Radford School board votes to change the grading scale mid-year

RADFORD – Against the recommendation of the superintendent, the Radford City School Board voted in favor of making a change to the school system's grading scale for the start of the second semester.

At the school board's Jan. 10 meeting, Vice-Chair Dr. Jody Ray made a motion to change the school division's current grading scale – which makes a 40 percent the lowest grade a student can receive for an assignment even if the student does not complete the assignment at all – and return the low end of the scale to a zero. The change from a zero to 100 scale to a modified scale was made during the time schools were closed due to COVID-19 restrictions.

Board Member Jane Swing was the sole no-vote among the five board members and said she agreed with going back to a zero-100 scale, just not in the middle of the school year.

"I can see going back to zero," she said. "My concern is doing it in the middle of the year."

"When you change the rules in the middle of the game, that's unfair," Swing said later in the discussion.

Radford City Schools Superintendent Robert Graham agreed.

"I would like the minutes to reflect that I did not recommend this," he said. "This is like being in the middle of the basketball game and moving the three-point line back."

Graham said the change could affect graduation rates and could have other unintended negative consequences.

Board member Chris Calfee, who said at the meeting he campaigned and was elected on a platform of this change being made, said he had "absolute faith in our teachers to do the right thing" to help students achieve under the return to the zero – 100 scale. He said Radford's teachers are exemplary educators who can help students succeed with the change.

Dr. Matt Hurt, executive director of the Comprehensive Instructional Program, was available to the board via Zoom at the meeting and said he recommends

A Machine de Cirque artist prepares to perform in "La Galerie."

Machine de Cirque brings poetry, humor, and dizzying feats in innovative circus show

Infusing poetry, intelligence, and humor into an innovative circus show, Machine de Cirque's ode to creativity, "La Galerie," comes to the Moss Arts Center on Friday, Jan. 27, at 7:30 p.m.

Seven acrobats and an eccentric musician take in a monochrome art exhibit and, with a creative spark, set off an explosion of color. In mocking defiance of convention, these wacky and endearing characters eagerly explore an exhibition from the inside out.

Spectators are taken on a trip to the outer boundaries of art by means of a totally out-of-this-world exhibit, where movements from white to color and shifting sets create the most unexpected scenes. Dizzying feats, astonishing discoveries, poetic liberties, and a serious dose of some silly good fun come together in "La Galerie."

The performance will be held in the center's Anne and Ellen Fife Theater, located within

Seven charged in Southwest Virginia heroin, meth trafficking conspiracy

ABINGDON - A federal grand jury in Abingdon has indicted seven individuals as part of a large-scale heroin and methamphetamine trafficking conspiracy that brought the drugs from Michigan into Southwest Virginia and Eastern Tennessee for redistribution. The four-count indictment, returned under seal last week and unsealed on Wednesday, Jan. 18 following multiple arrests, charges Robert Earl Warr, 32, of Detroit; David Edward Farmer, 56, of Strawberry Plains, Tenn.; John Joel Foster, 50, of Lee County, Va.; Robert Lee Jenkins, 25, of Detroit; Ray Anthony McSwain, 28, of Detroit; Garrett Lee Teffeteller, 42, of Townsend, Tenn.; and Darin Ken Thomas, 38, of Kodak, Tenn., as follows: Warr, Jenkins, Farmer, Foster, and Teffeteller are charged with conspiring to distribute more than 50 grams of methamphetamine. Warr, Jenkins, McSwain, Farmer, and Thomas are charged with one count of conspiring to distribute more than 100 grams of heroin. Farmer and Thomas are each charged with one count of possession of a firearm in furtherance of a drug trafficking crime. According to court documents, the co-conspirators operated in Southwest Virginia and Eastern Tennessee from September 2021 through September of 2022. During that time, Warr, Jenkins, and McSwain traveled from Michigan to Tennessee to secure large quantities of heroin and crystal methamphetamine for local suppliers to sell throughout Southwest Virginia and Eastern Tennessee. Alan Forrest, a professor in the Department of Counselor Education, speaks to his Radford University graduate students in the course "Death, Loss, Grief, and Bereavement."

Literary workshop puts poetry in motion for counseling class

Robert Frost said poetry occurs "when an emotion has found its thought, and the thought has found words." Frost won four Pulitzer Prizes in his field and knew well of what he spoke, so in light of his perspective, it makes sense that writing could also be useful as a tool in counseling. About two dozen Radford University graduate students in the course "Death, Loss, Grief, and Bereavement" recently got firsthand experience with poems as therapy, initially as an audience and then as composers of their own works. "One of the things that we look at is the use of the creative arts as a way for people who are grieving to express themselves," said Alan Forrest, a professor in the Department of Counselor Education. "And the general goal of grief therapy is to help people externalize the wide array of different emotions that they're experiencing internally, through the creative arts, and in this particular case, through poetry, both listening to poetry and then talking about it." On Nov. 8, 2022, Forrest invited two local authors to his class - Colleen Redman and Katherine Chantal. Over the past months, the pair has given interactive readings at the Little River Poetry Festival and Floyd, Virginia's Jesse Peterman Memorial Library, among other stops. Chantal recently published "Poetic Memoir of a Nascent Senescent: Poems from My Sixties," and Redman is the author of numerous books, including 2004's "The Jim and Dan Stories," in which she wrote about losing two brothers in the same year. The authors read to the class - pieces largely about loss - then asked the audience to share their own similar reflections. "The last hour of the night was spent with the students, reading their heartfelt and poetic statements that came from talking," Redman wrote of the experience in a post on her blog. "There were goosebumps, sighs, and knowing nods. It was a meaningful sharing all around." She recently said she believes almost any art can be applied to counseling, particularly writing. "You're putting into words things that can't be put into words, so you're doing it indirectly. Poetry can help. You can use metaphors; you can get even deeper," she said, citing the example of her own work and her writing about the passing of her brothers. "Not only did I feel like it made me a better writer and gave me confidence, but it helped me through my grief," Redman said. "I feel like it made me a better person to have the experience of that loss and to feel and understand that when they left, a part of me left, but a part of them lives in me. "And I think [the students] have to be empathetic to be able to be good counselors. To be able to witness grief and sit with it and not be uncomfortable ... and just witness people." The poetry was also in line with the course's primary tracks, which are the academic as well as the practical. "They're learning the different theory strategies and therapeutic interventions to use and working with clients, which is important because we're a professional training program," Forrest said. "Another thing that is of equal if not greater importance is for them to become aware of their own thoughts, feelings, beliefs about death and loss, grief and bereavement, so that when they are sitting in the sacred space of a therapy room, and those issues come up, they don't freeze," said Forrest. Whitney Harrison, a graduate student from Giles County who's studying clinical mental health, participated in the exercise and wrote about the various paths her life had taken, routes that led her through both academia and motherhood. "I found it to be incredibly powerful because poetry is not something that you're taught in a class to necessarily do with people," Harrison said. "And yet, being in that room and watching all these people share their feelings, different things came out for different people, and it was very impactful for everyone. "It obviously moved several people," she said. "And I think if you're going to be vulnerable, being vulnerable in a room full of future counselors is the place to be. Incredibly safe. And the poets themselves were just so warm and accepting and inviting in that space."

The ceremonial collar (ca. early 1900s) was used by members of the Tadmire Light Lodge 6184 of the Grand United Order of the Odd Fellows and the Saint Francis Council of the Right and Worthy Grand Council of the Independent Order of Saint Luke, located at 203 Gilbert St. in Blacksburg.

St. Luke and Odd Fellows Hall was built in 1907 in the center of New Town, an African American Community in Blacksburg that emerged after the Civil War. New Town consisted of Gilbert Street and a small lane, home to about 20 families until the neighborhood began losing residents due to desegregation in the late 1960s and commercial development in the 1970s.

St. Luke & Odd Fellows Hall is the only remaining neighborhood structure.

This is the 100th year of the Scholastic Awards. The Alliance for Young Artists and Writers sponsors the awards for young artists ages 13 and up in grades 7-12.

"Student artists receive an opportunity to exhibit locally at the Fine Arts Center with gold medal winners moving to the national competition," according to the FACNRV website. "At the national level students compete for more than $37,000 in scholarships along with awards and the opportunity to exhibit in New York and other regional exhibits. For the first year, the Fine Arts Center is offering scholarship awards to the American Visions nominees from Southwest Virginia along with one outstanding middle school artist [Close]."

The students' work is being displayed at the Fine Arts Center of the NRV from Thursday, Feb. 16 through Sunday, Mar. 26.

The Alliance for Young Artists and Writers is a nonprofit organization

"whose mission is to identify students with exceptional artistic and literary talent and present their remarkable work to the world through the Scholastic Art & Writing Awards" according to the organization's website. "The Awards give students opportunities for recognition, exhibition, publication, and scholarships. In 2022, students across the United States and Canada entered more than 260,000 original works in 28 different categories of art making such changes in a new school year, rather than mid-year.

Board Member Gloria Boyd, a retired teacher, said she believes teachers should make every effort to work with students to help them get their work done.

"I don't oppose extensions on deadlines or asking to take a test again," she said. "But the credit for zero effort is a sticking point for me."

Ray, Boyd, Calfee and Chair Jenny Riffe voted in favor of the return to the zero - 100 grade scale.

The school board's next meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 14 at 6 p.m.

Survey: Most of Virginia families polled would relocate to Florida, France in 2023

FamilyDestinationGuide.com, a kid-friendly vacation ideas site, surveyed 3,000 families to find out where they would move to if they could hypothetically make a clean break, pack up, and leave the commonwealth.

Florida proved to be the state of choice for Virginians. Internationally, the country of choice was France.

In the wake of another challenging year with high food and gas prices and a summer of travel chaos, fourteen percent of the families surveyed said they have seriously thought about moving permanently. That they picked Florida as their destination was no surprise considering the state's warm weather and beautiful beaches, its lack of state income tax, its diverse population, its reputation for delicious food, and its many attractions. Each day, the Sunshine State welcomes hundreds of newcomers into its borders.

The poll did reveal some surprises, however. Californians, for example, are apparently quite happy to turn their backs on permanent sunshine and heat and move to the chilly east coast to New York. However, New York State does offer advantages that California cannot match including better public transportation, four distinct seasons, and more favorable time zones for employees who liaise with European-based colleagues.

Across the country, the majority of families surveyed chose the United Kingdom as their international first country of choice perhaps because of the lack of a language barrier and the country's history.

Virginians, however, opted for France, which offers American families a high quality of life, a strong economy, beautiful scenery, proximity to other European countries, and the opportunity for cultural immersion. Moving to France can be a rewarding and enriching experience for families looking for a change of pace and a new cultural experience.

THE NIGHT SEASON

Read Psalms 62:1 through 68:35

George A. Young, a bivocational preacher in the nineteenth century, ministered mainly to rural churches while he supplemented his income as a carpenter. After many years of struggle he was able to build a home for his family with his own hands. While away from home in ministry, some who disagreed with his preaching burned his house to the ground. Shortly thereafter he wrote the hymn, "God Leads Us Along."

Come and hear, all you who fear God; let me tell you what he has done for me. I cried out to him with my mouth; his praise was on my tongue (Psalm 66:16-17).

The Psalmist's words speak to us when we are going through life's challenges. And Pastor Young speaks to us of praising God in the night seasons of life: "Some through great sorrow, but God gives a song, in the night season and all the day long."

Like Pastor Young, we can pray and we sing in the night. Prayer plus praise equals power. Focus on God's presence and power and don't let sin cut the lines of communication.

Prayer Suggestion: Lord, we are thankful that through the challenges, we can still sing praises to You.

Quicklook: Psalm 66:13-20

Virginia Tech researchers developing method to improve long-term storage of pears

The research on pears helps both consumers and producers by keeping prices down and by reducing overall loss.

By Max Esterhuizen

To help keep prices low and pears fresh longer, Virginia Tech researchers in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences are examining how fresh pears change during storage and how this information can be used to keep food safety risks low over time.

“The tree fruit industry uses a method that slows down the pears’ natural ripening process so consumers can get fresh pears year-round and help shoppers stay within their budgets,” said Alexis Hamilton, the co-principal investigator of the project, an assistant professor of food processing microbiology in the Department of Food Science and Technology, and Virginia Cooperative Extension specialist. “It’s a really good way to produce and market this product all year.”

During the two-year, $335,000 grant from the Center for Produce Safety, Virginia Tech researchers are collaborating with the University of Georgia to examine different storage methods to reduce spoilage and food safety issues associated with the long-term storage of the popular tree fruit.

“Anyone who has ever put a produce item in a refrigerator knows that it will eventually go bad,” Hamilton said. “This project will help us understand how current industry practices can impact spoilage and food safety concerns so that we can provide actionable recommendations to the industry to delay spoilage even further without increasing food safety risks. We’re hopeful that these recommendations could be extended to other tree fruits as well.”

This research helps consumers and producers alike by keeping prices down and by reducing overall loss.

Hamilton previously worked with apples alongside the Washington Tree Fruit

Research Commission in Washington state, studying how this long-term storage environment can impact the safety of fresh apples.

“We learned some really interesting things about how spoilage issues can affect food safety risks over time,” she said. “We’re hoping to apply this question and add some other risk mitigation measures for the storage of pears.”

Currently, pears are wrapped in paper in boxes or stored in bulk bins for up to a year.

The researchers, including Laura Strawn, an associate professor in the department and the principal investigator of the project, will initially look at microbial communities on the surfaces of pears and study how the communities change during the storage environment. Then, the top three key players will be identified and tested against a foodborne pathogen.

Shields, Jr., Walter Dunnington

Walter Dunnington Shields, Jr. (“Watt”), 75, of Christiansburg, passed away on Jan. 12, 2023, after a valiant fight for life following a stem cell transplant in 2019 to conquer Acute Myeloid Leukemia.

Watt was born on July 18, 1947, to Walter Dunnington Shields, Sr., and Ann Kingdon Shields in Bluefield, W.Va. After graduating from Christchurch School, he attended and graduated from Marshall University.

A lifelong lover of science, Watt achieved his Doctor of Dental Science at the Medical College of Virginia in 1974. He was commissioned as a captain in the United States Army and retired as a colonel in 1994. He completed a master’s degree at George Washington University and completed his residency in periodontology in 1981.

During his military service, he was awarded the Legion of Merit, the Order of Military Medical Merit, the Surgeon General’s Specialty Designator, and three Meritorious Service Medals. He loved teaching and served as an instructor in the U.S. Army dental residency programs.

Watt established his periodontology practice in Blacksburg in 1994. Even in private practice, he thrived on learning and continuously sought to master the latest innovations in his field, even completing advanced training in Sweden. He led the New River Valley study club for area dentists for 14 years to discuss the latest in dental research from around the world. He also led an informal cabal of local dentists at one of his favorite restaurants, The Cellar, where topics could include anything except dentistry.

He was a former President of the Virginia Society of Periodontists. One of his proudest achievements was serving as a mentor in the Virginia Tech Pre-Dental Society where he helped launch the careers of numerous future dentists.

Watt’s academic papers were published in the Journal of Periodontology, the Journal of the American Dental Association, and the Journal of the U.S. Army Medical Department. A meticulous scientific data collector and researcher to the end, Watt was actively collaborating up until the time of his death with colleagues at the Medical University of the South Carolina College of Dental Medicine on a paper based on more than 20 years of his clinical findings.

Watt met his future wife, Tandy Tully Shields, at Marshall University

Shields, in 1969. They moved to Richmond in 1970 where Tandy launched her career in communications and supported Watt as he completed dental school. They married on Aug. 14, 1971, and after Watt was commissioned, they traveled around the world to eight different military assignments with their three children. Watt’s favorite assignments were their six years in Germany where he particularly enjoyed “Volksmarches,” 10- to 20-kilometer organized hikes through the countryside with leisurely stops for beer and bratwursts and an oompah band at the end.

Watt retired in 2018 and enjoyed hiking and biking around the New River Valley, especially on the Huckleberry Trail where he sponsored a bench. He loved escorting Tandy to the latest showings at the Lyric and was proud to sponsor a seat at the theater. A lifelong cinephile, Watt and his son, John, had weekly boys nights out, and they never missed a new movie. He enjoyed visiting his daughters in Northern Virginia and seeing his five grandchildren. Watt loved hosting his extended family at Flat Top Lake in West Virginia and captaining them on his pontoon boat. He loved traveling, and some of his favorite recent trips included a tour of Prague with his three children to celebrate his 70th birthday and visiting the Grand Canyon last year where he rode a burro around the rim.

Predeceased by his parents, Watt is survived by his wife of 51 years, Tandy, and his three children, Maurine Tully Shields Fanguy, Elizabeth Dunnington Shields Murphy (Robert), and John Kingdon Shields. He also leaves behind five grandchildren, Julia Fanguy, John “Jack” Fanguy, James “Emmett” Murphy, Maeve Murphy, and Kathleen “Kate” Murphy. He is also survived by his sister, Ann Shields Stone (Jerry), and his brother, Edward Southard Shields.

Services will be held at McCoy Funeral Home, 150 Country Club Drive in Blacksburg today, Saturday, Jan. 21, 2023. Visitation is at 1 p.m. and the funeral service is at 2 p.m. with the Rev. Douglas Kanney officiating. A reception will be held after the service at The Village Center, 2387 Warm Hearth Drive in Blacksburg. Later this year, he will be laid to rest at Arlington National Cemetery with full military honors.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests blood or platelet donations through the Red Cross or contributions to a local Habitat for Humanity chapter.

Sowers, Dorothy Eller

Dorothy Eller Sowers, 86, passed away peacefully on Jan. 12, 2023, at her home in Dublin.

She was born in Purlear, N.C. on Jan. 29, 1936, to the late Gilbert Clayton and Fannie Elizabeth Eller.

Dorothy retired from American University in Washington, D.C. After retiring, Dot traveled, especially to her late daughter’s home in Florida, and she also loved going to watch her great nephews’ basketball games up and down the East Coast. She enjoyed going to visit her friends, going out to eat, and, at times, shopping.

Dot was a volunteer at Highland Ridge Rehab Center for over 25 years. She said she loved to make others smile, and she would spend several hours daily playing bingo, talking to the residents, and bringing them lots of magazines, costume jewelry, and whatever they asked her for.

Through the years, Dot stayed in touch with the 54 classmates of her Dublin High School graduating class.

Dot loved her Dublin High School class of ‘54 classmates, and they all stayed in touch through the years.

Dorothy was preceded in death by her parents, Gilbert and Fannie

Loy, who had been her caregiver for the last few years; her daughter-in-law, Dorothy Brown; nephews Tony and Jerry Rickey; nieces Cindy Lou Murphy and Brenda O’Neal; great-nephews D’Vante Todd and Kamryn Elijah Edwards; her great-great-nephew, Kullen Todd Edwards, numerous cousins, and a very special friend, Inez Tracy. Christiansburg's Thompson named first-team all-state

Marty Gordon
NRVsports@mainstreetnewspapers.com

Several serious bumps and bruises this season forced many new faces into action for the Christiansburg High School football team. One of those was Jeremiah "J.T." Thompson, who moved into a starting linebacker role in week four when Thaxton Henley suffered a season-ending injury. Thompson thus became an important part of the team's run to the state's Class 3 semi-finals. He finished the season with 72 tackles, 49 of them solos, second on the team.

Thompson also had two interceptions, a sack, and returned an interception for a touchdown. For his effort, he was honored on the Region D first-team and was named the defensive specialist of the year on the All-County/All-City team. Monday, he added the all-state Class 3 honor to his list of honors, being named the classification's defensive specialist of the year.

The junior transferred to Christiansburg from Auburn in the tenth grade. This past year, he put on 10 to 15 pounds and grew to a height of six feet.

Despite Christiansburg's loss to Heritage in the state semis, Thompson felt the season was a successful one that built on the previous year's accomplishments. "It (losing in the semis) showed us we gotta take everyone seriously. We underestimated our opponent," he said.

Thompson also played quarterback for a number of snaps when Tanner Evans was injured. He also lined up some as a tailback.

"I like being on the field. I wanna play," he said.

This winter, he is running indoor track and will turn to baseball in the spring, but football is slowly becoming his number-one sport.

"I think we can build off this season. We have a younger group of good players (this year's junior varsity team finished undefeated) coming up, so I expect we will be tough again next year. I'm looking forward to my senior season," Thompson said.

He would like to play football at the next level and is open to playing quarterback or running back during the 2023 season. "I will do whatever needs to be done to help the team," he said.

The Blue Demons also had several players named to the second-team all-state list. Tanner Evans was a second-team selection for both defensive back and running back while Curtis Altizer was honored as a second-team linebacker. Ayden Conley was named to the second team as both an offensive and a defensive lineman. Jayron Thompson was selected as a second-team receiver.

New and returning Hokie players hit the weight room as spring workouts began this week.

Hokies begin spring workouts

Year one is down in the Brent Pry era at Virginia Tech, and Tuesday returning players joined several early admission players for workouts at the university's indoor facility.

Staffers divided players into two groups with Senior Director of Strength and Conditioning Dwight Galt IV leading the workouts. Doing a multitude of exercises, the returning players welcomed the new mid-year enrollees, who moved in just this past weekend.

From utilizing the weight room to the Beamer-Lawson Indoor Practice Facility, the Hokies did circuit training and more as they head into Hunger Drills – their early morning winter conditioning workouts – later this month.

At least six early enrollees were among the group, getting a head start on their careers in Blacksburg.

Tech took a hit when Temple transfer Darion Varner flipped his commitment from the Hokies to Wisconsin. He had earned first-team All-American Athletic Conference this past season with 35 tackles with 12.5 tackles for loss and 7.5 sacks. He ranked tied for 17th nationally in sacks per game and tied for 20th in tackles for loss per game.

On the other hand, an outstanding player flipped from Boston College to Tech as running back Bhayshul Tuten is now in Blacksburg. This past season, the North Carolina A&T sophomore rushed 208 times for 1,363 yards and had 13 rushing touchdowns and another four receiving.

His 2021 stats led the Big South conference in all-purpose yards per game (155), yards per carry (6.55), rushing touchdowns (13), rushing yards, rushing yards per game (123.9), scoring (9.3), and total touchdowns.

He ranked in the top 10 nationally in total touchdowns, scoring, rushing yards per game, rushing yards, rushing touchdowns, and all-purpose yards.

Tech had previously landed a trio of outstanding names through the transfer portal: wide receiver Ali Jennings (Old Dominion) quarterback Kyron Drones (Baylor), and wide receiver Quan Felton (Norfolk State).

Poll watch: Hokie baseball ranked in preseason polls

Precisely one month from the start of the 2023 campaign, the Virginia Tech baseball team is already gathering a wealth of potential for another high-achieving season on the diamond as the Hokies have been ranked in three national preseason polls from respected outlets.

D1BASEBALL – No. 14

For the first time since the outlet's rankings debut in 2015, Virginia Tech has earned a spot in D1Baseball's preseason top 25 poll, landing at No. 14, the third highest ranking among ACC programs. Last season, the Hokies entered D1Baseball's top 25 on April 11 and remained ranked for eight consecutive weeks, including seven straight weeks ranked inside the top 10.

Tech peaked at No. 2 in D1Baseball's rankings on May 23 and entered the 2022 NCAA Division I Baseball Championship ranked No. 4 nationally. After finishing one win shy of advancing to the 2022 Men's College World Series in Omaha, the Hokies placed No. 11 overall in the poll's year-end rankings, marking the program's highest such finish all-time.

As it stands, four of Tech's 2023 ACC opponents appear in D1Baseball's preseason top 25. The Hokies will host No. 19 Virginia (March 31 – April 2) and No. 12 North Carolina (April 28-30) while making trips to No. 22 Miami (March 17-19) and No. 6 Wake Forest (May 18-20).

PERFECT GAME – No. 15

Down one line from D1Baseball's No. 14 ranking, Perfect Game ranked Virginia Tech No. 15 in its season-opening top 25 poll, signifying another program-first appearance for the Hokies (since at least 2013).

While D1Baseball favored Tech in its ACC comparisons against Louisville and Miami – as well as its consideration against TCU and UCLA – Perfect Game disagreed, presenting the Hokies as the fifth strongest ACC program out of the gates. Within the ACC, Perfect Game has Tech clocked behind No. 5 Wake Forest, No. 7 Louisville, No. 9 Miami, and No. 13 North Carolina while leading No. 19 Virginia and No. 21 NC State.

On the flip side, Perfect Game backed Tech in its outlooks against three teams that were ranked higher than the Hokies by D1Baseball: Oklahoma State (No. 18), Maryland (No. 22), and East Carolina (unranked).

Virginia Tech finished the 2022 season ranked No. 10 in Perfect Game's year-end poll release.

COLLEGIATE BASEBALL NEWSPAPER – No. 28

Known as college baseball's oldest poll dating back to 1959, Collegiate Baseball ranked Virginia Tech No. 28 in its annual "Fabulous 50" preseason selections.

Of the 10 ACC programs appearing in the poll's top 50, Tech drew the seventh most points behind No. 6 Louisville, No. 8 Miami, No. 10 Wake Forest, No. 11 North Carolina, No. 16 Virginia, and No. 23 Georgia Tech. The Hokies were late bloomers in last season's CBN polls, cracking the outlet's top 30 for the first time on April 25 (No. 26) before peaking on May 23 at No. 2.

This season, Tech is scheduled to face seven ACC programs within CBN's preseason top 50, including matchups at No. 32 Florida State and against No. 42 Clemson.

As of Jan. 17, three of the remaining six nationally respected college baseball polls – Baseball America, NCBWA and USA TODAY Sports (coaches poll) – have yet to release their preseason rankings.

Virginia Tech will open its 2023 regular season schedule on Friday, Feb. 17, at College of Charleston in Mount Pleasant, South Carolina. The Cougars (37-20 overall) won the 2022 Colonial Athletic Association's regular season championship courtesy of their 19-5 league record.

BLACKSBURG – Virginia Tech men's soccer head coach Mike Brizendine announced the addition of Owen Burnett to the program's staff on Wednesday, Jan. 18. Burnett will serve in a volunteer assistant role for the Hokies.

"We're pumped to bring Owen onto our staff," Brizendine said of Burnett's hiring. "He's a guy that I've known for a while now and I admire his willingness to help out in whatever way he can. It's an exciting time in

Trevor Cone teeing it up against the best on PGA Tour

Trevor Cone, a Virginia Tech alumnus, former ACC champion, and All-American in men's golf, is now playing on golf's biggest stage and looking to establish himself among the sport's greats.

Only moments after securing his PGA Tour card, Trevor Cone took a shower.

The suds flowed over his head, across his shoulders, and down his back. He further soaked in their glory by consuming several healthy gulps and ultimately came to an undeniable conclusion that beer showers are the best.

Cone earned the right to partake in this celebratory venture after he obtained his PGA Tour card by finishing in the top 25 of the Korn Ferry Tour points standings at the conclusion of that tour's season this past August. His 34th place finish at the Pinnacle Bank Championship held in Omaha, Nebraska, enabled him to finish 22nd on the regular season eligibility points list of the tour that serves as a precursor to professional golf's biggest stage.

Cone, who graduated in 2015 with a degree in marketing from the Pamplin College of Business, made his PGA Tour debut Sept. 15 at the Fortinet Championship held in Napa, California. He became just the fourth Virginia Tech player ever to play on the PGA Tour, joining Johnson Wagner, Brendon de Jonge, and Tim Collins Jr.

Not surprisingly, Cone found himself battling a severe case of anxiety while on the tee box to hit his first PGA shot.

"It just seemed like everything was moving 1,000 miles an hour when usually it's just another day out there," Cone said via telephone from his home in Charlotte a few days before Christmas. "You always get first tee jitters no matter what. It doesn't really matter, but usually you can get past them, and I don't know. It was interesting. I just couldn't slow anything down, and something so natural to me just kind of felt foreign. And then, that lasted for a while.

"I hit a pretty good shot and ended up making birdie on that hole, so that was cool. And surprisingly, usually when something like that happens, you think you would calm down, but somehow the adrenaline, that was the most adrenaline I probably ever had."

Cone, a native of Concord, North Carolina, who was an All-American at Virginia Tech in 2014 and the 2015 ACC champion, played in four PGA events this fall and shot under par in three of them, making the cut twice. His best finish came at the Sanderson Farms Championships in Jackson, Mississippi, where he shot 6-under-par for the tournament and finished tied for 45th.

The PGA Tour oddly starts its season in the fall and crosses into a new calendar year toward an August conclusion. But for a lot of fans, January serves as the "real" launching of a new golf season.

Most PGA stars eschew the fall tournaments, waiting until the new year to tee off – names like Jordan Spieth, Xander Schauffele, and Justin Thomas. All 2022 winners and those who finished in the top 30 of the FedEx Cup opened the new year at the Sentry Tournament of Champions in Maui, Hawaii, on Jan. 5-8 before hopping over to Honolulu to play in the Sony Open the following weekend.

Cone joined the contingent after receiving the invitation to play at the Sony Open over in America's island paradise – an event coincidentally won by Wagner in 2012.

"The fall tournaments are still PGA Tour tournaments, but a lot of the biggest players in the world aren't playing every week," Cone said. "They're not the biggest events, but coming up in the spring, I'm sure it'll be a little bit different. But I wouldn't say it's too much different than the Korn Ferry Tour talentwise. Everyone out there can play, but obviously, the top of the PGA Tour is filled with incredible talent."

Cone missed the cut at the Sony Open by a stroke despite shooting rounds of 70 and 69. Yet in a sense, the appearance at the Sony Open validated the time and effort that Cone spent on his golf career. He twice fell short of earning his PGA card at the PGA's Qualifying School after graduating from Virginia Tech. He then spent two years competing on PGA Tour Canada (2016-17) while waiting for an opportunity to compete on the Korn Ferry Tour.

In 2018, while playing on the Korn Ferry Tour under conditional status, he won at the Ellie Mae Classic held TPC Stonebrae in Hayward, California. But from 2019-21, he missed 39 cuts in 60 starts and registered just one top-10 finish.

"I wasn't playing horrible golf, but if you're not playing really good golf, it's tough even to make cuts on the Korn Ferry Tour," Cone said in an article on PGATOUR.com in December.

Cone has been working with John Scott Rattan, the director of instruction at Congressional Country Club in Bethesda, Maryland. This past May, that work paid off when he won the AdventHealth Championship held at Blue Hills Country Club in Kansas City for his second victory on the Korn Ferry Tour.

The confidence propelled him throughout the 2022 season. With his parents and girlfriend in attendance at the Korn Ferry Tour's final regular-season event, his season ended with a luxurious beer bath.

"I think Trevor can be as good as he wants to be," Rattan said. "It's up to Trevor. I'm saying that almost to challenge him. Trevor can be as good as he wants to be, and if that means he wants to play on Ryder Cup teams and have a 20-year career on the PGA Tour, Trevor can do that. But like anyone in the position that he's in, he's got to go out and earn it every day. You've got to pay your rent every week on the PGA Tour."

Not long after earning his card, Cone called Wagner, who also lives in Charlotte. Wagner, a three-time winner on the PGA Tour, serves as a mentor to Cone, and Cone gleaned some information on what to expect on the tour.

Cone also has spent the past several weeks working on his game, specifically his putting – an area where he wants to improve. But he shot three rounds in the 60s at The RSM Classic in St. Simons Island, Georgia in mid-November to conclude the fall portion of the PGA slate, so he has the game to compete with the best.

Now, the 29-year-old wants to show it consistently.

"My expectations are pretty high," Cone said. "I would like to win because I think I have the game to do it. It's just putting it all together."

"Obviously, the main goal is to just play well enough to keep my card as a rookie. I think that's a tough task for most guys in their first year, but the biggest goal is just having a good mindset and good attitude out there, just enjoying it. I think over the years after you turn pro, professional golf, it becomes more of a job. Not that it's a bad thing. It motivates you, but I think any golfer would tell you that whenever they're having the most fun and being carefree and laid back out there is when they're playing their best golf, so that's the biggest goal in my opinion."
