Theft does not deter annual tree planting volunteers

A group of volunteers celebrate Arbor Day after planting Redbud trees along Sundell Drive for the 17th year in a row.

Five 10-12-foot-tall Redbud trees, like the one pictured here, were stolen from along Sundell Drive before they could be planted. The police are investigating.

RADFORD – The theft of several trees disappointed volunteers who annually come together to plant trees along Sundell Drive in honor of Arbor Day, but they did not let the bad behavior dampen their spirits for long.

“Fifteen folks came out to plant 10 Redbuds along Sundell Drive for the 17th Annual Redbud planting,” said Pathways for Radford member Laurie Buchwald in a Facebook post. “Thievery had us planting only five, but we were an enthusiastic crew none the less. Thanks, Pathways for Radford, the City of Radford, and the leadership of Wilson Rankin.”

Pathways for Radford President Liz Altieri said the theft is a low blow, but it will not deter them from their work.

“All the volunteers who came out to plant the trees were disgusted and appalled,” she said Monday. “It seems particularly low to steal from a community improvement project. We are very proud of the Redbuds we have planted along Sundell over the last 16 years and how beautiful the road is in the spring.”

Altieri said the City of Radford public works department set the trees out late Thursday afternoon, April 27.

“They were set out early due to the forecast bad weather on Friday,” she said. “The trees have been put out early every year and we have never had a problem. These were impressive large trees with a value of approximately $75 apiece. Pathways for Radford made a significant contribution to the City of Radford toward the cost of the trees.”

Buchwald said the police department is investigating the theft and the response from the community has been very supportive.

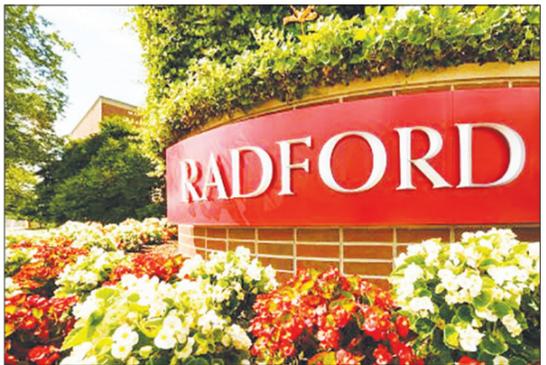

“We have been planting annually for 17 years and the results have beautified the city,” she said. “So many people comment about how much they love traveling on Sundell in the spring. Those who participated on Saturday were stunned and angry. It just seems so despicable. I shared the news on my FB page and asked folks to share and boy did they - 57 times! People are furious and disgusted. Some have even offered to donate money to replace the trees.”

Pathways for Radford is a community group of volunteers founded more than 20 years ago to “promote the development, maintenance, and enhancement of a network of bikeways/walkways” in the City of Radford. The group was integral to the creation of the bikeway/walkway systems in Bisset Park, along the New River, in Wildwood Park and along Sundell Drive.

Anyone with information about the tree theft can contact the non-emergency Radford Police Department line at 540-731-3624.

Tuition and fees increase at Radford University for 2023-24

Radford University tuition is set to increase three percent for 2023-24.

RADFORD – Tuition at Radford University will increase by three percent for the 2023-24 year.

The Radford University Board of Visitors discussed and voted on the tuition and fees for the 2023-2024 academic year at a special meeting April 28.

“The Board of Visitors’ primary goal is to maintain the highest standard of education for Radford University students while minimizing the financial burdens on students and addressing increased inflationary pressures,” according to a statement by the university.

The increased rate applies to both in-state and out-of-state students and includes undergraduate and graduate students at all locations, including Radford University Carilion in Roanoke.

With admissions and deposit deadlines for the fall approaching, the special meeting was called “to allow students and their families to make informed decisions about financial commitments for the upcoming year,” the announcement reads, adding the BOV could revisit the decision depending on the outcome of the state budget.

“These adjustments allow for Radford University to continue delivering high quality academic programs and to make future investments for student success,” said Rector Deb McMahon. “We made a decision that best minimized the impact on students while addressing inflationary realities.”

“We believe in our positioning as one of the most affordable institutions in the Commonwealth,” President Bret Danilowicz said. “As a result, there is sensitivity to the challenges that students and families face when the cost of education rises. Radford University remains committed to providing significant financial support for students to ensure that our prestigious degree remains accessible and affordable alongside a high-quality student experience.”

McMahon said Radford’s cost versus nationwide economic trends over the past six years show the increases are lower than average. Radford University’s total cost - tuition, room and board, and fees - has grown 13 percent for undergraduate Virginia residents since 2017-18,

Mark Crittenden applies the Caravaggio technique to his original work.

Young painters study an old master

RADFORD - He was a violent man and a brilliant artist, a hard drinking, brawling painter on the run from murder charges, whose techniques would influence the likes of Rubens and Rembrandt.

He is known as Caravaggio, and this spring students in Alexandra Leonetti’s Special Topics class at Radford University have been learning his methods and applying them in new ways.

Caravaggio’s works are some of the most recognized paintings in European art. Many people who have never heard his name are still familiar with his imagery. His art features Biblical and mythic subjects set in dark umber tones, with highly contrasted flesh and clothing. As one might imagine for a character like Caravaggio, beheadings were a favorite subject.

To understand the master’s techniques, Leonetti first had her students select one of Caravaggio’s paintings to copy. In this way, students absorbed the forms, style and techniques, learning to work with oils to draw out light and color on a shadow drenched canvas.

Next, she asked them to create their own compositions using the technique. Some students created a photographic reference for their ideas, while others worked from their imaginations. It’s a skill-based training that can complement the students’ work in conceptual and contemporary courses and give them something new they can add to their repertoire of skills that is normally only taught in specialized schools.

“They’ve learned a lot of things in this class,” Leonetti said. “We’ve learned a different way doing skin tones using red umber. We’ve used calcium carbonate. We’ve used cobalt drier; different materials that they may not have used before.”

Radford Fairlawn Daily Bread re-opens dining room

RADFORD – For the first time since COVID-19 shuttered public spaces, Radford-Fairlawn Daily Bread (RFDB) is once again serving meals in its dining room

In Radford. “We just opened our dining room today,” the organization announced on Monday, May 1. “We now offer both dine-in and takeout services here at Daily Bread, at 501 Second St., at the lower level. Come on in and enjoy our hospitality or continue to take meals to-go if you’re on the move.”

RFDB serves a hot, homemade meal Monday through Friday at lunchtime to anyone who needs one. The organization switched to serving takeout meals when COVID-19 restrictions came about. The re-opening of the dining room also means an increased need for volunteers.

“This means we are going to need double the number of volunteers we have now to help serve meals, wait tables, clean dishes, and help keep our dining room nice and tidy,” RFDB announced. “If you’ve ever been interested in volunteering with us, shoot us an email at director@radfordfairlawndailybread.org or call/text 540-838-0028. George Washington and Jefferson National Forest emphasize safety when hiking in bear country

It's important to practice safe food storage when in bear country, whether you are picnicking in a remote area near the Appalachian Trail or taking a long hike through the George Washington and Jefferson National Forest.

"We want everyone to stay safe and be bear aware in the great outdoors," said Joby Timm, Forest Supervisor. "Black bears have an exceptionally keen sense of smell. That's why hikers should pack all food and any personal items that have a smell, like toothpaste and soap, in a bear-proof container so bears and other animals can't detect the scents."

Bears can learn to associate people with food, and they are tenacious in their pursuit of something to eat. Good food storage habits greatly reduce the chance of aggressive interactions between bears and hikers during daytime activities and when sleeping in the forest. Leave No Trace partners with the USDA Forest Service to provide safety tips for outdoor recreation. Their video <https://youtu.be/H0YDtPW6ntU> shows how to pack a bear-resistant container, plus important safety tips for camping and cooking in bear country.

Bears are typically shy by nature and keep their distance. Hikers can avoid bear encounters by making noise, whistling or talking. These noises alert nearby bears, giving them a chance to move away and not feel threatened by humans who traverse their habitat.

While hiking, the best way to avoid a bear encounter is to be bear aware. Don't hang out near a bear's favorite food sources: berry patches, decaying logs swarming with insects and streams and rivers teeming with fish. Also stay alert. Don't wear headphones and approach blind corners on the trail with caution.

Because black bears inhabit the Appalachian Trail corridor (also called the A.T.) and can smell food from long distances, the Forest Service has a food storage policy for all hikers within 1,000 feet of the trail - a distance the equivalent of three football fields. It was developed in coordination with the Appalachian Trail Conservancy, the Chattahoochee-Oconee National Forest, the Cherokee National Forest, the National Forests in North Carolina, and the George Washington and Jefferson National Forests. The order applies to the southern section of the A.T. that traverses Georgia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia.

English professor's discovery sounds international art alarm

This isn't just any necklace.

Friends kept telling Sweta Baniya about the vast collection of Nepali artifacts on display at the Art Institute of Chicago. Baniya, an assistant professor of rhetoric, professional, and technical writing at Virginia Tech and a native of Nepal, wanted to see them for herself.

One item — a 400-year-old necklace made of gilt copper and stones — was of particular interest to her.

But what Baniya saw on June 12, 2021 and posted on her Twitter account sounded an international alarm and placed her smack dab in the middle of an investigation of looted art that still is making headlines.

Last month, ProPublica, an independent nonprofit newsroom, along with Crain's Business Journal, co-published an investigative account of the institute's items donated by the late Marilyn Alsdorf, a benefactor. The art is displayed in the institute's Alsdorf Collection.

The necklace, which is from the Taleju Temple in Kathmandu, Nepal, and believed to belong to Taleju Bhawani, a revered patron goddess, is one of the primary items of investigation.

It marks the start of Baniya's story, and one that has a unique connection with her scholarly work at Virginia Tech.

Baniya visited the institute in 2021 with her fiance, now her husband, Carlos Perez-Torres, a collegiate associate professor in the Academy of Integrated Sciences at Virginia Tech. The two spent the day in Chicago to celebrate Carlos' birthday.

When Baniya rounded a corner in the institute's Art of Asia section and saw the necklace in its glass case, her emotions took over.

"I was starting to cry and starting to pray, and I just felt like worshipping the goddess herself," said Baniya, who is Hindu. "It's not just a necklace, it's a part of our goddess who we worship. I felt like it shouldn't be here. It's sacred and it's very famous in Nepal."

The goddess is known as the chief protective deity of Nepal and its royal family.

In Nepal, the public is allowed to enter the Taleju Temple only once a year during Nawami, which is the 9th day of the Dashain Festival, a Hindu religious celebration. While living in Nepal, Baniya recalled her yearly visits there each October as an adult, where she waited in a long line to walk inside.

"It's a very special day," she said.

Baniya took photos and a video of the necklace in its institute exhibit case and posted them to Instagram and Twitter. By the next morning, Baniya's Twitter feed was blowing up, mostly with accusations that the necklace had been stolen from Nepal and her friends retweeting her photos and video.

Baniya said she did not initially think that the necklace was a stolen piece of art, but she was uncomfortable with how it was displayed at the museum.

"I was very overwhelmed with the emotions I had," she said. "I had a lot of questions and confusion, and the necklace overwhelmed me."

Journalists in the United States and in Nepal started contacting her as news of the necklace and other Nepali artifacts gained traction. Also, there has been a swelling response from the Nepali community and activists working on the ground clamoring for the necklace's return to Nepal.

Through her research, she learned that the necklace was stolen from Nepal more than 45 years ago and auctioned. But it's not the only Nepali religious art piece in the Alsdorf Collection that has been under scrutiny. According to the ProPublica and Crain's report, at least nine items have been investigated and returned to Nepal.

The necklace remains in Chicago. The institute's public affairs office did not respond to several requests for comment about the future of the necklace there.

In December 2021, Baniya visited the institute during the winter break, and this time, she stood in front of the necklace exhibit and held a sign demanding that the necklace be returned to Nepal. She also wrote a letter to the institute's Art of Asia collection director, asking for the return of the necklace to Nepal, where it can be displayed and worshiped appropriately.

Baniya said she did not receive a response from the institute, but she continues to advocate for the necklace's return on her personal blog and social media accounts.

"They owe an explanation to the Nepali people," said Baniya, who continues to receive inquiries from journalists around the world. "They are keeping something of our heritage, our religion, and our culture that doesn't belong to the museum. The necklace belongs to our goddess and should be in her temple."

At Virginia Tech, Baniya does not talk much about her discovery or the ongoing investigation unless her students ask about it. She said she keeps up with it via news outlets and conversations with family and friends.

The investigation and continued advocacy is a real-life model of some of the concepts that Baniya teaches in her classes at Virginia Tech.

For instance, in her rhetoric in society course for doctoral students, her focus is on advocacy and social justice.

"We teach critical thinking," Baniya said. "We teach how to ask questions. We teach uncomfortable questions to ask about justice and issues."

Baniya, who formerly was a journalist in Nepal, said she believes her work in the Department of English and in the humanities area is more important than ever.

"Humanities has a lot of branches, but the world is developing so fast and a lot of times, it's projected that English or humanities are not that important in the society," she said. "We are preparing students to be better citizens of this society," she said. "How do we think about advancing equity? How do we think about issues of climate change, disaster, and everything that we are living in the current world?"

James Dubinsky is founding director of the Department of English's professional writing program, and he helped to shape the first liberal arts doctoral program at Virginia Tech, including the course that Baniya teaches. The class has been foundational, because it teaches students how to use language to frame issues and move people to support the common good, he said.

"Sweta is dedicated to this kind of work, which is reflected in her focus on advocacy and social justice," Dubinsky said. "Her focus on and dedication to her home country has become an integral part of her courses, and her students benefit greatly from that kind of international frame."

Baniya has been part of other work at Virginia Tech to help the international community. Recently, she received an excellence in outreach and international initiatives award from the college. Currently, she is leading a project focused on refugees and immigrants who resettle. Together with Katy Powell, who is director of the Center for Refugee, Migrant, and Displacement Studies, she is working to create a mobile-based application and a website to guide refugees and immigrants through the U.S. citizenship process.

The project is funded by a 2022 digital justice seed grant from the American Council of Learned Societies.

"Our scholarship that we do has an impact and we as humanities or English professors can teach this to a lot of students," Baniya said.

Traditions Week offers something for all Radford undergraduates

RADFORD - Campus customs are a little like plants.

In order to truly endure and thrive, they have to get better as they age, have to take root and grow while also serving roughly the same function that prompted their existence in the first place.

Radford University's Traditions Week is a prime example.

When it first began five years ago in the spring of 2018, it wasn't a week at all, just a single day, a festival designed to recognize those middle children of the undergrads, the sophomores; they aren't brand new like the freshmen, and they're not quite the seasoned vets that juniors are, nor are they on the verge of graduation like the seniors.

Sophomores are in the middle, lamented Angela Arnold, the office and budget manager for Student Involvement, but she also pointed out that reaching the center of something is to arrive at its midpoint. That perspective helped launch "Halfway There," a celebration of second-year students, and formed the seed from which Traditions Week ultimately grew.

"We started 'Halfway There' for the sophomores," Arnold explained. "And then we added an additional event for each year. So, freshmen, sophomores, juniors, seniors, they each have their day now."

This year's Traditions Week kicked off April 3 with "First Year Field Day," which recognizes the accomplishments of the freshman class with a makeshift amusement park on the Muse Hall lawn. It featured a DJ, a climbing wall, inflatable jousting, cornholing competitions and approximately 55 pizzas which, cut eight ways, translates to nearly 450 slices of pie, of which the Class of 2027 made short work.

Adam Stapleton, a freshman cybersecurity major from Gate City, Virginia, turned out and quickly scored a door prize — an insulated tumbler with a brain-shaped stress ball inside.

"I just came out here because, first of all, it's right outside Muse Hall, and I'm in Muse," explained Stapleton. "I've been hearing about Traditions Week for a while now, and I've just been excited to get a break from studying."

One of the volunteers behind that event was Tanisha Singletary, resident director for Madison and Jefferson halls, who made up part of the First Year Field Day committee.

"The students all appeared to have a great time, which is always what it's about ... and just watching everyone interact was so amazing," Singletary said after the event.

"First Year Field Day gives students the opportunity to engage with their peers, get some free food and have fun," she added. "We wanted to ensure that there were activities available for everyone to do, and I believe that we did a great job of doing that."

April 4 saw the advent of the aforementioned "Halfway There." The second-year students gathered in front of McConnell Library and were issued challenge coins that represented the promises, wisdom and well-wishes of those that came before them. They took those tokens to The Fountain, where they let them fly into cool waters.

"The idea is that their lessons learned, their memories, their hopes for someone coming up behind them are passed into the coin, and then they toss it in," said Vice President for Student Affairs Susan Trageser, who kicked off the event with an address to the entire class.

From the Fountain, they then went to Bonnie Plaza for music and pizza and tables of supplies to decorate their new Radford University T-shirts, bearing the "Halfway There" logo on the back.

One of them got an additional surprise — Julia Langheim, a psychology major from Roanoke, Virginia, was tapped through a drawing to receive the annual Presidential Scholarship, a prize worth $4,000 toward next semester's tuition.

"I was honestly shocked," Langheim said afterward. "That was the first time I've won a raffle or a randomly selected prize, so I was delighted to hear my name called."

Junior Twilight followed on April 5, with about 230 juniors convening at the Heth Clock Plaza to sample more music, snacks and games, receive a customer keychain registered to them and write and display their wishes on small paper lanterns.

"4.0 GPA. Graduate with honors. Med student," read one student's inscribed goals.

As the sun set on the evening event, the third-year students hung their lanterns on strings of light that allowed them to be illuminated from within.

Those glows later merged with bright colored lights as the music rose and dancing broke out on the plaza.

Because Traditions Week falls across the first week of April, weather was a factor that had to be considered.

The April 6 forecast forced the Senior Block Party into Russell Hall, but it showed no loss of spirit as a result — 276 fourth-year students took part.

As they marked their last brush with Traditions Week, as well as their final month as undergraduate students, the Highlander seniors enjoyed crafts, making balloon hats and writing "Thank You" notes to campus individuals that impacted their time at Radford.

They picked up their legacy stoles and class gift philanthropy cords, as well as the ceremonial key that signifies their alumni status.

A popcorn machine provided fresh snacks, and President Bret Danilowicz, accompanied by his dog Bainne, stopped in to greet the departing class and to say farewell.

Seniors also found the supplies and spare time to customize, bedazzle, inscribe and generally decorate their mortar boards.

Some dressed them up with honeycombs and flowers, others with jewelry and stickers related to their studies. Many included personalized messages — one gave a nod to "Friends" with the words "The One Where I Graduate," while another announced, "I Almost Gave Up, But I Remembered Who Was Watching."

One more declared a motto that offered sage advice to all seniors: "Keep Moving Forward."

Counting students, guests and visitors, more than 450 people participated in the Senior Block Party, which was spearheaded by the student alumni organization, the RU Ambassadors, and numerous campus departments.

The following day, April 7, Radford University Carilion's Traditions Week event, the RUC Spring Fling, was also relocated indoors due to impending rain. One organizer estimated that at least 125 students attended the celebration held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at RUC's facility at Carilion Roanoke Community Hospital.

While there wasn't room for outsized recreations, students were able to paint rocks, make friendship bracelets and fill small terra cotta pots with soil and seeds to start their own plants.

"It's an opportunity for students to grow something, kind of like what they're doing now with their studies," said Jessica Twiest, associate director for Student Involvement and the Center for Opportunity and Social Mobility.

Twiest helped the fledgling healthcare professionals plant the seeds they selected, either flowers, like marigolds and forget-me-nots, or such vegetables as peas, cucumbers and squash.

"With this one, I could go to the grocery store less," said Salem, Virginia, nursing junior Nathan Watt as he pondered the vegetable seeds before casting an eye toward the floral options. "But these will make my room smell nicer."

Ultimately, he chose to go with a sunflower.

"Exams are around the corner, and this is a nice break," said Kailee Keen, a junior and a respiratory therapy major from Richlands, Virginia, who also selected a sunflower.

A Spring Fling poster board dedicated to students' words of wisdom also shared insights: "Work with your professor. They want you to succeed!" "Do the things that scare you!" and "Go to class; you're paying for it!"

Traditions Week 2023 drew to a close with a performance at the Dedmon Center by Chicago-based hip-hop artist G Herbo — whose recent videos include "Him" and "It's Something In Me" — with Aux Cord Wars as the opening act. Just over 1,200 students, staff and faculty attended the show, and a charter bus was available to ferry RUC students from Roanoke to the Radford venue and back.

"It was a really phenomenal experience, and we're so proud to host this special opportunity for our students," Associate Vice President for Student Life Tricia Smith said of this year's chain of events. "This place creates and nurtures a special connection for students, and Traditions Week has become a highly anticipated and beloved campus series."

“less than the average rate of the state’s four-year public institutions,” including “three years of flat tuition fees, and a fourth where rebates were made available to in-state undergraduates,” and the national Consumer Price Index (CPI) “showed a 19 percent rate of change over the same period.”

“This was neither a quick or easy decision,” said McMahon. “For the fiscal health of the university, and to continue delivering a high quality of service to our students, this move was necessary.”

The BOV also voted to increase fees, including room and board fees that “provide more inclusive services to limit additional out-of-pocket costs students have incurred in the past and meet their demand.”

Radford University remains one of the most affordable universities in Virginia, with the third-lowest total cost of education when tuition, fees, and room and board were combined among the state’s 15 public four-year institutions in 2022-23.

In 2021-22, more than 60 percent of full-time undergraduates at Radford University received financial assistance.

“With the increase in need-based financial aid in the state budget, Radford University will continue its commitment to maintaining student affordability,” according to the university statement.

in this method goes back to her own training while studying in Italy. In addition to the instruction and practice, she was also able to see original Caravaggio works in Rome, which can be wall-sized works of art. While the students in the class cannot travel to Rome, they do have the benefit of being able study a range of Caravaggio’s works digitally. Since most of his surviving paintings are narrative, they tend to depict a moment of drama in a larger story.

“I wanted to be as dramatic as possible so I could challenge myself with all the things I have learned in this class,” said Mark Crittenden, who has used this class to develop new techniques for lighting, skin, and fabric.

“You really want to take your time with some things,” Crittenden said as he worked on an original composition blending surrealist and mythic elements through the Caravaggio style.

“Stuff like fabric, you can probably do in one session, but something like skin with all the different colors underneath, you probably want to do a few passes.”

has been painting from that.

“I’m focusing on the face first because that is the most important detail,” Pinnix said. “Caravaggio worked fast, so I am assuming he’d work on the most important parts first.”

According to Leonetti, Caravaggio did indeed work quickly, perhaps as a reflection of his life on the run. She says he may have created as many as 200 paintings before he mysteriously died at just 38 years old.

Leonetti says she hopes her students have a better sense of both technique and narrative in their future work.

“That’s what I want them to take out of this,” Leonetti said. “There can be more to your work.”

“With a few extra thumbnails, a little more thought beforehand, and you can have a very strong finished piece.”

Virginia Cooperative Extension specialist creates podcast to help reduce burnout at work

BLACKSBURG - To aid those in academia and all those who work with others, a Virginia Cooperative Extension specialist and Virginia Tech faculty member created a podcast to help reduce burnout and focus on flourishing in the workplace.

Using the yoga kernels for public health — breathwork, meditation, and movement — Samantha Harden, an associate professor in the Department of Human Nutrition, Foods, and Exercise in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences, focuses on strategies that help people balance work priorities, the responsibilities of life, and relaxation in her podcast, “Higher Vibrations in Higher Education.”

“By listening to this podcast, people will learn these principles and be able to practice them and change the way they conduct research and the way they show up in the classroom so that we promote health for all,” said Harden, an Extension specialist and affiliated faculty of the Fralin Life Sciences Institute and the Center for Health Behaviors Research. “I want to build a culture of health within academia and the workforce.”

Harden’s desire to help others flourish stemmed from her own experiences.

“I had a breakdown that led me to this breakthrough,” she said. “Stressors exist in the workplace because our infrastructure needs improvement. We can work on ourselves and our interactions with our direct team. For me, that means I have to move my body every day, learn to let go of outcomes, and take time away from email. But what works for us as individuals is different for everyone.”

The podcast format came to fruition because of the variance in how people digest information, particularly related to what yoga is and could be.

“I want to change the narrative of how people see physical activity,” Harden said. “I’ve found that a lot of times it’s the experience. Not everyone is attracted to walking into a yoga studio or a gym and I wanted to find a way where they can still learn these yoga principles. You don’t have to wear yoga pants to do yoga. Practices can be done anywhere by anybody.”

On the podcast, Harden guides listeners through visualizations and meditations. There are also long-form interviews with a variety of guests within and outside of academia and Extension specifically.

“Listeners should join us if they are struggling or flourishing within academia so that they could share the things that they’ve learned,” Harden said. “For those who might feel isolated, they aren’t alone in their feelings. We want the podcast to give a sense of belonging and community. And, almost equally important, sharing free and evidence-based strategies for flourishing.”

The podcast can be found at the major podcast hubs including Spotify, Apple, Google Podcasts, and Amazon Music, or by searching for “Higher Vibrations in Higher Education.”

Hahn Horticulture Garden unveils long-range plan for expansion

BLACKSBURG - Virginia Tech's Hahn Horticulture Garden has completed a new $4 million planning study outlining potential growth and expansion for the six-acre public teaching and display garden, a popular destination on the Blacksburg campus.

Elements proposed in the study, driven by gifts, would significantly upgrade the Hahn Horticulture Garden's amenities for holding events and vastly expand its array of gardens and sustainability features. Highlights proposed in the study include a spacious open-air marquee structure, a Japanese-style Zen garden, a glass house, a formal garden, water-conserving rain gardens, and multiple spaces for teaching, learning, and relaxing.

Hahn Horticulture Garden Director Scott Douglas said the goal of the planning study is to recommend ways to elevate the garden as a regional attraction and to capitalize on its allure to host more revenue-producing events, such as weddings, conferences, and reunions.

"Items identified in the study help us better utilize our six-acre footprint," Douglas said. "It allows people to stay longer, see more things, and be exposed to different styles of gardens. I'm hoping this will make us more of a destination."

Open 365 days a year from dawn until dusk, the Hahn Horticulture Garden is western Virginia's largest public garden and serves students and the community as a hands-on learning resource for gardening, landscaping, and environmental awareness. It operates entirely on donations and public generosity.

"People assume that because we are on Virginia Tech's Blacksburg campus, we are in the university's budget," Douglas said. "We are an independent operator, so we are heavily dependent on people renting this place, making donations, and attending the Garden Gala in June. We are looking for donors to help us make the long-range plan a reality."

Douglas said event rentals cover more than 50 percent of the garden's operating costs. To increase that potential, the garden is proceeding with design and construction of a 2,800-square-foot open-air marquee structure to be built on the lawn next to the Peggy Lee Hahn Garden Pavilion. The wood framed structure, designed by Hill Studio in Roanoke, will have a concrete floor, wood columns with Hokie Stone bases, and a dramatic green metal roof that matches the neighboring pavilion. It will meet the demand for a large open-air covered event space while eliminating the need for tent rentals that damage the lawn.

The marquee is the first project slated for completion. Douglas said his hope is to break ground as early as November so it can be completed for the 2024 wedding season and Hahn Horticulture Garden's 40th anniversary.

To complement the marquee structure, the study proposes a caterer hut with a roof and concrete floor that would be placed between the new building and the parking area, enabling a convenient, sheltered workspace for event caterers. When not in use, the hut would offer a shaded, dry location for students and visitors.

A new "glass house" is also proposed to display a variety of tropical plants and orchids and house temperature-sensitive plants over the winter and seed-starting each spring. The glass house would function as a unique space for smaller rental events.

The study additionally proposes the introduction of a formal garden to feature clipped boxwood hedges and a variety of flowering plants to expose students and the public to a highly managed and controlled landscape style that is distinctly different from other spaces in the Hahn Garden.

Also under consideration is a Japanese-style Zen garden with an open-air tea house surrounded by a raked stone garden and bordered by a small pond. The garden would introduce an international style and provide a peaceful space for relaxation and meditation.

Other improvements proposed in the planning study include:

A prominent Hokie Stone entry gate at the garden's main entrance on Washington Street.

Directional signs to the Hahn Horticulture Garden from Route 460 and additional directional campus signage to guide visitors to the garden.

Rain gardens to capture building runoff, highlight water conservation, and demonstrate a bog area.

A plant collection database presented on a searchable map interface so students and visitors can locate and learn about the wide variety of plants in the garden.

Landscape lighting to increase the overall safety of the garden for night events.

A home gardening demonstration area featuring a collection of raised garden beds and a composting area.

A shade garden with pathways, rhododendrons, a seating area, and a sculpture.

A sidewalk along Garden Lane to provide a safe walkway from the greenhouse parking spaces to the pavilion.

New accessible pedestrian pathways throughout the property.

The growth plans create more opportunities for students in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences' School of Plant and Environmental Sciences and Agricultural Technology program, who intern, work, volunteer, and take classes in the gardens throughout the year. Douglas said students will have a role in the installation and maintenance of many of the projects outlined in the study, from planting and pruning to building ponds and walkways.

"We've been so grateful to our community and volunteers who have supported the garden over the last 40 years," Douglas said. "We look forward to involving them in the next chapter of growth to make the Hahn Garden the premier venue to visit, learn, relax, gather, and celebrate."

Legal Notice

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC OF AN APPLICATION BY APPALACHIAN POWER COMPANY FOR A 2023 TRIENNIAL REVIEW OF ITS BASE RATES, TERMS AND CONDITIONS PURSUANT TO § 56-585.1 OF THE CODE OF VIRGINIA CASE NO. PUR-2023-00002

•Appalachian Power Company ("APCo") has filed its 2023 triennial review of its base rates, terms and conditions pursuant to § 56-585.1 of the Code of Virginia.

•Among other things, APCo requests a revenue increase in the amount of approximately $212.6 million. The overall impact of the Company's proposals would increase the monthly bill of a residential customer using 1,000 kilowatt hours of electricity per month by approximately $25.03, or 15.9%. For low-income customers qualifying for the proposed basic service charge waiver, the Company's proposals would increase the monthly bill of a residential customer using 1,000 kilowatt hours of electricity per month by approximately $16.53 or 10.5%.

•A Hearing Examiner appointed by the State Corporation Commission will hold a telephonic hearing in this case on August 23, 2023, at 10 a.m., for the receipt of public witness testimony.

•An evidentiary hearing will be held on August 24, 2023, at 9:30 a.m., in the Commission's second floor courtroom located in the Tyler Building, 1300 East Main Street, Richmond, Virginia 23219.

•Further information about this case is available on the SCC website at: scc.virginia.gov/Case-Information.

On March 31, 2023, Appalachian Power Company ("APCo" or "Company") filed an application ("Application") with the State Corporation Commission ("Commission"), pursuant to § 56-585.1 A 3 of the Code of Virginia ("Code") and the Commission's Rules Governing Utility Rate Applications and Annual Informational Filings ("Rate Case Rules"), for a triennial review of the Company's rates, terms and conditions for the provision of generation, distribution and transmission services.

The Application states that this proceeding entails, among other things, determinations regarding: (i) APCo's cost of service during the three successive 12-month periods ending December 31, 2022 ("Earnings Test Period"); (ii) whether prospective changes to APCo's rates for generation and distribution services are necessary; and (iii) the Company's prospective fair rate of return on common equity ("ROE").

The Application states that, pursuant to Code § 56-585.1 A 8, the Company's earned ROE during the Earnings Test Period is compared to a 140 basis-point band of earnings that ranges from 70 basis points above a previously authorized ROE to 70 basis points below that ROE ("ROE band"). The Application further notes that Code § 56-585.1 A 8 states that if earnings fall below the ROE band during the Earnings Test Period, the Commission shall order increases to APCo's rates necessary to provide the opportunity to fully recover the costs of providing the Company's services and to earn not less than such fair combined rate of return, using the most recently ended 12-month test period as the basis for determining the amount of the rate increase necessary. Finally, the Application states that Code § 56-585.1 A 2 g provides that if APCo's combined earned return is below its authorized return, "whether or not such combined return is within 70 basis points of the return as so determined," the Company may request that the Commission approve "an increase in rates in accordance with the provisions of subdivision 8 a as if it had earned more than 70 basis points below a fair combined rate of return, and such proceeding shall otherwise be conducted in accordance with the provisions of this section."

APCo states that the ROE band for the analysis of the Earnings Test Period is based on an ROE of 9.20%, which is the return authorized by the Commission in APCo's 2020 Triennial Review. APCo states that the Company earned a return of 5.39% on its common equity during the Earnings Test Period, which is the equivalent of over $124 million in pre-tax earnings below 8.5%, the bottom of APCo's authorized ROE band for the Earnings Test Period.

Based on this analysis, APCo requests approval to implement retail base generation and distribution rates that are designed to implement an overall increase in the Company's revenues of approximately $212.6 million over revenues from current base rates. APCo states that this is a 14.3% increase to overall revenues. The requested increase includes a $5.4 million increase to the generation function and a $207.2 million increase to the distribution function.

The requested revenue increase reflects, among other things, APCo's requested authorization of a prospective ROE of 10.6%. APCo also requests that the Commission approve depreciation rates that will result in an annual increase in depreciation expenses. APCo also requests to increase distribution O&M expenses by $47.8 million to allow it to improve its vegetation management program. APCo states that its proposal for an increased level of vegetation management funds should improve the reliability of targeted circuits and reflects higher costs of materials and labor. APCo also proposes an adjustment to increase federal tax expense in the cost of service to reflect the Company's expected increased tax obligations under the federal Corporate Alternative Minimum Tax. Additionally, APCo requests authority to establish a regulatory liability for the credit that will offset future tax obligations and deferral authority to ensure the Company only collects its actual tax obligations from customers.

With this Application, the Company proposes to eliminate the basic service charge for qualifying low-income customers, which for these purposes the Company defines as customers who receive assistance from one (or more) state agency. At the same time, the Company proposes an increase of $0.54 to the basic service charge from $7.96 to $8.50 for all other residential customers, which APCo states is designed to be revenue-neutral for the Company when combined with the estimated level of customers who will be eligible for the basic service charge waiver.

APCo states that even if the Commission finds that it should not increase the Company's rates, the Company nevertheless requests that the Commission approve revised rates to reflect the changes in the underlying costs since 2010. APCo states that its proposed rate design reflects updates to both the functional and class allocations to reflect the current costs of serving the Company's customer classes. Additionally, APCo proposes to incorporate Schedule MGS (Medium General Service) customers into Schedule GS (General Service) and eliminate Schedule MGS from the Company's standard service tariff.

The foregoing is not an exhaustive list of all the proposals contained in the Company's Application. Interested persons are encouraged to review APCo's Application and supporting documents in full for details about these and other proposals.

TAKE NOTICE that the Commission may apportion revenues among customer classes and/or design rates in a manner differing from that shown in the Application and supporting documents and thus may adopt rates that differ from those appearing in the Company's Application and supporting documents.

RADFORD SPORTS

Perkins declared ineligible by NCAA

Marty Gordon
NRVsports@ourvalley.org

RADFORD - A former standout pitcher from Christiansburg was slated to be one of the aces of this year's Radford University staff when he received a halt to his playing career thanks to the NCAA.

Alex Perkins' collegiate career is done. He had hoped to pitch this season for the Highlanders.

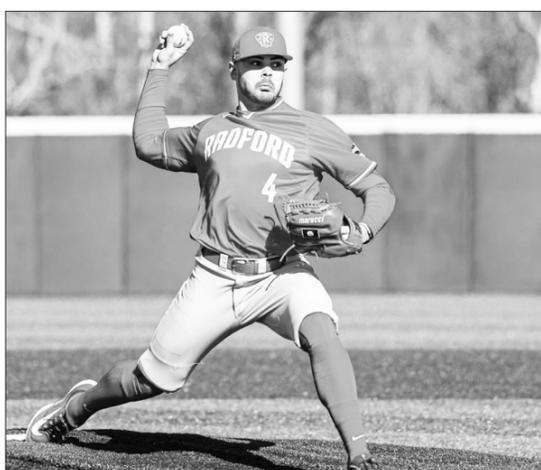

The RU compliance office released a statement stating Perkins was past his five-year clock of eligibility.

He did receive a medical hardship waiver last season (2021-22), but the NCAA still denied his extension of eligibility waiver, therefore making him ineligible to play a sixth year.

Last season, Perkins earned a medical redshirt, appearing in two games with a short season earned run average of 1.35, while posting a 0.90 WHIP.

Initially, transferred to RU in 2020 and sat out a season to NCAA transfer regulations after coming over from Bluefield College. As a junior in 2021, he finished with a 2-1 record, appearing in 17 games, totaling 37 strike outs on the season with a 2.86 ERA.

He spent two seasons at Bluefield College (2017-19), posting a record of 13-13 with a 4.30 ERA across those seasons as a starting pitcher, earning NCCAA All-Tournament honors with the Rams in 2019 after helping lead the team to the NCCAA World Series. He recorded a complete game 15-strikeout performance against Trinity Christian in the NCCAA World Series and also had a complete game 15-strikeout game against Oakland City College in the NCCAA Regional Tournament.

Perkins was a two-way player at Christiansburg, helping lead the Blue Demons to three postseason appearances. He earned first team all-conference honors as a pitcher, third baseman and utility player and earned all-region honorable mention honors.

Perkins also threw a no-hitter against Cave Spring his senior year.

Racing season continues at Motor Mile Speedway

Mike Looney won both of Saturday's Late Model twin races at Motor Mile Speedway near Radford. Looney leads the Late Model standings at the track by 10 points over Kyle Dudley and 16 over Derrick Lancaster.

Jimmy Mullins won the Super Street competition on Saturday night.

Kyle Dudley won the Sportsman series race.

Kevin Cantern wins mod-4 race.

For the first time since the season-opening night in March, engines roared around Motor Mile Speedway for the Southern Ground Pounders night this past Saturday.

The .416-mile track welcomed racers from six different divisions and hosted seven different races for the nearly 1,000 fans in attendance. On a beautiful Saturday evening that luckily escaped the wrath of Mother Nature, track officials decided to move the green flag up to 6 p.m. in hopes to ensure a full night of racing.

The action started when the Blue Ridge Church Pure-4 Series took to the track for 25 laps. Kirby Shipman started in fifth place and dominated the race, leading over 20 laps and earning the victory from the back half of the field. Shipman pulled his white number seven machine into Victory Lane for the second time this season, but ultimately earned his first win of the year after failing post-race inspection at the Ice Out Opener a few weeks back. A mid-race push from William Hale put a little pressure on Shipman, but Hale ultimately brought his car home in position number three. Javon Parker finished third, earning his second-straight podium finish. The next race that hit the asphalt was the first 50-lap twin for the Price's Body Shop Late Model Stock Car Series.

Following a sweep of the two races back in March, Mike Looney proved once again why he's a force to be reckoned with in the New River Valley. Looney, who started at the tail end of the field, quickly fought his way through the pack and found himself in second behind Kyle Dudley. Looney and Dudley continued to battle for nearly 15 laps before contact between the two gave Looney the advantage. Some noticeable damage on Dudley's car affected his ability to get back to Looney but they both manage to secure the top two spots for the third race running. Polesitter Karl Budsevski led the first few laps of the race and managed to bring his car across the line third.

The special race of the night belonged to the Southern Ground Pounders Vintage Racing Club Series. With two different classes of cars on the track, the sportsman class and the modified class, it provided the fans with some truly exciting racing. Jimmy Mullins got behind the wheel of his hot pink 1974 Gremlin and flew to the front, leading the majority of the race and earning the win in the modified class. Bobby Griffin, in a beautifully painted racecar dedicated to his father, started on the pole and led the sportsman field for the entirety of the race and even raced alongside Mullins for a little bit.

The Total Car Care Mod-4 Series then took to the track for their race of the 2023 season. A quick, 25-lap race went the way of Abingdon, Virginia's Kevin Canter. He started to the outside of polesitter Doodle Lang and was able to get to the top spot early and never look back. Lang maintained his spot in second while Brittany Cockram earned the final podium spot.

Dudley returned to the track to headline a strong field of Collision Plus Sportsman Series competitors. There were a handful of drivers that pulled double duty on Saturday night, and Dudley's dominance in his 40-lap event gave him the victory. He started in the top spot and led every lap of the race; the first three starters actually all finished in the same three top spots.

Despite many cautions and a rather lengthy red flag, Dudley was able to thrive on each and every restart to fend off Jacob Porter. James Sweeney finished in third, crossing the line just a few car lengths behind the top two.

In the penultimate race of the night, the DCT Towing Super Street Series took to the short track for 30 laps. In a list of competitors that included last month's winner Mullins as well as the veteran Looney, it was some of the young guns that proved to be some of the stoutest competition. Mullins ended up winning the event for the second race in a row, but it was Tristan Barnes that continued to impress at such a young age. Barnes earned his second consecutive P2 finish. Daniel Eakin rounded the podium in the third spot.

The final event of the evening was 50 more laps for the late models and, again, it was Looney that dominated the race. He worked his way through the field and found himself alongside Dudley again, but this time he was in the lead. After Dudley tried to dive to the inside, the defending track champion got loose and brought out the caution. That was enough for Looney to pull away on the ensuing restart and make it a perfect 4-for-4 start to the year.

Christiansburg, Va. native Derrick Lancaster finished with a season-best second place finish, his third podium finish in four races. Dudley managed to battle back after his spin and came across the line third, capping off his 140-lap night.

Racing returns to Motor Mile Speedway on Saturday, May 20 for the Super Cup Series Night presented by Shively Electric. There will be seven races across five divisions, and the green flag will drop at 7 p.m.

Points standings (as of 4-30-23):
Late Model Division: 1) Mike Looney 200 points, 2) Kyle Dudley 190, 3) Derrick Lancaster 184, 4) Cory Dunn, 5) Karl Budsevski, 6) Ezekiel Shell, 7) Trenton Kilgore, 8) Chase Dixon, 9) Blayne Harrison.

Sportsman: 1) James Sweeney 136 points, 2) Jacob Porter, 132, 3) Charles Smith 128, 4) Kyle Barnes, 5) Jonathan Hall, 6) Drew Bond, 7) Ryan Collins, 8) Richard Caldwell, 9) Daryn Cockram.

Super Street: 1) James Mullins 100 points, 2) Tristen Barnes 96, 3) Taylor Ransom 84, 4) Ray Sowers 83, 5) Daniel Eakin 80, 6) Joseph White, 7) Matthew Gusler, 8) Dennis Turman and Jerry Hollander.

Pure 4: 1) Javon Parker 94 points, 2) Christeena Crosler 86, 3) Anthony Sheppard 84, 4) Adam Crocker, 5) Kirby Shipman, 6) Caleb Sewell, 7) William Hale.

MOD-4: 1) Kevin Canter 50 points, 2) Doodle Lang 48, 3) Brittany Cockram 46, 4) Rocky Yates 44, 5) Tony Sarver Jr., 6) Jeff Martin, 7) Daniel Hutson.

University hosts annual Beyond VT event

Virginia Tech Athletics and the Lombardi Student-Athlete Development Office held its annual Beyond VT event on Monday, April 17 inside Lane Stadium, allowing 2023 graduates an opportunity to celebrate, reflect and network with former student-athletes and professionals as they begin to prepare for life after Virginia Tech and after athletics.

Understanding that Hokie student-athletes have multiple options to choose from after graduation, the event allowed student-athletes to select one of four paths: employment, grad school, going pro or unsure.

"We want to see our student-athletes to be successful once they graduate from Virginia Tech," Senior Director for Student-Athlete Career Development within the Lombardi Student-Athlete Development Center Sarah Lage said following the event. "We want to see them be more than just a student, be more than just an athlete. We want to see them develop personally and professionally."

"I think this is just one event to help them with that."

Tech welcomed back the likes of 12 former student-athletes to both help make up a well-rounded panel and divide up the four paths, with former women's track and field standout Sarah Edwards serving as the keynote speaker to lead-off the evening event.

Centering her focus on both her personal experiences and her struggles after college, the well-accomplished distance runner during her time with the Hokies emphasized continuing to prepare for life after athletics, and the need to find a new sense of accomplishment after that competitive chapter comes to a close.

"It meant a lot to be able to try and help the current student-athletes start to make this transition into their next phase of life and give them some guidance that I wish I had been able to have," Edwards said. "It's really cool that Virginia Tech puts on this event for athletes and helps them prepare for that."

"I'm glad I was able to share my experience and hopefully be able to help people have a better transition than I did."

Citing her daily struggles about the lack of competition of being away from a team in the immediate aftermath in the post-graduate era, Edwards talked about having to deal with the daily woes of finding herself away from the track, and hammered home a couple of major takeaways to help surround that constant confusion.

"It's ok to not be ok," Edwards said. "I really did feel invincible as a student-athlete with successes, with the highs and lows you go through. It's just like 'I can do anything.'

"It's [tough] when sport is taken away. [My] sport was sacred to me. Sport is sacred to a lot of people. So it really is ok to not be ok, and to realize that, yeah, you're not invincible."

With nearly 40 student-athletes in attendance to educate themselves at yet another highly serviceable event, the buy-in was reciprocated from the side consisting of the current student-athletes to suit up in the orange and maroon.

There's certainly that sense of appreciation, too, from those who will soon sit in the opposite shoes.

"It's really important for us to have a smooth transition for the next stages of our lives," men's tennis standout Frank Thompson said. "For them to put on an event like this with so many Hokie alumni, former student-athletes who have come to share their stories. ... It's just beyond caring about us as athletes in our time here."

"It means a lot from the department to be committed to us beyond our time at Virginia Tech."

"[This experience] is invaluable," football's Matt Johnson said. "You can't really put a price on it. Having people come in and talk to you about their experience and pass that knowledge on ... I'm just very appreciative that they've done this for us."

RU Athletics celebrate annual RUBY awards

The Radford University athletics department came together to celebrate the accomplishments of its student-athletes at the annual RUBY's awards banquet on Monday night.

In the Student-Athlete Advisory Committee's 11th year organizing the event, the evening inside the Dedmon Center was all about honoring programs and individuals who have made contributions to the Highlanders' great success during the 2022-23 campaign in the classroom, in competition and in the community.

Strength & Conditioning Award - Amy Swain, Women's Soccer and Alex Perkins, Baseball

Amy Swain is a true leader in the weight room and on the field by setting the example of the right way to do things. Her athletic accomplishments are a direct reflection of her dedication to strength training and conditioning. She is able to power clean more than her bodyweight, deadlift and squat almost two times her bodyweight, all while still being the fittest female athlete out on the soccer field.

Alex Perkins is a leader in the weight room and on the field. We look at him as an extension of our strength staff in the weight room, as he is able to effectively coach and motivate his teammates to push themselves past levels they never knew they could. He holds the school record for deadlift at 615lbs and was also able to back squat 475lbs. He is the perfect example of how we want our student-athletes to invest in strength & conditioning and its ability to enhance performance.

Newcomer Of The Year - Ashlyn Traylor, Women's Basketball and DaQuan Smith, Men's Basketball

Traylor became just the fourth player in program history this year to earn the Big South Freshman of the Year award after dominating opponents on the court. Her 405 points, 100 assists and 65 steals were top-five totals in the Big South and led the team. Her seven Big South Freshman of the Week awards are a program record and second-most ever in the Big South.

Smith was the very first player to commit to Radford in last summer's transfer class and his belief in the program paid off. The dynamic guard played in all 36 games this season, averaging 13.6 points, 3.3 rebounds, 1.7 assists and 1.0 steals per game to lead the Highlanders to a 21-15 record that included two wins in the College Basketball Invitational.

Smith earned tons of awards as a result, being named Second Team All-Big South, Second Team All-State and Second Team All-NABC District 3.

Scholar Athlete Of The Year - Aameek Batth, Women's Tennis and Nicholas Taliaferro, Men's Golf

Aameek has had an impressive academic and athletic career here at Radford carrying a perfect 4.0 GPA throughout her career. Aameek will graduate this fall with a bachelor's degree in Media Studies.

A scholar off the course and a fantastic player on it, this year's male scholar-athlete of the year Nick Taliaferro carries a 3.91 GPA as a double major in Accounting and Finance. Nick was named a GCAA All-America Scholar and also tabbed to the 2020 and 2023 Big South All-Academic Team.

Senior Leadership Award - Margaret Gleason, Women's Lacrosse/Natalie Welsh, Women's Golf and William Flanagan, Baseball

In the words of Coach Hurley: "Margaret is known for her transparency, goofy, hardworking and motivated demeanor. You may know her as Margaret Gleason, but she is our nudge, a one-of-a-kind student-athlete that we're proud to call our own. She is 100% present and committed to the task at hand, whether she's scoring goals for our lacrosse program or saving lives while working towards completing her nursing degree. She is always giving her best while keeping others accountable, raising the bar and cracking a joke. She can grab the attention of an entire room but can also become someone that you can confide in. As a two-year captain, she has played a significant role in helping propel this program forward by never comprising her principles and integrity. Congratulations on this amazing award of recognition, Nudge!"

In the words of Coach Guerra: "Flanny has played a vital role in the shift in culture for our program. He leads by example in every facet of his life both on and off the field. Even though he has been sidelined with a season-ending injury, his leadership shines bright on a daily basis. Flanny has such a bright future in our baseball program and those skills will allow him to flourish when he graduates from Radford! We are so lucky to have Flanny be the perfection representation for RADFORD Baseball and the RWay culture we are creating!"

Highlanders Award Women's Lacrosse

Team support is vital to the success of any athletics program. Radford Student-Athletes consistently support each other's programs by displaying spirit during competition and this award recognizes a team who has exhibited what being a Highlander is all about, by showing up and cheering on each of our programs.

The Ruby Cup - Women's Soccer

The Ruby Club recognizes a team that achieved over a 3.0 GPA, displays team spirit at competitions, and is active in the community throughout the year.

Not only is this team high achieving on the field of play, but also consistently shows support to other programs by displaying spirit during competition and are very giving of their time and service to the community.

Jennifer Norton Courage Award - Tanner Barrs, Baseball

The Courage award is given to an individual who has possessed strength and courage in the face of adversity and the willingness to display positivity following a hardship.

Athlete Of The Year - Helena Willson, Women's Soccer and Bryce Corbett, Men's Golf

Willson was a staple in the Highlanders' dominant season, starting in all 20 games setting career-highs for goals, assists, points and game-winning goals. After netting the game-winner in the Big South Championship, Willson was named the Tournament MVP. Radford shutout opponents eight times when she was on the back line for a career-high 1,778 minutes.

A standout on the course all season, Bryce led the Big South in stroke average and then accomplished what no Highlander has ever done at the conference championships. Shooting a 4-under par, he topped the field to win the first individual title in program history while leading Radford to the program's first-ever first-place finish in stroke play. Bryce was then voted Big South Golfer of the Year and earned First Team All-Conference honors for the second straight year. He'll have yet another opportunity to go out and dominate this season thanks to an automatic bid to NCAA Regionals.
