

Snow blankets Radford after warm start to 2022

Monday brought a few inches of snow to Radford after unseasonable warmth just two days earlier. Temperatures peaked in Radford at 73 degrees on Saturday, dropping throughout Sunday with rain turning to snow by Monday morning. Roads, like Tyler Avenue, pictured here, were cleared by afternoon, but there was still enough snow on grassy surfaces for children and pets alike to enjoy, including this three-year-old Black Labrador who enjoyed catching snow balls.

Radford schools awarded VDOE School Security Equipment Grants

Radford City Public Schools is among the grant awardees recently announced by the Virginia Department of Education for a total of $12 million in state School Security Equipment Grants.

The VDOE said the grants will be used “to protect students, faculty, and visitors in 583 schools in 93 school divisions. The grants will pay for video monitoring systems, voice and video internal communications systems, school bus interior cameras, mass notification systems, visitor-identification systems, access control systems, two-way radios, security vestibules, and other security upgrades.”

Radford was awarded $82,915 for Belle Heth Elementary, John N. Dalton Intermediate, and Radford High School.

A local match of 25 percent is required of most divisions with only three school divisions with composite indices of local-ability-to-pay of less than 0.2 — Buena Vista, Lee County, and Scott County — exempt from the local-match requirement.

“The health and safety of students and school staff is paramount,” said Superintendent of Public Instruction James Lane. “These grants are an important part of equipping schools with the systems necessary to mitigate security risks, detect threats, and connect schools with first responders. The commonwealth continues to lead the nation in proactively addressing school safety as VDOE works in partnership with other state agencies and local school divisions to keep students, faculty, and visitors safe in our schools.”

The criteria for making the awards developed by VDOE and the Virginia Department of Criminal Justice Services were to give priority to schools “most in need of modern security equipment, schools with relatively high numbers of offenses, schools with equipment needs identified by a school security audit, and schools in divisions least able to afford security upgrades,” according to the VDOE.

The School Security Equipment Grants program was established by the 2013 General Assembly in the aftermath of the 2012 mass shooting at Sandy Hook Elementary in Newtown, Conn. The 2019 Appropriation Act doubled the total annual appropriation for the grant program — effective in 2020 — from $6 million to $12 million.

As Omicron spreads, health officials urge those with mild COVID cases to avoid already overburdened emergency rooms

RICHMOND, VA — As the Omicron variant spreads and COVID-19 cases and hospitalizations surge, Virginia public health officials and hospital leaders are urging individuals with asymptomatic or mild coronavirus cases, or other non-serious illnesses to avoid unnecessary trips to already burdened hospital emergency departments.

Hospitals across Virginia have recently experienced an influx of patients seeking emergency department care for asymptomatic or relatively mild COVID-19 infections as well as cases of the flu or other seasonal illness. In many cases, a hospital emergency department is not the appropriate venue for patients with mild to moderate COVID-19 symptoms to seek medical care. Most individuals who contract coronavirus do not need to visit the hospital emergency department and can effectively recover from their illness at home, or by seeking primary care treatment and/or speaking with their primary care provider.

People with severe COVID-19 symptoms such as significant difficulty breathing, intense chest pain, severe weakness, or an elevated temperature that persists for days unabated are among those who should consider seeking emergency medical care for their condition.

Individuals should not visit the emergency department if the symptoms of their illness are mild to moderate — including a cough, sore throat, runny nose, or body aches — or simply for the purpose of having a COVID-19 test administered. In those situations, people are encouraged to instead consult an outpatient primary care provider.

Unnecessary visits to hospital emergency departments place great strain on hospitals and the frontline clinicians and caregivers who continue to bravely battle the pandemic. These visits can also cause a delay in care for patients experiencing a true medical crisis and contribute to the depletion of finite resources including medical staff, testing kits, personal protective equipment, and therapeutic treatments.

Virginia launches statewide mortgage relief program

Virginia Governor Ralph Northam has announced the launch of a statewide Mortgage Relief Program to help people stay in their homes and help ease mortgage delinquencies, defaults, and foreclosures due to the pandemic.

Applications for the program opened on Monday, Jan. 3.

The Mortgage Relief Program is similar to the Virginia Rent Relief Program which has received national recognition for its success. Virginia was one of the first states in the nation to create a statewide rent and mortgage relief program with federal Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act funds.

The commonwealth has implemented rent and mortgage relief programs through designated state and federal resources. Combined, these programs have provided more than $519.5 million in 106,621 rent relief payments for more than 76,500 households across Virginia. Families with children represent the majority of households assisted by the program.

“Virginia is taking aggressive steps to help people stay in their homes,” said the governor. “Owning a home is the American dream, and this new program will help keep that dream alive.”

The Commonwealth of Virginia received more than $258 million through the U.S. Department of the Treasury’s Homeowners Assistance Fund to support homeowners facing housing instability resulting from the COVID-19 pandemic.

“Providing housing stability and supporting Virginia homeowners is of the utmost importance right now as we continue to advance our recovery efforts from the pandemic,” said Virginia Housing Chief Executive Officer Susan F. Dewey. “This program will protect homeowners at risk of losing their homes, thereby strengthening our communities and our economy and improving the lives of many Virginians across the commonwealth. Our mission is to help Virginians attain quality, affordable housing and foster successful homeownership, and this program directly aligns with our goals by providing vital financial support to homeowners during a time of great need.”

Eligible homeowners must have experienced a reduction of income or increase in living expenses after Jan. 21, 2020, and must currently own and occupy the property as their primary residence. Maximum income limits and other eligibility requirements must be met.

Funds from the Virginia Mortgage Relief Program will be distributed directly to mortgage lenders and servicers, contracts for deed holders, county treasurers or local taxing authorities, property insurance companies, and homeowner and condominium associations.

Utility assistance is not an eligible expense under the Virginia Mortgage Relief Program but is available under other state, local, or private sector programs.

Newer, larger vehicles offer teen drivers a safer ride

Driving an older-model vehicle or a hand-me-down car is a common rite of passage for many teenage drivers.

Given that teenagers have the highest risk of being involved in a wreck, most parents avoid buying their children a new car because of the expense. However, according to a 2020 study conducted by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, teens' higher crash risk may be among the best reasons to invest in newer vehicles.

Analyzing crash data from 2013 to 2017, IIHS found 62.4% of teen drivers involved in fatal crashes were driving vehicles between six and 15 years old. From 2008 to 2012, the figure was 65.4%.

When compared to newer models, older vehicles lack modern safety technology that protects drivers, such as side airbags, emergency braking systems, and electronic stability control. The IIHS study also revealed teens driving cars less than 3 years old—vehicles that have standard advanced safety technology—accounted for only 3.7% of all fatalities between 2013 and 2017.

"Parents looking for a safe and reliable car for a new driver should consult with a list compiled by IIH, and examine the safety features to make sure teens are going to be protected in the event of a crash," said David Tenenbaum, Virginia Farm Bureau Mutual Insurance Co. actuarial manager.

"New vehicles offer the latest in both crash protection and crash avoidance for safety-conscious consumers," he said. "In the last few years, many automakers have added numerous safety features like lane departure warnings, front crash prevention systems, and blind spot detection.

"IIHS research also showed more than a quarter of teens involved in fatal accidents were driving vehicles classified as micro, mini or small."

Due to their lighter mass, smaller cars pose an increased risk to motorists because they cannot withstand collisions with larger, heavier vehicles. Additionally, the smaller front end of a small vehicle offers less protection than that of a larger one.

For the second year,

IIHS has teamed up with Consumer Reports to publish a guide that lists affordable, safe and reliable vehicles for teen drivers.

Despite increased demand for new and used vehicles and supply shortages caused by the COVID-19 pandemic, the two organizations have identified 61 vehicles between $6,400 to $19,800 that meet strict safety criteria.

The full list can be viewed online.

"With used car prices so high this year, it may be tempting to have a newly licensed teen make do with a clunker or to buy them the smallest, cheapest new car available," said IIHS president David Harkey. "As usual, we're asking families to put safety at the center of this decision."

Virginia gas prices fall yet again

Virginia gas prices fell 0.8 cents per gallon in the past week, averaging $3.15/g Monday according to GasBuddy's daily survey of 4,081 stations in Virginia. Gas prices in Virginia are 7.7 cents per gallon lower than a month ago and stand $1.03/g higher than a year ago.

According to GasBuddy price reports, the cheapest station in Virginia was priced at $2.71/g Monday while the most expensive was $3.74/g, a difference of $1.03/g.

The national average price of gasoline has fallen 1 cent per gallon in the last week, averaging $3.27/g Monday. The national average is down 9.1 cents per gallon from a month ago and stands $1.02/g higher than a year ago.

"After a pretty long run of falling gas prices, we've seen things stabilize," said Patrick De Haan, head of petroleum analysis for GasBuddy. "Oil prices have started to rise as Omicron hasn't been as severe as initially feared, leading to optimism that perhaps oil demand will start to rise in the weeks ahead as cases will eventually plateau.

"In addition, Great Lakes states were expected to see a price hike last week, but the hike hasn't happened just yet, leading me to believe it will occur in short order this week and send the national average higher," De Haan said. "For the rest of the nation, with oil near $76 per barrel, we will likely see gas price decreases replaced by minor price increases."

GasBuddy is the authoritative voice for gas prices and the only source for station-level data spanning nearly two deacades. GasBuddy's survey updates 288 times every day from the most diverse list of sources covering nearly 150,000 stations nationwide, the most comprehensive and up-to-date in the country. GasBuddy data are accessible at <http://prices.GasBuddy.com>.

gians have died from COVID-19 during the course of this pandemic, and thousands have been hospitalized," said State Health Commissioner M. Norman Oliver. "The best defense against serious illness and hospitalization from COVID-19 is to get vaccinated. If you have not gotten vaccinated or boosted and are eligible, please do so now. Do it for yourself, your family, and your community, including the health care workers we depend on to be there when we truly need emergency care."

"Virginia's caregivers have worked nonstop to serve their communities throughout this pandemic. They are feeling the strain of yet another surge and are looking to the community for support," said Steve Arner, Carilion Clinic Executive Vice President and Chief Operating Officer and the Chair of the VHHA Board of Directors. "It's crucial for community members to seek the appropriate level of care, ensuring that emergency rooms are reserved for emergencies. Of course, the best support that you can give is to get vaccinated and boosted against COVID-19."

Virginia is in the midst of a fifth coronavirus surge since the pandemic began last year. The peak of this latest surge may not arrive until several weeks after the holiday season concludes, making it likely that its true impact on public health and the health care delivery system is yet to be fully felt.

Infections have spiked this month – the Commonwealth recently eclipsed 1 million total COVID-19 cases and has documented 51,564 new infections since Dec. 24. Meanwhile, daily COVID-19 hospitalizations rose from 922 on Dec. 1 to 2,101 on Dec. 30, a 128 percent increase in that time.

While these numbers are elevated, they remain below the peak hospitalization numbers Virginia encountered this time last year. That is thanks in part to the widespread availability of COVID 19 vaccines. Data continues to show that the majority of patients currently hospitalized in Virginia for COVID-19 care are unvaccinated.

That is among the reasons why the health care community continues to urge unvaccinated individuals to make a plan to get the vaccine and to get boosted. U.S. adults 18 and older are eligible to receive a two-dose course of either the Pfizer-BioNTech or Moderna vaccine. The Pfizer vaccine has also been approved for use in children ages 5-12 and adolescents up to age 17. Adults 18 and older are also eligible to receive a single dose of the Janssen/Johnson & Johnson vaccine.

The available vaccines offer strong protection against illness from COVID-19. And for those who contract a breakthrough case of the virus after being vaccinated, the vaccine reduces the risk of serious illness that leads to hospitalization or death. Please visit vaccinate.virginia.gov, call 1-877-VAX-IN-VA, or visit vaccines.gov to learn more about getting vaccinated. At Community

Vaccination Centers, appointments are strongly encouraged to avoid extended wait times, but walk-ins are welcome.

Baby births set record

Dr. John Harding, an obstetrician gynecologist, delivers the 1000th baby at LewisGale Medical Center.

LewisGale Medical Center has announced it broke its previous record of babies birthed at the hospital. From Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 2021, 1,181 babies were delivered, the most in the hospital’s 112-year history.

“Our labor and delivery teams provide our community with high-quality services in a patient-centered environment, to ensure they are comfortable with their care and treatment plan,” stated Lea Lee, chief nursing officer. “With our dedicated care team, women benefit from years of experience, extensive training and daily practice in the procedures, techniques, and treatments related to women’s healthcare.”

The previous birth record was set in 1995 with 1,075 babies born in a 12-month period.

“Just as every baby is unique, so is every delivery,” said Lisa Wade, maternal care services director. “We provide a customized birthing experience that begins long before the first contraction and continues well after delivery.”

The news comes as the Virginia Department of Health (VDH) recently approved the facility’s Certificate of Public Need (COPN) for a neonatal intensive care unit (NICU) as well as the construction completion of its labor and delivery wing. Renovations included upgrades to delivery suites, patient rooms, and new birthing tubs.

Big South Conference announces five-year strategic plan

The Big South Conference has unveiled its updated strategic plan for the next five years.

While the plan's overall strategic objective continues the vision of the Big South Conference's becoming the premier non-FBS conference in the Southeast, the five primary areas of focus are now student-athlete experience, branding/messaging, competition, finance, and membership.

The updated plan reaffirms the Big South's mission statement of providing programs and services that support the league's member institutions in developing student-athletes to achieve their full potential as students, athletes, and citizens. It also upholds the conference's stated core values of athletic excellence, academic centrality, equity, diversity and inclusion, integrity, sportsmanship and fair play, and student-athlete well-being.

"The significance of the Big South's updated strategic plan is the affirmation by the membership of the bold steps taken previously to enhance our athletics excellence and the support of our student-athletes," said Big South Commissioner Kyle Kallander. "Big South members are more committed than ever to the promise of a strong and vibrant future in the Big South Conference, and the benefits that come from it. The strategic planning process also reiterated the values we live by every day, the importance of place, and the warm culture of mutual respect and close fellowship enjoyed by Big South members."

The Student-Athlete Experience

Special thanks to Coach J.C. Price

From the Sidelines

Marty Gordon

J.C. Price took over a Virginia Tech program for the final two games and a trip to a bowl with no real expectations. As a matter of fact, he was put in an awkward situation after the firing of his boss, Justin Fuente.

But he accepted the tag of "interim head coach" with dignity and a sense of pride as a former Virginia Tech player, which brought a perfect underlying message to players and fans. As a "Hokie," Price understood what this speed bump was all about, moving on and looking to the future.

Incoming new head coach Brent Pry also understood that last definition and asked Price to stay on in the new coaching era.

While Price could not pull off a win in the Pinstripe Bowl this past week, he was rather upbeat after the contest.

"Obviously, disappointed in the outcome," he said. "Not disappointed in these players. Love them. Proud of them. They got more things thrown at them in one year's time, year and a half, than any other team in history, and they continue to fight. One game does not define who those guys are in that locker room. I think it's a situation where it's like plowing a snow hill. You are plowing snow uphill. Eventually everything just caught up to us, and we didn't have enough tonight," he said.

Price took time to hug every Tech player on the field at the end of the game.

"I think I'm proud to be their coach," he said. "I'm proud of those guys. Maryland was a better team today, obviously. They were better coached. They played better. That doesn't stop a person from caring about somebody because you lost a football game, and I care about those guys. They care about this program, and the guys that are moving on should always feel welcome to come back here any time they want. As for the guys that are coming back, obviously, we need to go to work and be better than we were today."

He is looking to the future for the program. "We've got a lot of good kids coming back," Price said. "There's a couple of guys who have another year that may be on the fence, and I'm going to go to work recruiting them and trying to get them to return to school. The guys who are leaving, that's what's best for them, and good luck to them in the NFL, but the nucleus is here. You don't understand all the things these kids went through. I think eventually it just caught up to us. It caught up to us tonight, and was hoping it wouldn't, but eventually when you go through so many adverse things ... Yeah, it's been difficult."

Price has the pedigree as he was a team captain and a third-team All-America selection for the Hokies as a senior in 1995. He returned to Blacksburg in 2021 as co-defensive line coach and defensive recruiting coordinator after spending the past nine seasons as Marshall's co-defensive coordinator and defensive line coach.

He was named the Conference USA Recruiter of the Year in 2015 and was part of seven Marshall squads that earned bowl berths, the 2014 Conference USA championship, as well three C-USA East Division titles. Marshall led the nation in scoring defense (13.0 points per game) in 2020, while ranking second in total defense (279.4 yards per game), fourth in rushing defense (95.5 yards per game) and 11th in pass defense (183.9 yards per game) en route to a berth in the Conference USA Championship Game.

Price was named The Conference USA Recruiter of the Year by Scout.com for his contribution to the Thundering Herd's 2016 recruiting class.

Prior to Marshall, Price spent eight seasons at James Madison University during which the team won the 2004 FCS National Championship. Also, just like incoming coach Brent Pry, Price serves as a graduate assistant on the Tech staff (2002-2003).

But the experience dates further back when Price proved he is a player with the "Lunch Pail" mentality. He was a third-round pick of the Carolina Panthers in the 1996 NFL Draft and spent time with the Arizona Cardinals in 1996-97 where his defensive line coach was Pro Football Hall of Fame inductee Joe Greene before a back injury curtailed his playing career.

He was a four-year starter who captained Tech's 1995 BIG EAST championship team. He earned third-team All-America honors from AP following the 1995 season and first-team All-BIG EAST honors after recording 104 tackles and a team-high 15. tackles for loss and eight sacks.

He finished his career with 256 tackles (125 solo), 30 tackles for loss and 17 sacks (-118.0 yards).

He is married to Jenny Root, who was inducted into the Virginia Tech Sports Hall of Fame in 2007. A standout for the women's basketball program, her 1,582 career points still rank as the fifth-highest total in Hokies' history.

Price will get his chance somewhere down the road to be a head coach. He has proven his leadership skills in the past month. But for now, he is just happy to be a Hokie.

Lady Hokies wave goodbye to '21 in style with defeat of Duke

The Virginia Tech women's basketball team earned a decisive 77-55 victory over the 15th-ranked Duke Blue Devils Thursday night to close out 2021 and move to 2-0 in the ACC for the third time in program history.

Tech took a 5-3 lead through some Aisha Sheppard-free throws and never looked back as the Hokies were efficient on the offensive end and stingy defensively, allowing just 30% shooting from the Devils.

Tech scored 17 points on 12 Duke turnovers and owned a 1.67 assist to turnover ratio. The Hokies capitalized on their opportunities at the free throw line, hitting a perfect 20 of 20 attempts.

In the process, the Lady Hokies set a pair of Cassell program records:

Tech's 20-for-20 free-throw performance was the most made free throws without a miss in a single game in program history, and the 22-point margin of victory was the largest margin against a ranked opponent in program history.

Tech's All-Conference center Elizabeth Kitley was on a tear in her last three games scoring 22 or more in each game and recording double-doubles in all three contests.

In ACC play, Kitley is averaging 30.5 points, 13 rebounds and 3.5 blocks per game, shooting 59% from the floor. She contributed nine of those 20 free throws Thursday night.

In two league games she has made 17 free throws and shot 89% while in the non-conference portion of the season she converted 15 free throws at a 38% clip.

Kitley leads the ACC in double-doubles, blocks, and 20-point games.

Georgia Amoore enjoying recent success

Aussie Georgia Amoore seems to have been given a boost by her family with whom she was reunited with after nearly two years. In her last two games, she has tallied 20 points, the first time in her career that she has put together back-to-back scoring performances like that. In ACC play the point guard is averaging seven assists and five rebounds while shooting 60% from behind the arc. Against Duke, she set a career high with six rebounds.

She has committed just one turnover in each of the last two games.

Behind Amoore's 7.0 assist-to-turnover ratio in conference play, Tech as a team owns the league's best ratio at 1.94.

Catfish stocking returns to commonwealth

Virginia Department of Wildlife Resources (DWR) Fisheries staff have been busy this fall stocking catchable channel catfish in more than 120 waters throughout the state.

According to Brendan

Delbos, the State Hatchery Superintendent, “The fall catfish stocking program is one of our most popular events with anglers. This year we will be stocking 80,000 catfish, a 25% increase over last year. These stockings require a significant amount of coordination and wouldn’t be possible without the hard work and dedication of our fisheries and hatchery staff.”

Fall is a great time for anglers to get on the water whether they’re targeting largemouth bass, trout, or channel catfish.

A list of water to be stocked with channel catfish include Lovills Creek Lake in Carroll County, Gatewood Reservoir in Pulaski, Hungry Mother Lake in Smyth County, and Rural Retreat Lake in Wythe County.

Winter means cleaning and storing life jackets. Fishermen should do so according to manufacturer’s recommendations to make sure they’re ready for the next season. The manufacturer has the following recommendations:

For an inflatable life jacket, hand wash or sponge down in warm, soapy water, taking care not to submerge the inflator. Rinse the jacket with clean water and hang to dry on a plastic coat hanger. Do not dry-clean, use chlorine bleach, or apply direct heat. Always store the fully dried jacket in a warm, dry, well-ventilated place out of direct sunlight.

For an inherently buoyant life jacket (foam): Clean in the same manner except they may be fully submerged.

If the life jacket has possibly been exposed to a virus, clean as recommended by the manufacturer and then let dry in warm, low humidity environment for at least 72 hours before reuse. To reuse your product within 72 hours, the following precautionary guidance is suggested.

Buckles, zippers, other hardware and hook/loop fasteners (e.g. Velcro®) are hard to clean due to crevasses and metal/plastic construction. Using 60 – 90% solutions of alcohol sprayed/wetted on these components is acceptable.

Avoid spraying inflatables with specific disinfectants that are detrimental to the fabric. e.g. bleach-based products.

Do not machine launder life jackets.

Life jackets should be hand-washed with gloved hands. Wash as hot as possible (< 60C) to kill virus.

Ensuring complete drying is critical; heated air drying is encouraged < 60C.

Viruses like moisture and can survive in cold. Viruses die by drying out and by heat, which some fibers can enhance.

If hang to air-dry, allow 72 hours (3 days) before reuse.

Keep an eye out for tagged Blue Catfish in the James and Chickahominy rivers

Virginia’s Department of Wildlife Resources has started a project involving the tagging of 40 blue catfish of all sizes in the James and Chickahominy rivers. Anglers who catch a tagged catfish are asked to record the tag ID number and report it to the DWR at the phone number on the tag. Anglers who release the fish should leave the tag in.

DWR has started a blue catfish project in the James River system and has tagged 40 blue catfish of all sizes.

These fish have been internally tagged with an acoustic tag that will track their movement throughout the river as well as an external dart tag to help anglers identify these fish, if caught. The DWR will be able to collect data from tagged blue catfish for the next 10 years.

The results of this project will help the department understand the seasonal movements of blue catfish and identify aggregation areas.

Anglers who catch a blue catfish with a red dart tag in the James or Chickahominy River are asked to take a photo of the tag or record the three-digit tag identification number and report the tag to DWR at the phone number on the tag. Anglers who release the fish, are asked to leave the tag in.
