Snow closes schools, empties grocery shelves and brings hazardous conditions

RADFORD – Sunday’s snow storm brought about six inches of snow to the City of Radford, as well as some wintry mix, causing dangerous road conditions, closing schools on Tuesday and straining grocery stores.

Radford City Public Schools were closed on Monday for the Martin Luther King, Jr. federal holiday but were closed Tuesday due to the lingering effects of Sunday’s storm. High winds and low temperatures on Monday caused drifting snow and refreezing on road surfaces.

The City of Radford also released an explanation of snow removal and storm procedures for the City, which could provide a valuable resource for future winter weather events. It reads:

Snow Removal Preparation and Procedure

How does Radford decide what roads to clear first?

Once the storm hits, snow removal crews work around the clock to clear city roads and make them passable for safe travel. In any winter storm, crews’ first priority is to clear the roads that have the most traffic, or primary roads. An example of a primary road in Radford is East and West Main Street. Major secondary roads with vital emergency and public facilities or those with high traffic volumes, are also plowed during this time. During this phase of snow removal crews are working to clear a path wide enough for traffic to move through. Snow emergency routes are also among the top priorities. Once the snow has stopped and main roads are clear, residential streets and neighborhoods will be plowed. After every street has had a path created, crews will go back through to all streets to widen the road. Why do plows block my driveway with snow when they clear the road?

To make as many roads passable as quickly as possible, there is no way to avoid this practice. We are sorry for this inconvenience. Plow operators push snow off the roadway in smooth, continuous passes and the angle on the plow allows for wider streets, but the snow must be moved to the sides of the road. The snow ends up in gutters and on

All aboard: Passenger rail takes another step toward reality

Gov. Ralph Northam spent his last day on the job with the announcement that Virginia leaders have finalized a rail agreement with Norfolk Southern that will bring passenger service to the New River Valley in the next three years.

On Friday, Northam said the Western Rail Initiative expands passenger rail service to the New River Valley and complements his historic $3.7 billion Transforming Rail in Virginia program, the commonwealth’s roadmap for building a 21st-century rail network. The agreement was executed following authorization from the Virginia Passenger Rail Authority Board of Directors.

“Transforming Rail in Virginia is an investment not only in our rail system, but also in the residents and businesses along the corridor and in the New River Valley,” said Governor Northam. “Together with our partners at Norfolk Southern, we are making essential improvements that modernize our transportation infrastructure and connect communities across the commonwealth. We look forward to continuing this important work to help move people and goods efficiently, reduce congestion and pollution, fuel tourism, and drive economic growth.”

A historic investment in Southwest Virginia’s rail network, the Western Rail Initiative will add a second state-supported round-trip train between Roanoke and Boston later this year, which will be extended to the New River Valley upon completion of a new station and track and signal improvements. The agreement also allows for a third train to operate in the future between Roanoke and the New River Valley.

The expanded intercity rail service, which will create significant economic benefits and provide additional multimodal options for travelers along the Interstate 81 and Route 29 corridor, is expected to add approximately 80,000 new passengers in the first year after service is extended to the New River Valley. Further, the agreement preserves the existing freight rail service provided on the lines, helping to move the goods and materials for the commonwealth’s economy.

In an agreement with Norfolk Southern, the commonwealth is ac

Radford professor featured in The Conversation

RADFORD - A recent faculty-penned article shines a light on a dark centennial for both the United States and the automobile industry: the 100th anniversary of the development of leaded gasoline.

According to the piece by Radford University Professor of Communication Bill Kovarik, Ph.D., Dec. 9, 1921, was the day researchers at General Motors first diluted gasoline with tetraethyl lead, intending to produce a quieter and more powerful fuel for cars.

They succeeded, but the practice of producing what became known as ethyl gas was later found to cause health problems for those who worked with or were otherwise exposed to the compound.

Kovarik describes how soon after, in the fall of 1924, dozens of workers began suffering from hallucinations and disorientation. At least 17 people died that year from lead exposure related to the gas.

He also traces efforts to prohibit the mixture, a lengthy tug of war that ran until 1996, when the U.S. banned the sale of leaded gasoline. But Kovarik points to that December day a century ago as the epicenter of the controversy.

“I see this anniversary as a time to reflect on the role of public health advocates and environmental journalists in preventing profit-driven tragedy,” Kovarik wrote in an article for The Conversation, a nonprofit, independent news organization.

This is far from the first time Kovarik, who is also a historian, has written about industry, environmental and health concerns. He penned his doctoral dissertation on the issues of ethyl gasoline and has covered similar matters across the past two decades.

It’s also not the only time he has been published by The Conversation, of late. In 2021, he authored two additional articles – one about privacy with regard to public figures, the other on the handling of controversial or inflammatory statements within media – in which issues from the 1920s and 1930s mirror contemporary elements of today.

VTTI’s Sharing the Road with Trucks program puts research into practice

The Virginia Tech Transportation Institute (VTTI)’s Division of Freight, Transit, and Heavy Vehicle Safety has developed and implemented a safety education and outreach program. Called Sharing the Road with Trucks, the program grew out of research that showed teen drivers initiated more than 75 percent of incidents involving heavy trucks that were — in part — due to a lack of driver education.

“We are putting the research into practice,” said Matt Camden, team leader for VTTI’s Research to Practice and Outreach group. “With the research we’ve conducted at VTTI, we’re leveraging naturalistic driving data to understand how people drive around trucks and the consequences of unsafe driving. This program [puts] these lessons learned into practice to help a specific group of drivers — teens — remain safe while driving passenger vehicles around these larger commercial vehicles from the beginning when they start driving.”

Camden, with VTTI researchers Mark Golusky and Scott Tidwell, leads the VTTI Sharing the Road team that travels to

VT College of Veterinary Medicine hosts mentoring day

Successful mentoring does not happen by chance. The reality is that it requires significant, consistent work and a strong desire to see students succeed. Mentoring is a fundamental part of learning. For professional graduate students, it is critical as they need in-depth knowledge, a set of skills, and techniques for networking, collaborating, and gaining a perspective on how their profession operates in the real world.

The mentorship program at the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine started in 2003 and is a partnership with the Virginia Veterinary Medical Association (VVMA). This long-established arrangement connects students with professionals in the field and allies in veterinary medicine. Though the main event occurs one day a year, the forged relationships have ongoing benefits for students to reap throughout their graduate education and professional careers.

Rocky Deutsch DVM’ 85 participates in the mentorship program to help give students the perspective of a practicing veterinarian and help them sculpt their careers in whatever discipline they choose to follow.

Throughout the day, meetings between students and paired mentors set up conversations tailored to both interests. Mentees were able to have conversations with seasoned professionals about navigating student life, with the opportunity to ask questions helpful for excelling in their veterinary school careers, such as studying and the curriculum.

In addition, there was a sort of "speed-dating" mix-and-match where students had a certain amount of time to rotate through all the mentors' tables. In doing so, students learned more about what other mentors from different specialties do and areas of the profession they didn't know about or, conversely, were interested in further.

"My mentorship experience has allowed me to pursue my veterinary education more boldly," said Caitlin Swecker, a fourth-year veterinary student in the mixed animal track with mentor Brian Neumann DVM '14. "Knowing that I have the support and confidence of my mentor has encouraged me while in veterinary school. Dr. Neumann is also very open to hosting me at his clinic whenever I can travel to that area."

The mentorship program not only serves students while they are students though, but it also expands their veterinary student network and prepares them for professional development later. Robin Schmitz, executive director of VVMA, says, "The greatest success is when students are in their fourth year, and they get a job with or through their mentor," said Robin Schmitz, executive director of the VVMA. "Veterinary medicine is a small profession, and a lot of people make connections over the years, so if I see a student get a job, that's a success."

That's a benefit Swecker said she intends to capitalize on. "With graduation in just a few short months, I am sure I will be asking Dr. Neumann a lot of life-advice questions regarding the transition from student to doctor. I feel as though I'm not as nervous as some of my classmates about that transition, and I would attribute that to having such a great support network, including my mentor.

While the benefits for students are numerous, perhaps what makes the mentorship program so successful is its symbiotic nature.

"I can't think of a better way to give back to veterinary medicine than my participation in the [Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine] mentor program," said Jay Margolis, past president of the VVMA, said. "The program allows members of the VVMA, [Maryland Veterinary Medical Association], and [District of Columbia Veterinary Medical Association] direct contact with veterinary students and allows us to offer our experience and guidance as those students want and need. I have had students work in my hospitals, stay in my home, and I try to always be an open book for guidance and advice regarding a class, a case, or just how to handle the stresses that we all feel day-to-day. The program also allows me to stay up to date on what's happening in veterinary education and to meet other mentors from around the region."

Schmitz elaborated on the benefits for mentors. "It's a two-way street," Schmitz said. "Mentors can learn from students, and we want to connect to the future of veterinary medicine. Veterinary medicine is changing every day so the students can bring what they're learning to their practices."

This symbiosis encourages mentees to return and participate as mentors, further strengthening the longevity of the mentorship program. Swecker, who has participated as a mentee throughout her time at the veterinary college, said, "I am also very excited to become a mentor one day as well, having seen the impact that the program has."

road shoulders, sometimes blocking driveways. To avoid double work, shovel snow from your driveway after the snow plow has been by and shovel the snow the right of your driveway, as you face the road.

Why doesn't Radford put salt on the roads before it snows?

Putting salt on roads before it snows wastes time and money since the salt can blow off the pavement. Salt is most effective after the snow has accumulated about an inch and the temperature is 27 degrees or higher. This allows the snow and salt to mix together, melting the snow into a slush that can be plowed off the pavement.

Who is responsible for clearing my sidewalk? You or your property owner is responsible for clearing the sidewalk surrounding your property.

Radford City Code Sec. 90-5. - Removal of snow, sleet, and ice from sidewalks.

It shall be the duty of the owner of any property, improved or unimproved, that adjoins any sidewalk within the city to remove all snow, sleet, and ice from such sidewalk within twenty-four (24) hours after the snow, sleet, or ice has ceased falling. In the event the property is leased or otherwise occupied, then the tenant or occupant of the property shall be required to comply with the requirements of this section.

If the snow, sleet, or ice is not removed as required above, then the city manager or his designee may notify the owner, tenant, or occupant of the property that that the city will remove the snow, sleet, or ice at the owner's, tenant's, or occupant's expense if the sidewalk is not cleared within twenty-four (24) hours after being given notice of a violation of this section. Notice of a violation of this section may be given to the owner, tenant, or occupant of the property by: first-class mail hand-delivery by posting a copy of the notice on the property.

If the snow, sleet, or ice is not removed from the sidewalk within twenty-four (24) hours after notice is given to the owner, tenant, or occupant, then the city may clear the sidewalk and charge and collect the costs from the owner, tenant, or occupant of the property. The city may use city staff or hire independent contractors to clear the sidewalk. Costs for removal of snow, sleet, and ice, including an administrative fee as set by general resolution of City Council, may be charged to the owner, tenant, or occupant and collected in any manner provided by law for the collection of local taxes and shall constitute a lien against any property where the violation is found to exist. Decisions to clear snow, sleet, or ice from sidewalks as provided by this section shall be based on established pedestrian travel priorities developed by the city manager's office.

A violation of this section shall constitute a class 4 misdemeanor and shall be punished as provided in Section 1-7 of the City Code. Each day a violation of this section continues to exist shall be considered a separate offense. This general penalty shall be available in addition to the City's authority to compel correction of the violation as otherwise provided in this section.

Virginia gas prices on the way back up

Virginia gas prices rose 1 cent per gallon in the past week, averaging $3.15/g Monday, according to GasBuddy's daily survey of 4,081 stations in Virginia.

Gas prices in Virginia are 2.7 cents per gallon lower than a month ago but stand 84.9 cents per gallon higher than a year ago.

According to GasBuddy price reports, the cheapest station in Virginia was priced at $2.75/g Monday while the most expensive was $3.89/g, a difference of $1.14/g.

The national average price of gasoline rose 1.3 cents per gallon last week, averaging $3.31/g Monday. The national average is unchanged from a month ago and stands 93.3 cents per gallon higher than a year ago.

"Average gas prices saw a slight boost over the last week as the rising price of crude oil continues to push prices up," said Patrick De Haan, head of petroleum analysis for GasBuddy. "While the rise was fairly tame, some states still saw slight declines. Gasoline demand, aside from motorists filling up ahead of the weekend winter storm, has been lackluster. The real pain at the pump will start in about 4-6 weeks," De Haan said. "Oil prices continue to edge higher as oil production remains a concern due to unrest in Libya and Kazakhstan; however, some improvement in the latter situation could lead to oil prices being more subdued."

GasBuddy is the authoritative voice for gas prices and the only source for station-level data spanning nearly two decades. GasBuddy's survey updates 288 times every day from the most diverse list of sources covering nearly 150,000 stations nationwide, the most comprehensive and up-to-date in the country. quiring approximately 28 miles of the Norfolk Southern-owned "V line" right-of-way and existing tracks from Christiansburg to the Salem Crossovers and a passenger rail easement between the Salem Crossovers and the Amtrak Roanoke station platform. Norfolk Southern will continue to provide freight service on the line.

In addition, the commonwealth will invest in infrastructure improvements between Manassas and the Roanoke Yard to improve the reliability of passenger rail service over Norfolk Southern Railway-owned right-of-way.

The acquisition and infrastructure improvements are partially funded by contributions from the I-81 Corridor Multimodal Improvements Fund, Commonwealth Rail funds, and the General Assembly's 2021 Transportation Initiatives. The commonwealth anticipates reaching financial close with Norfolk Southern in mid-2022.

On May 5, 2021, Governor Northam announced in Christiansburg that the commonwealth reached an initial agreement with Norfolk Southern to expand passenger rail service from Northern Virginia to Southwest Virginia. The finalization of the agreement announced today represents a major milestone that will allow construction to advance on significant rail infrastructure projects along the corridor between Manassas and the New River Valley, resulting in more frequent and more reliable passenger rail service.

"This agreement with the Commonwealth of Virginia is a great example of government and business partnership," said James A. Squires, Chairman and CEO of Norfolk Southern. "Together, we have created a path forward to increase passenger rail service and ensure that freight rail customers continue to move the goods that power our economy. Importantly, this will yield economic dividends from Northern to Southwest Virginia, both through the necessary infrastructure improvements and additional use of the rail lines."

Amtrak regional daily service in Southwest Virginia began in October 2009 with one round-trip between Lynchburg and Washington, D.C. During the first year of operation, ridership outperformed forecasts by more than triple. In November 2017, the commonwealth expanded service to Roanoke, and, prior to the COVID-19 pandemic, the route was one of the most profitable intercity passenger rail routes in the country.

Based on this proven success, the commonwealth is strategically investing in additional passenger rail service along the corridor and to Southwest Virginia. Like the current state-supported Roanoke train, the second train, for which service is expected to commence in 2022, will serve Alexandria, Burke Centre, Manassas, Culpeper, Charlottesville, Lynchburg, and Roanoke and travel to and from Washington, D.C., and Amtrak's Northeast Corridor. Finally, the agreement acknowledges the potential for a future station in Bedford.

The commonwealth's Transforming Rail in Virginia initiative is a path to connecting the communities and increasing economic opportunities through strategic investments in rail. The commonwealth is advancing capital improvement projects, including the new Long Bridge across the Potomac; acquiring railroad track and right-of-way to provide more rail capacity; expanding high-quality, modern passenger rail service across the commonwealth by making it more frequent, reliable, and convenient; and providing additional choice in moving people and goods efficiently across Virginia while accommodating growing travel demand. The initiative is expected to grow Virginia's economy by more than $2 billion annually.

high schools in Virginia, West Virginia, and Delaware to provide engaging learning opportunities for new teen drivers.

Through the support of the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration, the Delaware Department of Transportation, the Virginia State Police, and the Delaware State Police, law enforcement personnel are also available at most of the demonstrations to discuss driver safety.

In addition, the Virginia Trucking Association and the Delaware Motor Transport Association are active partners who help coordinate trucks and drivers to assist in the demonstration. Although most of the demonstrations have occurred in the Mid-Atlantic, the VTTI Sharing the Road team can travel to any state with its goal of becoming a nationwide program.

During a sharing-the road-demonstration, teen participants have the opportunity to see a semi-truck up close and experience the large blind spots from a semi-truck driver's perspective.

The program also addresses five key strategies for sharing the road: Don't hang out in the no-zone; don't cut off trucks; maintain a safe following distance; properly pass a truck; and don't get squeezed.

"We see every day on the highway that passenger vehicle drivers of all experience levels aren't driving safely around the trucks," said Tidwell, VTTI senior field research technician and Class A CDL holder. "We want this program to help teach new car drivers safe practices from the beginning to create a generation of drivers that know how to safely drive near a truck."

The goal of the demonstrations is to show the perspective of a truck driver and help teens have a better understanding of the everyday difficulties faced by truck drivers on the road. Since 2018, the team has reached over 8,100 students across 82 school visits.

Winter storm delivers much-needed moisture to Virginia farmland

Dropping over a foot of snow in some Virginia localities, an early-January storm stole national headlines and wreaked havoc throughout the mid-Atlantic.

Though the storm left many travelers stranded and hundreds of thousands without power in Virginia, the plentiful precipitation came at a crucial time for the state's grain farmers.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service December crop report, Virginia entered 2022 with "abnormally dry to severe drought conditions" across the state.

NASS statistics also indicated the Lynchburg and Norfolk regions each ended 2021 with precipitation deficits of 8.8 inches compared to normal annual precipitation totals. The Roanoke area recorded a 4.4-inch deficit, and Northern Virginia ended the year with a 7.9-inch shortage.

Only the Richmond region saw above-average precipitation last year, with a 2.5-inch surplus.

As small-grain crops begin to emerge in some areas of Virginia, farmers said the influx of moisture came at a pivotal time.

"We've been really dry. It was one of the driest falls I can remember," said grain producer Glenn Dye, who farms in Appomattox, Fauquier and Stafford counties. "We definitely needed more moisture for the fall crops and some subsoil moisture for the spring crops, and the snow we got definitely helped the crops that are in the field."

Dye, who also serves on the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation Soybean and Feed Grains Advisory Committee, skipped planting winter wheat this year, opting instead to plant rye as a cover crop.

Before the Jan. 3 storm, Dye said the crop was "hanging on," but he wasn't sure it would remain healthy enough to benefit the soil for spring planting. However, the storm brought between 8 and 9 inches of snow to his Appomattox property and 13 inches to Stafford, which allowed the crop to rebound.

"(The snow and rain)

we've had has been beneficial," Dye added, noting he and other Virginia grain farmers saw additional rain and snow on Jan. 6 and 7. "Any moisture is a good thing at this point."

Bedford County grain farmer W.P. Johnson said he and other nearby farmers struggled to plant small grains in the fall due to soil aridity.

Johnson planted oats and wheat, and said he only managed to get his seeds deep enough in the ground because he recently rebuilt his planter's drill. With the benefit of moisture from the Jan. 3 storm—he received 4 inches of wintry mix on his farm—each crop is progressing well.

"The moisture from the snow really pulled out our small grain crops and let them emerge, and I can actually see what kind of stand I have," he said. "Without the snow, I don't know my emergence would have been what it is. We got lucky."

Doyle, John Sanderson

Our kind, funny and loving youngest brother, John Sanderson (Sandy) Doyle passed peacefully Thursday, Jan. 13, 2022, from renal failure in Blacksburg with family by his side.

We take great comfort in imagining him now with our mother, to whom he was devoted. Sandy's compassion and care for her at the end of her life will be forever remembered and greatly appreciated by our family. Sandy was always ready to laugh and share his sense of joy and irreverent views on life. He was the center of attention at every family gathering and his unique humor and gentle ways endeared him to everyone he met.

In 1975 Sandy graduated from First Colonial High where he was a skilled basketball player. He later played ball at Virginia Wesleyan College. In October 1985 he received a kidney donated by his brother Jim. Twice Sandy competed in the National Transplant games held in Indiana (1500 meters) and then in California (tennis).

His declining health played a key role in his decision to become an executive chauffeur. That he held this position for more than 10 years is testament to his discretion, reliability, and service. In 2003 he joined the Teamsters Union in Wilmington, N.C., and worked in the film and television industry as a driver. He loved the wonderful friendships he made with the cast and crews of his assigned films and shows, especially "One Tree Hill."

Sanderson's big, caring personality will be missed by many, most deeply by his three brothers and three sisters who adored him: Stephen and Jana Doyle of Blacksburg; Jim and Kerry Doyle of Severna Park, Md.; David Doyle and Annabel Grice of Newcastle New South Wales, Australia; Cherry Reynolds, Holly and Steve Hepner of Stephenson, Va.; and Sally and Marvin Miller of Sterling, Va.; and his lifelong friends, Winston and Molly Carlyle of Richmond, Va.

He was a beloved uncle to many nieces, nephews, and their children. Thank you to the staffs at Lower Cape Fear LifeCare, Wilmington, N.C., and Carilion Clinic New River Valley, Radford, for their excellent care of Sandy and his family. If possible, he would express his love, sincere gratitude, and appreciation to his wonderful family for all their support, compassion, and encouragement throughout his lifetime. "Be happy, healthy and safe."

that year, and they lived in numerous locations before moving to Blacksburg in 1998 when he became Commandant of the Cadet Corps at Virginia Tech.

Depending on where they lived, her life and career was a combination of teaching physical education in the public schools, teaching baton twirling, being a homemaker, taking leadership roles in many officers' wives clubs, hosting functions required of an officer, various jobs with the Heart Association, and many other volunteer jobs.

In her daily prayers, she thanked God for the many blessings she had received that had provided her with such a wonderful life that included two loving husbands and family, and numerous caring friends. After her first husband Stan, died in 2012, she was adamant that she would never marry again, but God had other plans. RADFORD SPORTS

VT finally picks up ACC win

Marty Gordon
NRVsports@ourvalley.org

Virginia Tech's basketball team finally scratched its first win in the Atlantic Coast Conference in a nail-biter Saturday against Notre Dame.

Tech shot a season-high 59.2 percent from the field (29-49). Beyond the arc, the Hokies shot 50 percent (10-20), which is the second-highest number of the year. Saturday's game marked the second time Virginia Tech shot 50 percent or higher in both categories (Cornell).

The large crowd in attendance seemed to bring energy and provide that spark for the win, even catching the attention of Notre Dame head coach Mike Brey.

"First of all, what a great atmosphere. I thought the Virginia Tech crowd kept their team believing the whole time," he said afterwards.

The win gave the Hokies three straight wins over Notre Dame for the first time ever and snapped the Irish's six-game win streak. In addition, Notre Dame was 4-2 in Blacksburg until Saturday afternoon's game.

The biggest key was the fact the win kept Tech from dropping to 0-5 in the ACC for the first time since 2014. The team also improved to 6-2 at home this season and gave Mike Young his 40th win as head coach of the Hokies.

Keva Aluma has the greenlight to shoot from behind the arc, and he spotted up for the shot several times on Saturday. This is all surprising as he only attempted one 3-pointer in two seasons for Young at Wofford before he transferred to Blacksburg.

In two seasons for the Hokies, Aluma has attempted 57 threes, knocking down 20 at a 35.1 percent clip.

Graduate transfer Justyn Mutts is approaching a 1,000 point milestone. He put up 24 on Saturday to give him 942 for his career.

A big question this year is what impact Tech's bench would have on the season. So far, the reserves are averaging 15.6 points per game.

ACCsports.com has released its Mid-Season All-ACC squad with Tech's Keve Aluma being named to the second team. The first-team included Duke's Paolo Banchero and Wendall Moore Jr., Alondes Williams of Wake Forest, Armando Bacot of UNC and Pittsburgh's John Hugley.

While speaking with media this past Friday, ACC commissioner Jim Phillips spoke against expanding the College Football Playoff.

"Now is not the time to expand the College Football Playoff," he said.

Saturday's Notre Dame game was also an opportunity for new football coach Brent Pry to introduce his new staff of assistants. They received a loud applause.

Blacksburg boys take Battle of the Burgs

Christiansburg's DJ Barnes puts up a three-point attempt against Bruins Tucker Halsey and Sam Davis. Blacksburg took the 64-49 win as Halsey led the team with 19 points. Tyrique Taylor dropped in 19 for Christiansburg, which fell to 6-7 overall and 1-3 in the River Ridge District.

Sports briefs, local updates: Baseball nights highlight at VT, RU

From the Sidelines
Marty Gordon

One month away from hosting its 14th annual Baseball Night in Blacksburg — as headlined this year by keynote speaker Jeff Passan (ESPN's MLB insider) — the Virginia Tech baseball program has locked in special event details and information for its season kickoff banquet on Saturday, Feb. 12, at The Inn at Virginia Tech. Tickets to Baseball

Night in Blacksburg are available for $75. Guests may also purchase tickets for $100 that include three free drink vouchers to the event's cash bar, available to all patrons of age.

All Baseball Night in Blacksburg proceeds go to support the Virginia Tech baseball team and its continual enhancements to English Field at Atlantic Union Bank Park, as well as to the James C. Weaver Baseball Center. Past banquets have supported the installation of artificial turf and expanded dugouts among other general ballpark overhauls and additions.

Passan will become the Hokies' latest high-profile special guest, joining the names of notable speakers Cal Ripken, Jr. (2008), Mike Williams (2010), Billy Wagner (2011), Bobby Valentine (2012), Chuck Hartman (2014), Tim Kurkjian (2018), and Ken Rosenthal (2020).

An iconic byline in American baseball coverage, Passan is a revered writer and analyst who has spent close to two decades reporting on professional baseball and its athletes.

Radford University baseball alumni, fans, and supporters are invited to join the program for the third annual First Pitch Dinner on Saturday, Jan. 29, at 6 p.m.

The evening will include a wide variety of auction items for attendees to bid on, as well as a catered dinner and an autograph session with the team. Washington Nationals manager Davey Martinez will give a keynote speech as the guest of honor.

All proceeds from the First Pitch Dinner go towards supporting the Radford baseball program as it prepares for the upcoming 2022 season.

Cindy Chace '86 has been selected as the keynote speaker for the inaugural "Champion Her Future" leadership dinner, which will be held on Friday, Feb. 4, at 6 p.m. in the Dedmon Center's Sport Performance facility.

Prior to her retirement in 2020, Chace had been a director of sales for the government sector at United Parcel Service (UPS) for 34 years. Chace is a director and founding chair of the Florida-based nonprofit Go for the Greens Foundation Inc, where she serves on the sponsorship, golf, mentorship, logistics, and marketing committees. She also is co-founder and co-chair of the Go for the Greens conference. Since 2019, Chace has made it possible for two Radford women's basketball players to attend the conference.

Chace works with business organizations focused on minorities and women. Her service to these organizations was recognized by The International Alliance for Women, which honored her as a Leader in Global Development, and the National Association of Women Business Owners, which named her the National Corporate Partner of the Year. She also was recognized with the Corporate Advocate Award from the Women's Business Enterprise Hall of Fame.

She is a former Radford student-athlete who was a member of the women's basketball team from 1983-1986.

The "Champion Her Future" leadership dinner is open to the Radford community and general public.

The Radford University women's tennis program announced Friday afternoon the addition of Brooke Murphy, who will join the team for next year's 2022-23 season.

Murphy hails from Stanley, N.C., and was most recently ranked 11th in the state and 87th in the southern region. She began her athletic career as a competitive gymnast for seven years and did not start playing tennis until the eighth grade. She played for Southlake Christian where she was conference champion along with being named to all-conference and all-state teams.

The Radford men's and women's tennis teams were predicted to finish second in the Big South's 2022 preseason poll, the league announced Tuesday.

The men's tennis team had a 12-7 overall record and a 4-1 Big South record last season, placing second in the regular season before finishing as the runner-up in the Big South tournament. The team lost in a tightly contested 4-3 championship game last year to the 2022 preseason favorite, Presbyterian.

The Highlanders received three first-place votes, matching their total of first-place votes received in last season's preseason poll. While the team is replacing a veteran presence in former Highlander Yevhen Sirous, all other players returned from last season's team.

The women's tennis team out-performed expectations last season after being picked to finish fourth in the preseason poll. The team finished with a 4-2 conference record, tying for second place, and advanced to the Big South championship match before falling 4-1 to this season's preseason favorite, Charleston Southern.

The student-athletes of Radford University Athletics recorded yet another excellent academic performance during the Fall 2021 semester with 77% earning a grade-point-average of 3.0 or better.

An impressive 225 of Radford's 261 total student-athletes reached the 3.0 mark, helping 13 of the Highlanders 16 varsity athletics programs report a team GPA of 3.0 or better. The term GPA for the department ended at 3.20.

Just as impressive are the 171 Radford student-athletes who reached the 3.4 GPA mark, placing them on the Radford University Dean's List. Our of those 171, 45 of them had a perfect 4.0 GPA.

The women's cross-country program led all Highlander squads with a 3.73 GPA while men's cross country came in just behind with a 3.65. Women's soccer finished the term with a 3.57 while boasting 23 student-athletes with a 3.4 GPA and 11 reaching a sterling 4.0 GPA.
