Former councilman Richard Harshberger appointed to fill vacant Radford City Council seat

RADFORD - Former city council member and vice-mayor Dr. Richard "Dick" Harshberger is the newest Radford City Council member, chosen to fill former councilman Onassis Burress's open seat until the next council election in November 2022.

Burress resigned effective Oct. 31 to take an out-ofstate job opportunity.

Radford City Council began a process to fill the vacancy at the beginning of "The council met several times over the course of the month, first developing a process for how to select the interim member and then developing a key list of qualities that the individual would pose," according to a statement from the City of Radford announcing the appointment. "These qualities included experience with city operations; a wealth of knowledge pertaining to Radford and the work of the council; engagement in the community; a shared vision for the direction of Radford; a good, professional representative of the community; a desire to serve; and a passion and love for Radford. Throughout the process, the council engaged with citizens seeking nominations and letters of interest and support before deliberating and selecting the interim member."

Harshberger will begin his duties effective immediately.

"Dr. Harshberger needs no introduction to the Radford community, as he has served on city council previously for 16 years, as a council member and vicemayor," according to the city's announcement. "Dr. Harshberger has also served in various leadership roles individuals are already vital throughout Radford, including service on [numerous] boards, commissions, city. Council is immensely or committees. Dr. Harshberger brings a wealth of for their service and their knowledge, experience, professionalism, engagement, as well as to the citizens of and passion for Radford that Radford for their input," will align with the Council's the city's announcement vision and continue to move said. "This entire process, Radford forward."

who offered to fill the role.

The council would be remiss not to mention the others who stepped up and volunteered to serve in this interim role. There were a number of excellent and well-qualified nominees who came forward. These to the community and certainly have a future in this grateful to each of them willingness to serve more, especially council's interactions with each of these only strengthened the current council's conviction that Radford has a very strong future."

Radford's city code says the "appointee shall serve only until a member is elected at the next ensuing special election," so Harshberger will serve until the next election is held in November of 2022.

According to Radford Voter Registrar Tracy Howard, whoever is then elected in November 2022 would take office immediately upon qualification and would serve the remainder of the term, until Dec. 31,

Radford University nursing programs ranked as best in Virginia by nursingprocess.org

The Radford University Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN) programs have been ranked as the best BSN programs in the state of Virginia by nursingprocess.org.

To determine its rankings, nursingprocess.org gathered a list of all nursing schools offering BSN programs in every state and then ranked them based on the following three factors: the average National Council Licensure Examination (NCLEX-RN) first-time pass rates of the most recent five years (40% of overall score); the programs' academic quality: enrollment, graduation and retention rates (30% of overall score); and the nursingprocess.org editorial staff ratings and nursing school reputation (30% of overall score).

The data required for the rankings were gathered from the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS), state board of nursing websites, U.S. News & World Report, Niche, Grad Reports, Rate My Professors, and the official school websites.

The ranking information on nursingprocess. org's website highlights that U.S. News & World Report cited Radford's BSN programs as some of the best in the country.

"This ranking is a testament to our school of nursing faculty and staff's commitment to quality education and focus on individual students," said Johnnie Sue Wijewardane, dean of the Radford University School of Nursing. "Our students interact daily with committed faculty who demonstrate a passion for educating nurses and for mentoring nursing students and graduates as they transition into practice and beyond," said Wijeward-ane. "These meaningful interactions with faculty and our exceptional clinical partners provide our students with a first-class nursing education experience."

Foyer of The Inn at Virginia Tech decked out for annual decorated tree contest

The Inn at Virginia Tech and Skelton Conference Center is getting into the holiday spirit with the return of the popular Fashions for Evergreens decorated tree contest.

Now in its 16th year, the annual competition features themed trees decorated by 15 local businesses and organizations. Public viewing and voting will continue through Sunday, Dec. 12.

Visitors can vote in person by using a QR code at the inn or online on the inn's Facebook page. The winning trees will be announced at an awards ceremony on Wednesday, Dec. 15.

Trees will remain on display through Jan. 2.

"Each year, our foyer's creatively designed trees present awe-inspiring decorating ideas in an extraordinary display. After you take in all of the dazzling trees, be sure to cast a vote for your favorite," said the inn's sales director, Teresa Hughes.

In addition, from 6 to 8 p.m. on Dec. 10 and 17, the Blacksburg High School Madrigals will sing carols at the inn.

The inn will be closed for seven days beginning Dec. 23 and will reopen on Dec. 30. This will allow for completion of property upgrades and system improvements.

VT names Brent Pry, former grad assistant under Frank Beamer, new head football coach

Virginia Tech has its new football coach, Penn State defensive coordinator Brent Pry. The announcement came in the midst of major coaching changes throughout the country's college

The new coach is no stranger to Blacksburg. He served as a graduate assistant under Frank Beamer from 1995-97.

He was formally introduced to the media on Thursday in the fifth-floor dining area of Lane Stadium. 'On behalf of Amy and our family, we are extremely grateful to President Sands and Whit for extending us this opportunity at Virginia Tech, Pry said. "Working for Coach Beamer and Coach Foster as a graduate assistant in the 1990s, I was privileged to have been a part of this program as the Hokies established themselves as a national power, consistently proving they could beat anyone in the nation. "Even after I departed Blacksburg,

I always continued to appreciate Virginia Tech, its great players, its championship teams, and its wonderful traditions from afar," the new head coach said. "The resources, facilities, the university's backing of athletics, and the phenomenal fan support that Virginia Tech enjoys made this a very desirable situation. But just as importantly, the opportunity to raise our children in a community like Blacksburg also has great appeal. We can't wait to meet the team, the support staff, and Hokie Nation. We will be prepared to hit the ground running in order to attract the type of student-athletes to Virginia Tech who can help us achieve sustained success. Go Hokies!"

Pry indicated that J.C. Price will remain on his staff as associate head

A Virginia Tech wildlife epidemiologist and conservation expert is warning hunters to be cautious in the wake of recent findings that indicate deer populations across the U.S. have been exposed to and infected with SARS-CoV-2.

VT wildlife epidemiologist warns of SARS-CoV-2 infections among deer populations

COVID-19 infections among deer populations risk wildlife conservation efforts, says VT wildlife epidemiologist and conservation expert Luis Escobar. He also warns deer hunters to take precaution while hunting what may be infected deer.

Escobar says that while the role of deer as a source of COVID-19 infections to humans is unclear, wildlife conservation efforts are at risk.

"We know that pathogens circulating in deer could reduce the interest of the people on deer-related activities, which in the end is detrimental for the conservation of many wildlife species," says Escobar.

According to Escobar, recreational activities linked to deer, such as hunting, are a key element to generate revenue to support wildlife conservation efforts for many endangered species in many different regions of the country, also known as the North American model of wildlife conservation.

"We need more open, widespread, and proactive epidemiological surveillance in wildlife to better inform disease management. We generally have reactive control responses once outbreaks occur," says Escobar. "Many pathogens circulate naturally in deer, but to understand the extent to which pathogens negatively impact deer populations, disease surveys need to be sustained and studied across multiple federal agencies."

As a precaution, Escobar says that hunters should avoid handling or consuming deer that appear to be sick because some of the diseases affecting deer may also affect humans.

Luis Escobar is an assistant professor of disease ecology in the Department of Fish and Wildlife Conservation and an affiliated faculty at the Center for Emerging, Zoonotic, and Arthropod-borne Pathogens and at the Global Change Center, both at Virginia Tech.

Product shortages pit consumers against each other, according to Virginia Tech expert Electronics, furniture, appliances, turkeys, pies, Christmas trees, even champagne for New Year's Eve. It's all backordered and held up in the supply chain, or so we hear.

"Resource scarcity of any kind, including the products that consumers may want to buy, is shown to foster a 'competitive mindset' — prompting them to keep their own interests front and center," says VT marketing professor Shilpa Madan.

"Simply put, research shows that such scarce deals can even result in consumer aggression," Madan says. "This is because deals that limit product quantities inherently pit consumers against each other and lead them to see others as competitive threats blocking their access to coveted goods."

Madan offers advice to those trying not to panic-

If these scarce products are meant to be gifts, the age-old wisdom of ordering gifts early still applies. If you cannot find your first choice, look for substitutes. Most consumer goods are made by multiple companies, and sites like Etsy and eBay can prove valuable in finding substitutes.

Another idea to avoid supply chain constraints is to buy domestically made, local products. US-based supply chains are running better than global ones, and hence, local products could be more readily available than foreign-made ones.

If you are absolutely unable to get your hand on a coveted item, give the recipient a gift card for that company or retailer. They might have to wait a bit longer for that cherished item, but it's better than something they do not want or like. And anyway, research shows that half the fun is in anticipa-

Companies worldwide are working at various steps in the supply chain to resolve the backlogs and constraints, so it is unlikely that staple goods will be in short supply for long.

GUSTAVO FRING FOR PEXELS

"Merely being reminded of product scarcity or being told that they must do their holiday shopping early due to supply chain related shortages makes consumers more likely to act in their own selfish interests," according to Virginia Tech marketing professor and consumer behavior expert Shilpa Madan.

COVID-19 update: Flu cases up in region; health officials eye new variant

Noelle Bissell, health director of the New River Health District, said during a meeting with news media Monday a new variant to the COVID-19 virus, the omicron variant, has been detected in other countries. So far, it hasn't made its way to the New River Valley, she said. Dr. Bissell said she suspects that omicron already is in the United States, but it hasn't been officially documented.

Dr. Bissell also told the media that the district has seen a bump in flu cases, in particular flu A, which often is more severe and symptomatic, Bissell said. Specifically, the virus was spreading among college students just before the Thanksgiving holiday break. In some of these instances, people have been sicker with the flu than they were with CO-VID-19, Bissell said. She told the media the district expects to see a rise in COV-ID-19 cases as a result of people gathering during the Thanksgiving holiday. Still, coupled with the news of the omicron variant, Bissell said she doesn't expect that the region will have the same big surge in COVID-19 infections as occurred with the delta variant and before vaccines were available. That's because "we have a substantial number of people who are vaccinated and who have gotten booster shots," she said. Usually when these viruses do mutate, they're not more deadly. They tend to be more transmissible but less deadly."

Currently, the health district director said, coronavirus cases in the New River Health District have plateaued with about 200 cases a week for the district. Also, hospitalizations for patients with COVID-19 are down in the region. With the spread of many seasonal respiratory illnesses, people should be tested for both COVID-19 and the flu if they experience symptoms, Dr. Bissell said.

"We are asking that people not assume that it is a cold or allergies," she said.

Right now, it's also important that people take steps to mitigate the spread of many respiratory illnesses, such as the flu, COVID-19, and others, she said. That includes getting vaccinated for flu and COVID-19, washing hands frequently, avoiding crowded spaces, and wearing masks indoors in poorly ventilated spaces. 'We are asking everyone to do their part and slow the spread of all of these infections," Bissell said. "What works for COVID works for respiratory syncytial virus (RSV) and flu as well."

Virginia is 2021's state with the fourth-best elder-abuse protections determine how well the states are doing in protecting the elderly from abuse, the personal finance website WalletHub compared the 50 states and the District of Columbia based on 16 key indicators of elderabuse protection in three overall categories.

The rankings the survey yielded placed Virginia as the state with the fourth-best elder-abuse protections.

WalletHub reports that by one estimate, elder abuse affects as much as 10% of the population older than 60, and many cases go unreported. Our elderly population is especially vulnerable during the COVID-19 pandemic, so it's especially important to make sure they have adequate living conditions and don't get taken advantage of finan-

Fortunately, states recognize that elder abuse is a real and growing issue. But sadly, only some are fighting hard enough to stop it.

According to WalletHub, unless states take action to prevent further abuse, the problem will grow as America becomes an increasingly aging nation. The U.S. Census Bureau expects the population aged 65 and older to nearly double from 43.1 million in 2012 to 85.7 million in 2050, much to the credit of aging Baby Boomers who began turning 65 in 2011. And by just 2030, one in five U.S. residents will be retirement age.

WalletHub's survey, released Wednesday, Dec. 1, ranked the following states as those with the most protection in place for the elderly: 1) Wisconsin 2) Massachusetts 3) Vermont 4) Virginia 5) West Virginia 6) Washington 7) Iowa 8) Maine 9) Wyoming and 10) North Carolina. At the other end, the survey ranked the following states as those with the least protection in place for the elderly: 42) New Mexico 43) Nebraska 44) Nevada 45) Tennessee 46) South Dakota 47) New Jersey 48) California 49) South Carolina 50) Montana and 51) Utah.

Pry worked with Price during his senior season as a player in 1995 when Tech finished the season with 10 consecutive wins, culminating with a 28-10 win in the Sugar Bowl over No.-9 coaching veteran. He has played an instrumental role in coaching top 10 defenses Western Carolina. Since his promotion to defensive coordinator in 2016, the Nittany Lions have posted three seasons with 11 wins and four seasons with nine or more victories. He helped the Nittany Lions to the 2016 Big Ten Championship when they defeated No.-6 Wisconsin in that conference's championship game.

Pry, 51, is a 30-year

His longtime association with current Penn State head coach James Franklin dates back to 1993-94 when Franklin was the quarterback for East Stroudsburg University and Pry coached outside linebackers and defensive backs.

Pry was a 2021 Broyles Award nominee for the top assistant coach in the country as the Nittany Lions ranked fourth nationally in Red Zone defense (66.7%), seventh in scoring defense (16.8 ppg), eighth in defenat Penn State, Vanderbilt, sive pass efficiency (111.98), Georgia Southern, and and held their opponents to 4.7 yards per play.

Under Pry's direction in 2020, Penn State ranked third in the Big Ten in total defense (328.8 ypg), good for 17th nationally; second in pass defense (198.6 ypg), second in tackles for loss (6.7 per game,) and fourth in rush defense (130.2 ypg).

Pry's defense helped lead Penn State to an 11-2 record in 2019, ranking eighth nationally in scoring defense (16.0 ppg). The Nittany Lions also led the nation in fewest yards per carry (2.6) and forced fumbles (22), while ranking fifth in rushing defense (95.0 ypg). The Penn State defense led the nation in sacks per game (3.62) and ranked fourth in tackles for loss (8.2) in 2018. His 2018 squad also ranked fifth in the county in yards per pass attempt (5.67), eighth in defensive pass efficiency (106.1), and 11th in Red Zone scoring percentage (.750).

Virginia Tech is getting a great coach and a wonderful fit for our football program in Brent Pry," Hall-of-Fame coach Frank Beamer said. "Not only is Brent exceptionally intelligent, he also possesses a great deal of football knowledge. Growing up as the son of a coach, he's been around the game all of his life. I'm confident that he'll do a tremendous job as head coach of the Pry's father, Jim, played collegiately at Marshall and began his own 40-year college coaching career at his alma mater in 1973-74. The elder Pry went on to enjoy a distinguished career that included stints at Illinois, Duke, Dartmouth, Akron, East Stroudsburg University, Buffalo, VMI, and Bethune-Cookman, as well as time as a high school head coach.

"It's been such a pleasure to watch Brent grow, mature, and excel at a very high level in the coaching profession," said former Tech defensive coordinator Bud Foster, who has served as a longtime mentor to Pry. "I'm so excited that he's earned this opportunity to lead our football program. The best coaches are the ones who are always striving to get better, who are open to new ideas, and who can put their players in the best position to be successful. Brent embodies all of those qualities and so many others that it takes to be a leader. I'm so excited that he's coming back to Virginia Tech."

Prv served as co-defensive coordinator at Vanderbilt from 2011-13 prior to his arrival in State College, Pennsylvania. While at Georgia Southern in 2010, his defensive unit helped the Eagles to a win over No.-1 Appalachian State and an appearance in the NCAA Football Championship Subdivision semifinals. A member of the Memphis staff from 2007-09, Pry's defensive line corps helped the Tigers to back-to-back bowl appearances. He also coached at Louisiana-Lafayette (2002-06), helping the Ragin' Cajuns to their first Sun Belt Conference championship following a fouryear tour of duty at Western Carolina (1998-01). During his stint as a graduate assistant at Tech from 1995-97, he was part of a staff that guided the Hokies to three bowl berths.

Pry lettered as a defensive back at the University of Buffalo before suffering a career-ending injury. He began his coaching career as an undergraduate student in 1992. He graduated with a degree in history from Buffalo in 1993. Pry and his wife, Amy, are the parents of a son, Colby, and two daughters: Madeline and Catherine.

Virginia Tech researcher tackles restoring the Florida Everglades

During the past century, the Florida Everglades have faced habitat loss, declining biodiversity, and an ecological collapse.

This area has been dramatically altered by water management decisions to improve flood management, urban water supply, and agricultural production across south Florida and now must compete for water with urban and agricultural areas. Southern Florida is now in turn polluted by contaminated runoff from these two sectors.

Nearly 21 years ago, then-President George W. Bush signed Senate bill S.2796 into law. This bill enacted the Water Resources Development Act of 2000, legislation that authorizes projects for water resources development, conservation and other hydrology-related studies across the United States. One mandated study in particular would gather a diverse group of researchers, including a member of the Virginia Tech community, to tackle one wicked ecological problem: restoring the Florida Everglades.

Jeff Walters, the Harold Bailey Professor of Biological Sciences and Global Change Center affiliate, joined Virginia Tech's College of Science in 1994. Specializing in the behavioral ecology and conservation of birds, Walters has worked with government agencies, non-governmental organizations, and the public to achieve and promote conservation of bird populations. His research of the Red-Cockaded Woodpecker and other endangered birds in the United States led him to Florida, home to many of our nation's avian species, where he has worked for nearly 30 years at Eglin Air Force Base in the Florida panhandle.

Through this multi-billion dollar project, Congress mandated biennial reviews of restoration progress by the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering and Medicine (NASEM). The National Academies' Committee on Everglades Restoration Progress, of which Walters is a member, has provided this independent scientific review since 2004. "A lot of times, people making policy decisions different versions of science from different stakeholders," Walters said. "So, there is often a need to bring in people from the outside who aren't part of the stakeholder groups but have the right expertise to review everything and tell them what they think of the Walters's knowledge of avian ecology and experience in science arbitration made him a natural candidate for helping the nation restore the Florida Everglades, the largest subtropical wilderness reserve on the North American continent.

Now in its ninth rendition, the committee continues to work with several federal and state agencies, including the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the South Florida Water Management District. Walters has been appointed to six out of nine NASEM com- from the Kissimmee River mittees including the cur- towards Lake Okeechobee rent one, which held its first and finally to the Everglades meeting this past August. in the wet season, it begins The most recent report, to mix with saltwater from Progress Toward Restoring the coasts. "The panel has projected what will happen with more rainfall and higher temperatures due to climate change," Walters said. "As you can imagine, sea-level rise is a huge issue with the restoration. Two feet is a dramatic amount of elevation in the everglades so they have to incorporate that into their planning.

Sea-level rise isn't the only concern that the restoration efforts are facing. Much of Florida sits atop an intricate aquifer system the fresh water moves south their home.

Walters says, "The restoration is not just about the Everglades; it's the water supply plan for South Florida, how they're going to have enough water for urban areas, agriculture, and the ecosystem. It's also flood control. All of these things are interwoven."

NO LONGER A STRANGER

Read: Ephesians 1:1 through 3:21

Being a stranger in a new setting always causes a little anxiety. There are new faces and places. There are strange smells and sounds. There are new sights. The more foreign the land, the more intense these differences seem. Having a guide, someone who is familiar with the place and who can introduce us to new people, is very helpful.

Consequently, you are no longer foreigners and strangers, but fellow citizens with God's people and also members of his household (Ephesians 2:19).

At one time, we were all strangers to God's kingdom and to His promises. But in Christ, we find our way. He has "brought us near" when once we were "far off." It is through His blood that He has brought us into the Kingdom. Because of Him we are no longer strangers and foreigners, but we are fellow citizens in God's house.

Like a guide, Jesus is the one who has bought our passage and being part of God's household.

Comcast to broadcast ACC Network to NRV

Marty Gordon

NRVsports@ourvalley.org

Comcast customers in Blacksburg will finally be given the chance to see Virginia Tech football and other athletic events, beginning almost immediately Announced earlier this week, Comcast will distribute the ACC Network (ACCN) to its Xfinity customers, allowing fans and followers of the Atlantic Coast Conference to access the multiplatform network in the coming weeks. The availability of ACCN is part of Comcast's and The Walt Disney Company's content carriage agreement renewal that will continue to make Disney's programming available to Xfinity TV customers.

"ACCN provides tremendous value to college sports fans, and we are excited about this agreement with Comcast, which ensures subscribers will have access to the full slate of content offered on ACCN and ACCNX," said Ilan Ben-Hanan, Senior Vice President of Programming and Acquisitions for ESPN. "ACC fans will now have the opportunity to watch ACCN's extensive lineup of live sporting events, studio shows, and original programming in the coming weeks," Ben-Hanan said.

"We are thrilled that ACC Network has reached full distribution with the addition of Comcast to our already robust lineup of providers," said ACC Commissioner Jim Phillips. "ACC Network, led by Jimmy Pitaro and Burke Magnus, continues to be an outstanding partner that does a tremendous job of showcasing our student-athletes, coaches, and programs. This is a milestone moment in the short history of ACCN, and we appreciate the continued leadership at Disney, ESPN, and ACCN for working diligently to make this a reality."

ACCN annually televises more than 500 regular-season and tournament games from across the conference's 27 sponsored sports, including football, baseball, softball, field hockey, volleyball, wrestling, men's and women's basketball, lacrosse, and soccer, plus a complement of news and information shows and original programming.

During this past year's football season, Hokie fans were left in the dark and had to find other ways to watch football games as the ACC Network games were not available in the area.

Together, ACCN and its digital platform, ACCNX, combine to feature more than 1,500 ACC events each year. The network is an all-access pass to nationally competitive events, expert analysis, documentaries, classic games, and in-depth features on the premier athletic and academic conference in college athletics.

The ACC Network is owned and operated by ESPN in partnership with the Atlantic Coast Conference, ACC Network (ACCN) and its digital platform ACCNX, which is a 24/7 national network dedicated to ACC sports that launched on August 22, 2019.

Virginia Tech University Club opens at Lane Stadium

ClubCorp, a company considered to be one of the world leaders in private clubs and Virginia Tech, have partnered to build a new, premier venue within Lane Stadium, the University Club of Virginia Tech, designed to bring an already engaged fan base even closer to the university. The event area officially opened this week.

The University Club is a yearround private dining and social club located inside what was previously the President's Suite of Lane Stadium. With its soft opening on Dec. 1, 2021, the University Club of Virginia Tech offers premium dining, event and meeting spaces, engaging programming, and pregame celebrations designed to bring Hokie fans, faculty, alumni, and the Blacksburg community

"The University Club of Vir-

VHSL partners with Dairy Alliance naming chocolate milk its official protein beverage

The Virginia High School League has entered into a multiyear partnership with The Dairy Alliance naming chocolate milk as the VHSL's official protein bever-

Chocolate milk is a natural source of high-quality protein with a 3:1 carb-to-protein ratio to refuel muscles, which is scientifically shown to help restore muscles quickly to their peak potential. Milk also has vitamins and minerals to help build and maintain strong bones, essential in reducing the risk of stress fractures.

"We are excited and are very appreciative to have The Dairy Alliance join the VHSL as a partner and help support the student-athletes in the Commonwealth of Virginia." said Billy Haun, the VHSL's executive director. "The Dairy Alliance will be a great partner with the VHSL in providing the very best support for education-based athletics and fulfilling our mission to provide high standards and outstanding experiences for school activities and competitions."

"On behalf of the dairy farm families of Virginia, The Dairy Alliance is proud to partner with the VHSL in naming chocolate milk as the official protein beverage for the Virginia High School League," said Geri Berdak, CEC of the nonprofit group. "We are very excited to educate high school athletes, parents, and coaches on the benefits of chocolate milk's unique package of 13 essential nutrients, including eight grams of high-quality protein, to help fuel optimal athletic performance for student athletes across the commonwealth.'

Former RU soccer teammates are now pros in Puerto Rico

Former Highlander legends Nelia Perez and Jasmine Casarez have moved on as teammates for Puerto Rico Sol FC, a professional soccer club based in Mayaguez, Puerto Rico, that competes in a league called Liga Puerto Rico.

Casarez and Perez were stars when they wore the Highlander uniforms. On the field together in 2018, the duo paired up on nine goals that were assisted by the other and totaled 12 goals in the three years they spent together at Radford.

The most notable shining moment for Casarez and Perez came in 2018 when Radford won the first of two straight Big South Tour-nament Championships for which Casarez earned Tournament MVP honors in addition to her Attacking Player of the Year award. Perez was named to the All-Tournament team in that 2018 championship run.

After Casarez graduated in 2019, the duo was split up for a while. Casarez pursued her professional career while in her senior season Perez led the Highlanders in points and earned First-Team All-Big South honors and her own Big South Tournament MVP nod as Radford won that secondconsecutive title.

While Perez continued to make her mark on the field for the Highlanders, in October 2019, Casarez announced that she had signed with Puerto Rico Sol FC. Her relationship with her coaches in Puerto Rico helped Perez eventually to wind up with the club. In addition to her decorated career in Radford, Perez competes for the Puerto Rican senior women's national

That place on the national team and some advocacy from Casarez allowed the Puerto Rico Sol brass to see Perez play, and in September 2021, Perez announced that she had signed with the club. Since then, the pair of Highlanders find themselves regularly in the starting 11 for the club, continuing their rich history of on-field

Casarez lists the 2018 Big South title as her favorite memory in Radford red, but the connection the two players share on the field extends off the field. When Casarez speaks of that 2018 championship, the love she holds for her teammates comes through so that winning the title is a cherished memory but doing it with a group of people who truly cared about each other made it that much better.

VT engineering professor Chris Roy recently qualified for and competed in the Ironman 70.3 World Championship in St. George, Utah.

Triathlons keep engineering professor at the top of his game

In a healthy dialogue or debate in class, students might have a fighting chance. Otherwise, if those same students want to go head-to-head with Chris Roy, they had better do the legwork and come prepared. It also may help to have a bit of endurance and

In the classroom, Roy, a professor in the Kevin T. Crofton Department of Aerospace and Ocean Engineering, tackles complex problems in computational fluid dynamics. He teaches courses in aero/hydrodynamics, verification and validation in scientific computing, and turbulence modeling and simulation.

Outside the classroom, Roy spends his free time training for and competing in triathlons. In 2021 alone, he has competed in 12 of these endurance races. His most recent accomplishment was qualifying for and competing at the Ironman 70.3 (also known as the half-Ironman) World Championship.

As he moved into the world of academia, Roy found swimming to be the outlet he needed to take a break from the long hours of research and mental strain that come with computational work. "I find it to be a huge help in stress relief," he said. "Swimming and later on, biking, were a way to help turn off my mind and focus on something else for a

In the past decade, Roy incorporated running into his fitness regime, and he tackled his first triathlon in 2013. From there, he was hooked.

Shortly after Roy qualified for the world championship race in 2019, the global CO-VID-19 pandemic hit. All races, competitions, and events where athletes might gather and draw crowds of spectators were halted.

Despite the disappointment, Roy continued with his training. As a substitute for the formal races that were continually being postponed or canceled, Roy created his own triathlons in the New River Valley for himself and a handful of local triathletes. As official events began to open up again in 2021, he overloaded his schedule, sometimes participating in both a sprint race and an Olympicdistance race in the same weekend.

After his qualified entry was deferred and Edmonton was canceled twice, he participated in the Carilion Clinic Ironman 70.3 Virginia's Blue Ridge triathlon in Roanoke.

There he qualified in his age group for the Ironman 70.3 World Championship in St. George, Utah.

St. George, a city in southwestern Utah known for its iconic Red Rocks, hosted the 2021 Ironman 70.3 World Championship in September. "Two weeks before the race, the daily highs reached 108 degrees, and I thought, 'what have I gotten myself into?" Roy said. "On the race day, a rare storm came through, and it ended up being much cooler than anticipated."

Roy competes in the 50-54 age group, among athletes from around the world. First up: the 1.2 mile swim. The one-loop open water swim took place in the Sand Hollow Reservoir at Sand Hollow State Park near Hurricane, Utah. With the swim leg being one of his strongest, Roy had the third-fastest time of the 268 athletes in his age group.

Straight out of the water, the athletes immediately transitioned to the cycling portion of the race. During this leg of Roy's race, the aforementioned storm unleashed high winds, rain, hail, and lightning. "About 28 miles into the bike, I was riding 20-25 miles per hour while battling a 30-mile-per-hour crosswind," Roy said. "I had to lean over to brace myself against the wind, white knuckling it and hoping not to crash."

During the cycling portion of the race,

Roy finished 25th in his age group. For the final 13.1 miles, athletes tackled the two-loop course on foot. Roy said that the running portion of the race is the weakest of his three disciplines. During this leg in St. George, he suffered from quad and hamstring cramps, all the while enduring a run on a course with two miles of 15 percent grade downhill.

In this last leg of the race, Roy finished 168th among the runners, giving him an overall finish of 44th place in the 50-54 age

After his recovery from the Ironman, Roy continues to train, track his results, and make improvements. His next goal is to perform well at the 2022 Toyota Age Group National Championships held in Milwaukee in August, where he hopes to again qualify for Team USA and compete in the Olympic Distance World Championship in 2023.
