually oversee the practice activities among the participants. The Tech tennis players split time between instructing on foot and actually sitting in a sport wheelchair to scrimmage with the adaptive athletes.

"The most fun aspect of this really is putting a smile on the athletes' faces," Shepherd said. He has been connected with wheelchair tennis since his childhood in Australia. "A lot of the time the kids are in a shell because of being in a wheelchair. When they come here, they can open up and be themselves," Shepherd said.

A tidal wave of positivity washes over everyone at the BBTC when the Hokies host a wheelchair tennis clinic. Drew Lucas, 11, traverses in his wheelchair across the courts with a smile, sharing kind-hearted jabs with both attendees and the VT student-athletes. Tyree wallops each serve with precision and focus yet takes the time to encourage each of his fellow adaptive athletes. It's this type of optimistic attitude and outlook that drives Frank Thompson to continue to participate in the clinic on a weekly basis.

"As a tennis player, we go through our own injuries and challenges that we think are really tough," Thompson said. "To see how resilient these guys are to be playing tennis in a wheelchair is incredible."

The first clinic was held in the early spring of 2020, but weekly sessions were halted at the start of the pandemic. Those sessions picked back up again in May of 2021. Jason Harnett, the head coach of the U.S. National Wheelchair Tennis Team, has been in contact with Coach Thompson for the entirety of the program's existence. Their exchanges culminated in the idea of a public showcase for Team USA to hold an exhibition and provide instruction in Blacksburg for aspiring adaptive athletes.

"I think Coach Thompson has a fabulous team of people here," Harnett said. "Just getting the young people engaged in a different side of the tennis world they might not know about. They've been fantastic."

Harnett brought four decorated paralympians to the BBTC to showcase the sport in front of a crowd of Virginia Tech student-athletes, staff, and Blacksburg community members. After the doubles exhibition, the paralympians stuck around to introduce many aspiring wheelchair tennis players and their families to the sport first-hand. Dana Mathewson, the top-rated female wheelchair tennis player in the United States, felt encouraged by the efforts of the Virginia Tech men's tennis team to grow the sport.

"It's been awesome to meet all of the young people trying tennis for the first time; it reminds me of myself growing up," said Mathewson, who participated in both the 2016 Rio and 2020 Tokyo games. "Paralympics are underrepresented, so to see a bunch of people coming here today to see us is a great step forward in growing our sport."

Team USA's arrival on campus brought an impressive crowd to the BBTC, including appearances from Virginia Tech President Timothy Sands and Director of Athletics Whit Babcock.

"It's wonderful on a lot of levels," Babcock said. "It's obviously great for Team USA, and I think it's also wonderful for our student-athletes to be a part of it and to do something great for the community to remind us what's good about sports."

The players on VT men's tennis head coach Jim Thompson's team have for months now voluntarily led instruction in wheelchair tennis. Sunday they teamed with members of the United States Paralympic Wheelchair Team for a public exhibition and clinic.

field, in the classroom or in your personal lives.

“To the fabulous assistant coaches and support staff at Virginia Tech, I can’t express how much I appreciated all of your work and all your sacrifices. It takes so many dedicated, hard-working and loyal people behind the scenes to make a football program run smoothly. Thank you.

Fuente went on to say, “To all the donors who have recently stepped up to make substantial contributions to Virginia Tech Football, please know the importance of your commitment. So many improvements have been made to point our facilities and overall student-athlete experience in the right direction. Thank you to the fans of Hokie Nation. I would encourage all of you to continue cheering on this football team. Your support means so much to all of them.

“Finally,” Fuente said, “to Jenny, Cecilia, Caroline, Charlotte and the rest of our family, thank you for your unwavering love and support. We have all been in this together and we will continue to be in this together on the next step of our journey.

“We leave Blacksburg with many great memories, but above all else, our family cherishes the many relationships that have been established and that will always endure. To all of those players, coaches and staff who are still fighting on, know that the Fuente family is always cheering for you.”

“We sincerely appreciate the contributions that Coach Fuente made to our football program and the positive impact he made on our student-athletes during his time at Virginia Tech,” Babcock said. “While it is never easy to make a change, I believe in order for our football program to attain the type of sustained success that is expected at Virginia Tech, the time was right for new leadership of our football program.

“Virginia Tech is one of the most attractive football jobs in America, competing in one of the nation’s premier conferences, the ACC,” Babcock said. “I’m extremely confident that we’ll be able to identify and hire a new head coach who can build on our rich history and winning tradition.”

“I have full confidence in Whit’s leadership and appreciate his commitment to keep the best interest of the players and the program at the forefront,” Virginia Tech President Dr. Tim Sands said. “Together, we stand in support of our student-athletes as they prepare to complete the season at this challenging time.”

Fuente compiled a 43-31 record in six seasons at Tech. The Tulsa, Okla., native owns a 69-54 career record during 10 seasons as an FBS head coach. Prior to joining the Hokies he guided Memphis to a 26-23 ledger in four seasons.

Interim head coach J.C. Price was a team captain and third-team All-America selection for the Hokies as a senior in 1995. He was a four-year starter on Virginia Tech’s 1995 Big East Championship team and previously served as the strength coach for the Hokies in 1997-98. He returned to Blacksburg in 2021 after spending the previous nine seasons at Marshall University where he most recently served as the Thundering Herds’ co-defensive coordinator and defensive line coach.

Upon Price’s arrival, Fuente said, “First and foremost, we’re excited to welcome J.C. and his family back to Blacksburg. J.C. played an integral role in establishing Tech’s winning tradition and helping the Hokies earn a place on the national stage. We’re not only adding a coach who owns nearly two decades of coaching experience, but J.C. also brings another talented recruiter to our ranks.”

In 2015, Price was named the Conference USA Recruiter of the Year by Scout.com for his contribution to the Thundering Herd’s 2016 recruiting class. He was part of seven Marshall squads that earned bowl berths, the 2014 Conference USA championship, and three C-USA East Division titles.

Marshall led the nation in scoring defense (13 points per game) in 2020 while ranking second in total defense (279.4 yards per game), fourth in rushing defense (95.5 yards per game) and 11th in pass defense (183.9 yards per game) en route to a berth in the Conference USA championship game.

Marshall’s 2015 squad went 10-3 and finished the season with a St. Petersburg Bowl win as the defense totaled 30 sacks and 101 quarterback hurries. Price helped develop defensive tackle Jarquez Samuel into an All-Conference USA second-team selection.

The Herd won the 2014 Conference USA title, finishing the season with a 13-1 record with their only setback coming in a 67-66 overtime loss to Western Kentucky. Marshall’s defense racked up 38 sacks that season to tie for 16th among FBS squads.

With Price coaching Marshall’s defensive tackles, the Herd went 10-4 in 2013 and reached the Conference USA Championship Game.

Price joined Marshall after an eight-season stint at James Madison University (2004-11). The Dukes won the 2004 FCS national championship and made the FCS playoffs on four other occasions during his tenure.

Two sign with Radford University men’s basketball

The Radford men’s basketball program has signed Kyle Burns and Kenyon Giles to national letters of intent, Head Coach Darris Nichols announced Wednesday afternoon. The duo will join the Highlanders as true freshmen for the 2022-23 season.

A 6-3 combo guard from Wheeler High School in Marietta, Ga., Burns is an athletic shot-maker who has all the tools to become a threat on the offensive end from the moment he steps on campus. He helped the Wildcats to a pair of AAAAA state championships and is a crucial piece of the puzzle in their hunt for another title this season.

“We are excited to add Kyle Burns to our team next year,” said assistant coach Shane Nichols. “Kyle is a guard with some length and is very active defensively. He has a good IQ and can dribble, pass, and shoot at a high level. It will be great to see him grow into his body in his time as a Highlander.”

Burns’s coach at Wheeler, Larry Thompson, had this to say about him: “Kyle is the true definition of what it looks like to improve on a day-to-day, year-to-year basis. As a high school sophomore, I noticed how determined and focused he was on improving his game. Kyle’s best basketball days are ahead of him but I’m super proud of his growth and maturity up to this point.”

Giles is a true point guard. Standing at 5-11, he comes to Radford from Silverado High School in Las Vegas, but is originally from Chesapeake, Va. He, received offers from the University of North Carolina Greensboro, Navy, North Carolina A&T, Norfolk State, and the New Jersey Institute of Technology, amongst others.

“We are excited to add Kenyon Giles to our team for next year,” Shane Nichols said. “He is a dynamic guard with shot-making ability and quickness that can help change a game. He comes from a great family, and I think he is a vocal guy that loves the game.”

Silverado High School coach Andy Johnson said, “Kenyon is a terrific leader and is a very good basketball player who will have a major immediate impact at Radford. His high-level work ethic, speed, skill, toughness, and high basketball IQ will be a great addition to the Radford basketball team. Radford University landed a great one in Kenyon Giles.”
