Washington Monthly has ranked Radford University among the public and private universities that provide the Best Bang for the Buck.

Radford University lauded for affordability in college guide

Radford University's affordability and marketable degrees are again getting recognition.

The university is ranked among the nation's top public and private universities and the Best Bang for the Buck by Washington Monthly's annual 2022 College Guide.

Each of the more than 400 universities ranked were judged on their contribution to the public good in three broad categories: social mobility, research, and public service. Radford's addition to this exclusive list was also based on the university's ability to help non-wealthy students attain marketable degrees at manageable prices.

The university ranked 127 in the 2022 National University Rankings and 31 in the 2022 Best Bang for the Buck Rankings: Southwest, a ranking the university has been part of for nearly a decade.

The Washington Monthly rankings focus on publicly available data, taking into account graduation rates, net price of attendance, student loan data, and other factors that are important to students and their families.

"By continuously being named in these exclusive lists, Radford University is fully maintaining its commitment to the accessibility and affordability of higher education," according to a statement by the university. "Offering attainable education to students advances their social mobility."

One example of how the university is "helping many of its students grow and navigate the economic and social challenges of university life" is the Center for Opportunity and Social Mobility (COSM), which opened at the beginning of the fall 2021 semester.

Cadets chosen to highlight the colors at tonight's Boston College game

First-year cadets Chris Pellissier, Emma Workmaster, and Lance Demont will receive the flags at tonight's football game against Boston College, the first home game of the season.

The Virginia Tech Corps of Cadets and the Virginia Tech football team continue their proud partnership to highlight the colors during the pre-game ceremony at every football game.

Three football players, chosen because of their performance in the last game or at practice, carry the American flag, the state flag, and the team's spirit flag and lead the team onto the field. They deliver the flags to cadets at the south end of the field.

The cadets, also selected based on their performance in the corps, render honor to the flags and carry them off the field. At home games, three first-year cadets are selected, and one or two upper class cadets travel with the team and receive the flags at away games.

Pellissier is in Army ROTC and is majoring in the College of Engineering. He was selected for demonstrating leadership in his training company with an adherence to high standards and professionalism.

Workmaster, a member of Navy ROTC, was chosen for constantly striving to help her fellow first-year cadets and her willingness to volunteer for tasks. She is majoring in general engineering in the College of Engineering.

Demont is in Army ROTC and is majoring in national security and foreign affairs in the College of Liberal Arts and Human Sciences. He was chosen for his teamwork and always being the first to assist his fellow cadets.

Stabilization work continues on Mountain Valley pipeline corridor

BLACKSBURG – The USDA Forest Service continues working with the Mountain Valley Pipeline LLC to ensure compliance with the stabilization plan for the Mountain Valley Pipeline corridor.

People traveling near Brush Mountain and Sinking Creek Mountain in Montgomery County may notice increased activity as Mountain Valley Pipeline project workers enhance the wooden platforms that support the pipe staged in the corridor right of way.

To avoid ground disturbance, materials will be delivered by helicopter and workers will hike in on foot to complete the work. The work will be completed in several days. The corridor remains closed to public access.

Mountain Valley LLC's initial proposal for a pipeline right-of-way across the Jefferson National Forest was approved in 2017. Mountain Valley LLC began construction along the 3.5-mile corridor, including clearing vegetation, felling trees, and staging pipe.

On July 27, 2018, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit vacated the decision authorizing the right-of-way and construction work to be stopped. Since that time, the USDA Forest Service has worked with Mountain Valley LLC to develop, update, and implement a stabilization plan. The stabilization plan focuses on protecting soil and water resources and includes monitoring conditions, securing pipe sections on the surface, ensuring erosion control measures are functional or enhanced, prepping base soils, and seeding.

Christiansburg, East Mont high schools, Auburn Middle School to take part in statewide initiative to curb teen driver fatalities

SALEM, VA— Students at Christiansburg High School, Eastern Montgomery High School, and Auburn Middle School are among the students, schools, and youth groups across Virginia taking part in a statewide campaign that begins this week to increase seat belt usage rates among teens and youth.

Youth of Virginia Speak Out About Traffic Safety (YOVASO)'s peer-to-peer campaign, Drive for Change: Buckle Up and Slow Down, is designed to encourage youth and teens to develop a lifelong buckle-up habit by reminding them that seat belts are their best defense against injury and death in a crash.

The campaign also addresses speed-prevention after Virginia saw an alarming 56% increase in teen driver fatalities in 2021. According to the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV), from 2020 to 2021, 60% of fatal crashes involving teen drivers (ages 15-19) in Virginia were speed-related and 62% of teens killed in crashes were unrestrained.

YOVASO is working hard to bring change to those numbers by offering the Drive for Change: Buckle Up and Slow Down campaign over a three-month period that started on Tuesday, Sept. 6, and will conclude on Dec. 16, 2022. Participating high schools, middle schools, and youth groups will participate by completing a checklist of activities each month that educate and remind teens to buckle up and drive safely. Two options are available for participating: non-competing and competing. Schools and youth groups that elect to compete will be required to complete pre- and post-seat belt checks and a creative project that reaches a majority of students at their school or in their youth group. Non-competing schools may register to receive materials and complete any activities of their choice.

"Given the significant increase in teen driver fatalities in 2021, it's now more important than ever for teens to work together in their schools and communities to lead the change for driver and passenger safety," said Mary King, YOVASO Program Manager. "The Drive for Change campaign provides schools and students with the tools to educate teens about risky behaviors and to influence them to develop safe driving habits, such as buckling up, obeying speed limits, and avoiding distractions," King said. "With everyone's participation, we can save lives by helping our teens make it a priority when driving to protect themselves, their friends, families, and other motorists."

In addition to addressing speed prevention at the high school level, the campaign will focus on seat-belt use and passenger rights at the middle school level.

The campaign includes a Halloween component to remind all youth and teens to make good choices and celebrate safely during the celebratory weekend. Students will also be encouraged to connect with their local elementary schools to lead presentations provided by YOVASO on trick-or-treat safety and seat-belt safety.

At the conclusion of the campaign, each competing school and youth group will be judged on the completion of required checklist activities each month, the effectiveness and creativity of its seat belt and/or speed educational programs, the percentage of students reached, and the percentage increase in the school's seat belt usage rate by the end of the campaign.

Prizes funded by State Farm Insurance will be awarded to the top three high schools and middle schools as follows: first place, $500; second place, $250; and third place, $100. The winners will be announced on Jan. 11, 2023.

"At State Farm, we want to keep drivers and passengers safe on the roadways," said State Farm spokesperson Dwayne Redd. "This campaign is a creative reminder to young drivers to always wear seat belts and obey the speed limit. With these actions, the number of accidents, serious injuries, and deaths will be reduced."

To register your school for this campaign and to receive free materials, contact Casey Taylor, Program Development Coordinator at 540-739-4392 or email casey.taylor@vsp.virginia.gov. Registration can also be completed at www.yovaso.org/driveforchange.

YOVASO is Virginia's Peer-to-Peer Young Driver and Passenger Safety Program and is a program of the Virginia State Police with grant funding by the Virginia DMV. YOVASO is free and open to all Virginia high schools, middle schools, and youth groups. YOVASO currently has 87 schools and youth groups participating in the program.

you're right there in front of this kind of an animal," said Sterling Nesbitt, an associate professor of geosciences. "This Tyrannosaurus' skull really helps us introduce the idea of Earth history and geosciences as a whole."

At nearly 6 feet long, the life-size replica was molded from one of the world's most complete T. rex skulls, which was discovered in Montana in 2016. Its teeth measure between 5 and 6 inches long. The real skull likely belonged to a roughly 40-foot-long version of the famous carnivore.

The skull model arrived in Blacksburg this year and is hoped to attract visitors to the museum on the second floor of Derring Hall. While there, visitors can explore the thousands of other fossils and artifacts on display.

"It's an iconic form of animal that almost everyone can recognize right away," Nesbitt said. "T. rex lived about 65 million years ago, but the lineage of dinosaurs goes back about 230 million [years], so we're going to be filling that [timeline] out over the next five years or so with discoveries we've made here. ... Those are the real stories, so the skull is something people can start with and explore from there."

The museum opened in 1969 as the Geology Museum. Its title shifted to Museum of Geoscience when the geology department became the Department of Geosciences in 2003. The museum collection has increased its focus on vertebrate evolution (the study of fossils with bones) since Nesbitt and fellow researcher and assistant professor of geoscience Michelle Stocker arrived in Blacksburg eight years ago.

Along with thousands of fossils, the museum is home to a 32-inch OmniGlobe spherical display and an extensive collection of mineral specimens, bolstered by the recent donation of long-time supporter Don Dalton's personal collection.

"We have so many different minerals, lots of calcite, and just gorgeous minerals across the board and a whole variation from across the world too," said Mariah Green, manager of the museum. "So all together, it's a pretty big collection — over 14,000 mineral specimens."

A 1960 graduate, Dalton was a long-time donor who helped spearhead the museum's annual mineral sale about 25 years ago. Dalton died in July 2020 and left his personal mineral collection to the museum.

Green joined the College of Science a little more than a year ago after earning degrees at Northeastern Illinois University and the University of Colorado Boulder. She said being around the museum's rich collection allows her to continually expand her knowledge.

"Probably my favorite thing about this museum is just being able to improve it while also learning about new minerals that I never knew existed in my entire life before I got here," Green said.

"During the summer of 2016, I got a chance to do an internship at the Field Museum [in Chicago], and that's kind of what changed my world ... made me see this is what I want to do," Green said. "So if I can do that for another student, give them that experience, that makes my heart happy."

For Nesbitt, the addition of the T. rex skull and plans to grow the space around it to include an in-depth history from dinosaurs to birds is representative of the museum's efforts to also expand learning opportunities for the public.

"We're an open space and we're here for people to learn," Nesbitt said. "Each one of the objects in this room tells a story, and those are stories you can't really get across reading from a textbook, but you can come and see."

OBITUARIES

Butterworth, George Lynwood

George Lynwood Butterworth, 83, of Christiansburg, passed away Saturday, Sept. 3, 2022, surrounded by his loving family and his trusted dog, Mack, following a courageous 10-year battle dealing with complications from a stroke.

He was preceded in death by his wife of 54 years, Mary Hall Butterworth; his parents, Virginia Epperly Butterworth and Thomas Lynwood Butterworth; and half brothers Dewey Dickerson and Bobby Dickerson.

George was a wonderful friend, husband, father, uncle, grandfather, and great-grandfather. He cared for his wife, Mary, who suffered from Alzheimer's for many years at home, prior to her being admitted into Heritage Hall for care. George never missed a day visiting her prior to her death.

In his early years, he played sports while attending William Byrd High School and Christiansburg High School. George received his Associates Degree from New River Community College.

He worked and retired from Radford Army Ammunition Plan, following 35 years of service, working in multiple management positions. George was an avid hunter and outdoorsman and especially loved hunting quail, grouse, and turkey.

He enjoyed gardening, woodworking, and all sports, especially football, and was a member of Faith Christian Church in Christiansburg.

George is survived by a son, Terry Butterworth, of Christiansburg; his three grandchildren, Megan (Brandon) Stanardville, Va., Nicholas Butterworth (Amy) Boise, Idaho, and Alec Butterworth (Samantha) Barboursville, Va.; his great-grandchildren London Amelia, Madelyn Rose, Archer Grey, and Alec Cade; a special niece, Star Bolling; as well as many cousins, nieces and nephews.

The family thanks the many members of the medical staff at Lewis Gale Montgomery Regional Hospital, Heritage Hall Rehabilitation Center, Intrepid Home Health, and Good Samaritan Hospice Care, as well as the many special caregivers that cared for him at home.

A memorial service will be held at a later date.

McDonald, Jr., Wilbur (Mac) Lee

Wilbur (Mac) Lee McDonald, Jr., departed this life on Sept. 3.

He was born on July 13, 1946 to the late Wilbur (Tom) and Dorothy (Dot) McDonald. He will be sorely missed by his wife of 28 years, Sherry, and his brother, Kevin (Sherry).

The last six years of his life would not have been possible without the unending assistance from Dr. Heather Brooks (Blue Ridge Cancer Care) and Dr. Isaac Spence, (Carilion Clinic). Heartfelt thanks also go out to all of his friends throughout his wonderful life for the joy they brought. In honoring Mac's wishes, no memorial services will be held.

the clean" (Ezekiel 44:23).

At a church harvest festival, rain chased the activities into the building. Games, food, and a petting zoo found new locations throughout the church's hallways and rooms. During the evening, some of the animals soiled the floor.

Training the animals to respect the church property takes time and effort. For a believer, growing in holiness takes time and effort as well.

"They are to teach my people the difference between the holy and the common and show them how to distinguish between the unclean and

The Holy Spirit gives Christians the ability to determine what is holy. This is a process. God does not download every life situation and its proper response into a believer's mind. Through godly teaching and a searching of the Word, understanding grows. An important step in this process is identity. A believer must recognize that he or she is Christ's holy dwelling place and live accordingly.

Thought for Today: Discern what is holy. Send the common out to the barn.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Editor:

Had she lived, my first wife, Thora, would have been 93 on Sept. 9. As I near the end of my life, I just want the people of Radford to remember all that she did for the city before she died in 2012.

In the 1960s, she resurrected the Radford Woman's Club. Then, in 1971, she started the recycling of newspapers in the city as a fundraiser for the club. This led to a second place in the nation award by the Shell Oil Company in 1972, a continuing project of the Woman's Club, and the birth of recycling in Radford.

In 1975, she began writing a weekly column for the Radford News Journal, highlighting people and events in Radford, as well as issues like deploring the then-awful situation of the city library, which was housed in one crammed room of the old recreation building at the time. After her many articles and appearances before the Radford City Council, funds were made available for the beginnings of our marvelous library. She started home tours to raise money to support it. Today, the Lamplighters is a vigorous and great organization.

In 1980, she founded the Newcomers Club to introduce new citizens to each other. Then, in 1981, she founded the Radford Clothing Bank, which opened in 1982 and is still in operation today. This was always what she considered the best thing she ever did because it was a great help for disadvantaged people.

Within that framework, she started the Stork Exchange for baby clothes and supplies, and, with the great help of Cook's Clean Center, the August Coats for Kids program.

In 1993, she started Babies Into Books at Carilion Hospital and, three years later, Reading Is Fundamental.

She worked, as she said, with many great people to get her projects going, like Minnie Dean, Tom Starnes, and Polly Corn.

When Thora died in 2012, Mary Hardbarger wrote in the Radford News Journal that Thora was "the matriarch of Radford volunteering," and one editorial declared "community mourns the passing of a founding mother."

Thora made a difference, and I hope the City of Radford will always remember her.

Bountiful field crop harvests expected on the back of beneficial weather

Entering the 2022 growing season, the already tough task for Virginia farmers to produce quality crops was made even more difficult by inflation and supply chain disruptions.

Despite the difficulties, the state's farmers persevered and are on track to reap excellent yields on several major field crops thanks to an assist from Mother Nature.

"Coming into this year there was a lot of concern among farmers about their ability to get their hands on everything they needed, and then what it would cost," said Robert Harper, grain division manager for Virginia Farm Bureau Federation. "Yield is everything, and farmers went into their fields heading into 2022 knowing it was going to cost them more than it ever has to plant corn or soybeans."

Thankfully, Harper added, there are a good number of farmers expecting above-average yields and some "who are expecting the best crop they've ever grown. Having that extra yield is going to go a long way for their bottom line."

The success of Virginia's field crop growers comes despite many localities seeing below-average rainfall throughout the growing season, as indicated by the National Agricultural Statistics Service's (NASS) crop report for Aug. 29.

While statewide rainfall shortages have persisted throughout the summer, Harper noted timely rain showers have benefited many farmers growing crops west of Interstate 95.

The crop report revealed 96% and 93% of Virginia's corn and soybean crops were in fair or better condition, respectively, and 76% of corn and 69% soybeans were in good to excellent condition.

A mid-August NASS press release also showed farmers expected increased corn and soybean yields from last year. According to the release, Virginia corn is estimated to come in at 160 bushels per acre and soybeans at 47 bushels.

Harper noted that if each estimate is realized, the corn yield will be the second-best in state history, while the soybean yield will be a state record.

In addition to corn and soybeans, Virginia peanuts and cotton also are thriving this year. One hundred percent of peanuts and 99% of cotton are in fair or better condition, respectively, and 90% of peanuts are in good and excellent condition with cotton at 84%.

Shelley Barlow, who grows cotton, peanuts and soybeans, said her crops mostly were in good condition, but they're experiencing what she considers a third spell of heat stress. NASS, which tracks rainfall in nearby Norfolk, shows the area has seen a deficit of 7.2 inches of rain against an average year from June 1.

Barlow said cotton and peanut farmers in the area are hoping for occasional rain for the rest of their season. Soaking rains—or a prolonged wet period—could wash out harvests that also are projected to outperform last year's production totals.

Grain farmer Lynwood Broadus said his early-season corn and soybeans performed well, but mirrored Barlow's view that more rain is needed for crops still in the field.

"We're very optimistic," Broadus said. "It's Virginia. It's almost expected to be hot and dry, and sometimes you're lucky and get showers."

Hokies hoping for better luck against BC

Marty Gordon
 NRVsports@ourvalley.org

Virginia Tech and Boston College meet on the football field for the 31st time tonight, revisiting a rivalry that dates back to the BIG EAST Conference and includes two ACC Championship Game matchups.

Kickoff is set for 8 p.m. under the lights with ACC Network's The Huddle in town.

The last time the Hokies played the Eagles at home, Tech won a 40-14 game on Oct. 17, 2020. The Hokies' defense forced five turnovers, three fumbles and two interceptions. Now a member of the Chicago Bears, Tech running back Khalil "Juice" Herbert rushed 18 times for 143 yards in that game.

The Hokies hold a 19-11 all-time series advantage over the Eagles. The teams have played at least once every season since 1993, except for the 2004 season when Boston College had not yet joined the ACC. Tech is 2-0 in ACC Championship games against BC, winning back-to-back years in 2007 and 2008.

Three things to know

1. The Hokies have had success at home early. Tech is 103-23-1 for a .815 winning percentage in home openers since its opening season in 1892 and is currently on a six-game winning streak in home openers dating back to 2016. Since 1988, Tech has gone an impressive 31-3 (.912) in home openers with its last loss coming against then-No. 1 Ohio State 42-24.

2. Tech starts strong against ACC foes in Lane. Though it's been rare for Tech's first home game to be league play since it has happened only three times since the Hokies joined the ACC in 2004. Typically, VT plays a non-conference foe for the home opener, and the Hokies have gone 3-0 in those three games. Playing off the crowd of Hokie Nation that is licking its chops to cheer on its team, Tech has beaten Georgia Tech (2012), NC State (2020) and then-No. 10 North Carolina (2021), with two of the three outings being one-score games and the electric environment being the difference. Lastly, Tech will be playing in its 20th Orange Effect game (Tech fans wear orange) and is 13-6 in those matchups.

3. Some history between Tech and BC. The two schools have been in the same conference twice, as the pair was in the BIG EAST together for over a decade (1993-03), and then Tech jumped to the ACC in '04 and the Eagles followed in '05. The Hokies lead the all-time series 19-11 (.663) and are 8-5 at home versus the Eagles. The Hokies flexed their dominance over the Eagles when the two were in the BIG EAST, owning an 8-3 (.727) advantage while it's been a little more neck and neck since the two arrived in the ACC with the Hokies holding an 11-8 lead.

Football is a family affair at Tech. Virginia Tech prides itself on a family atmosphere. That includes many sets of brothers of current and former Hokies. Since 1987, Tech has had 33 sets of brothers and 26 fathers and their sons take the field.

2022 family Hokies include tight end Nick Gallo and brother, Eric Gallo; linebacker Dax Hollifield and brother offensive lineman Jack Hollifield; defensive back Jayden McDonald and brother defensive back Jordan McDonald; defensive back Jalen Stroman and brother Greg Stroman; wide receiver Stephen Gosnell and brother Benji Gosnell; offensive lineman Kaden Moore and brother offensive lineman Braelin Moore; and wide receiver PJ Prioleau and his father Pierson Prioleau.

Top Performers of Week 1

Running back Keshawn King: King had a breakout performance in Norfolk, finishing with 111 rushing yards on 19 carries to go along with a 6-yard touchdown reception. This was his second career 100-yard outing on the ground and the most rushing yards by a Tech player in a season opener since Trey Edmunds notched 132 rushing yards against Alabama back on Aug. 31, 2013.

Linebacker Dax Hollifield: Hollifield did a little bit of everything against Old Dominion. He finished with 10 tackles, including 1.5 tackles for loss to go along with two forced fumbles, two pass breakups, and one fumble recovery, showcasing his versatility as one of the best linebackers in the ACC. Hollifield's 10 tackles were the most by a Hokie in a season opener since Rayshard Ashby's 13 tackles against Boston College on Aug. 31, 2019. He also became just the second player since 2007 to record two forced fumbles and one fumble recovery in the same game.

Tight end Nick Gallo: Gallo emerged as a top target for quarterback Grant Wells in Week 1, recording career highs with seven catches and 49 receiving yards to lead the Hokies in both categories.

Defensive back Nasir Peoples: Peoples asserted himself well against ODU, tying Hollifield for the team lead in tackles with 10 that included several big hits and a key solo stop on third down. He also added 1.5 tackles for loss to his stat line on Friday night.

Senior linebacker Dax Hollifield has become the face of the Virginia Tech defense, not just because of his outstanding play, but also because at every home game, he hypes the crowd by running around Lane Stadium, waving at fans, and throwing cups of water in the air.

Dax Hollifield is hyped for the Hokies' home opener vs. BC tonight

The Hokies take on Boston College at 8 p.m. tonight, and Dax Hollifield is ready to go.

No. 4 on the field, Hollifield has made his way to No. 1 in Hokie Nation's heart during his career with Virginia Tech Football.

"They're a passionate fanbase, I'm a passionate guy on the field, so it really resonates in that way," said Hollifield, a senior linebacker. "They're truly a 12th man, and it's awesome to play in front of them each weekend."

Hollifield has earned his spot as one of the faces of football. At every home game, he hypes up the crowd by running around Lane Stadium, waving at fans and throwing cups of water in the air.

Surprisingly, his big personality on the field doesn't equate to his life off the field.

"I'm not like I am on the field. When I get out there, I love the game and something triggers," he said. "I'm honestly a boring dude. My favorite memories are in the little things. They're not some crazy story. It's living the everyday."

"Living the everyday" for Hollifield consists of reading — his current book recommendation is "Flow: The Psychology of Optimal Experience" — as well as listening to TED Talks and hanging out with his teammates. Hollifield prioritizes learning and expanding his knowledge of topics other than football.

"I don't know if people know it, but I take pride in my grades and pride in my school," Hollifield said. "I really try to excel in the classroom on top of being on the football team."

The human nutrition, foods, and exercise major is minoring in chemistry and has big dreams for his future.

"I'm going to try my shot in the NFL. If that doesn't work out, I'll see where it goes from there," he said. "I want to travel one day and explore the untouched lands. Honestly, one day I'm probably just going to get a boat and sail everywhere and drop off the face of the earth and just do that and live like Jimmy Buffett."

For now, he said he's focused on playing well this season and making Hokie Nation proud.

"One of my goals this year is to go undefeated at home," Hollifield said. "I want to make Blacksburg — Lane Stadium — one of the hardest places to play in the country, if not the hardest place to play in."

As he reflects on what awaits after his senior year, Hollifield said he will miss the town of Blacksburg and the people he's met here more than anything else.

"As I've stayed here and gotten older here, I've come to love this place for what it is and how special a place it is," he said. "This is home for me."

Hokie swimmer named to U.S. national team

Virginia Tech's AJ Pouch has been named to the U.S. National Team, USA Swimming announced on Wednesday.

"Being named to the U.S. National team is something I've dreamed of since I started swimming," Pouch said. "To be able to wear the cap with my flag and my name is every swimmer's dream, and my dream finally came true. Not only does it mean I'm among the top swimmers in the country but also the world, and all I want is to keep this momentum going, especially as a Hokie."

"This dream would not have been possible without the support I get from Virginia Tech and everyone involved in Hokies Swim & Dive," Pouch said. "I can't wait to start repping the best country in the world as a Hokie! Go USA! Go Hokies!"

Athletes named to the 2022-2023 National Team will be on the National Team from Sept. 7, 2022 through Sept. 8, 2023.

The six athletes with the fastest times in each individual Olympic Event, from the combined results of (i) a USA Swimming sanctioned competition, (ii) a Fédération internationale de natation (FINA) approved competition (English: International Swimming Federation), or (iii) an international competition between Jan. 1, 2022, through Aug. 31, 2022, to which USA Swimming sent a team to USA Swimming or FINA sanctioned competitions, were named to the roster.

This summer, Pouch swam the 200 breast stroke in 2:09.07 at the U.S. Summer Nationals, the fifth-fastest time in the United States this year and the 14th-fastest all-time in the U.S. His time placed him fourth at the National Championships.

"I am very happy for AJ making the U.S. National Team in the 200 breast stroke and for being one of the top breast stroke swimmers in the country, and in the world," said Hokies Swim and Dive

FROM THE SIDELINES

The most wonderful time of the year: Football is here

It's the most wonderful time of the year. High school football is in week three, college football is in week two, and professional football kicks off this weekend. For sports fans, this definitely is the best time of the year.

Fans of all ages are planning the day out for this weekend so they can watch the first weekend of games.

As the song starts: "It's the most wonderful time of the year. With the kids jingle belling. And everyone telling you 'be of good cheer.' It's the most wonderful time of the year."

While there may not be any snow on the ground, we can expect plenty of good cheer and loud shouting, not only at the football field but also at the television.

I recommend you ease into it this weekend with a small dose of Virginia Tech football Saturday night and then a Sunday afternoon professional game that might include the Redskins (woops, the Commanders) or the Panthers.

I know there are other football fans out there other than Washington and

Carolina but get used to it, that's the only real two you will see on the local channels this season unless you have the NFL Network.

Also, make sure you have the ACC Network and pick up ESPNU so you can catch all the Hokie action. Yes, Comcast Cable has added the ACC Network so fans have no excuses with them or with Shentel.

Thank you, cable companies, for realizing how important the ACCN is to people in our area.

It's the most wonderful time of the year.

For those college fans that are still catching up, here are a few college football rule changes:

Targeting Carryover Appeal Process

In games that have instant replay, when a targeting foul occurs in the second half, the carryover penalty (of sitting out the first half of that player's next game) will be eligible for further appeal. The process will begin with a conference submitting a request to the NCAA national coordinator of officials, who would review video of the play. If it is obvious that a player was incorrectly penalized for targeting, the call would be overturned, and the player would be cleared to play in the first half of the next game.

Deceptive Injury Timeout Investigation Process

To address teams that are awarded an injury timeout through deceptive actions, panel members approved a reporting and investigation process. Schools and conferences will be able to report questionable scenarios to the national coordinator of officials, who will review and provide feedback to the conference for further action. Any penalties levied would be up to the conference office or school involved.

The NCAA Football Rules Committee considered several in-game options to address this, including altering the injury timeout rule to remove the injured student-athlete for more than one play. Currently, an injured player is required to sit out one play. This concept was debated at length, but the committee was concerned with the additional issues that could be created and did not want to encourage players to continue to participate when injured.

Committee members discussed how the pace of play appears to be contributing to this concern. "We considered all options to address this issue, including allowing both teams an opportunity to substitute after a first down," said David Shaw, chair of the Football Rules Committee and coach at Stanford. "This is another step to consider in the future."

Blocking Below the Waist

The panel approved a proposal to improve safety and simplify the rules governing blocking below the waist. The proposal will allow blocking below the waist only by linemen and stationary backs inside the tackle box. Outside the tackle box on scrimmage plays, blocking below the waist will be prohibited. Analysis of available NCAA injury surveillance data indicates a decreasing knee injury trend that coincides with recent rules changes in this area.

Other Rule Changes

- If a ball carrier simulates a feet-first slide, officials will declare the runner down at that spot.
- Defensive holding will remain a 10-yard penalty but will always carry an automatic first down.
- The replay official will address any clock adjustment and status only when a ruling is overturned with less than two minutes in the second or fourth quarters.
- Illegal touching by an originally ineligible player is penalized five yards from the previous spot and now includes loss of down.

Whoever you are cheering for, enjoy! It's the most wonderful time of the year.

team head coach Sergio Lopez Miro. "It speaks volumes on the hard work and dedication that he has for his swimming and for the Hokies Swim & Dive team."

"It's also a great indication for him that he is in a good position to keep fighting for the next couple of years to try to make the Olympic Team and go to Paris to represent the United States in 2024," Coach Miro said. "Congratulations, AJ. We're proud of you and Go Hokies."

Pouch earned Honorable Mention

All-American honors in 2022 in the 100 and 200 breast stroke after finishing 11th in the 200 breast (1:51.72) and 15th in the 100 breast (51.87). At the ACC's, Pouch placed third in the 400-medley relay (3:02.71) and fifth in the 200 breast (1:53.01). A year ago, Pouch placed fifth in the 200 breast stroke at the U.S. Olympic Trials. He has also been a member of the National Junior Team since 2018-19.
