Radford alum named new Christiansburg police chief

Chris Ramsey

CHRISTIANSBURG – Major Chris Ramsey, a veteran of more than 20 years with the Christiansburg Police Department (CPD), has been named Chief of the agency, effective Sept. 1, 2023.

The Town Council decision to promote Ramsey was announced Tuesday night at the Christiansburg Town Council meeting.

“We welcomed several applications with a variety of backgrounds and experiences,” said Christiansburg Mayor Mike Barber. “Through the interview process, we found that the most qualified, educated, and experienced candidate was already within our organization.”

Ramsey is a graduate of the 261st session of the FBI National Academy. He earned a Bachelor of Science in Psychology from Virginia Tech, followed by a Master of Science in Criminal Justice through Radford University.

Since 2017, Major Ramsey has served as the Assistant Chief of Police for the Christiansburg Police Department, after holding the position of Operations Division Captain from 2009-2017. Ramsey climbed the ranks throughout his career, first beginning as a clerk, Deputy Sheriff, Patrol Officer, Patrol Sergeant, Patrol Lieutenant, and Professional Standards Lieutenant. He has completed more than 24 career development programs including Crisis Negotiations, Managing Police Discipline, and numerous tactical and SWAT command trainings. He has been recognized as Officer of the Year, received a Police Star, Combat Ribbon, and multiple Meritorious Service recognitions, amongst others.

During his time at the CPD, Major Ramsey has been crucial in helping serve the community through various response efforts. He is credited with developing the agency’s first Emergency Response Team (SWAT) and served as First Commanding Officer; served as one of the first responding officers to the 2011 Interstate-81 shooting, resulting in capture and conviction of a murder suspect; and served in the incident command post for various critical events in the region, including the William Morva manhunt and April 16th shootings at Virginia Tech.

“It has been a privilege to have served my community alongside the men and women of the Christiansburg Police Department for the last three decades and it is the honor of a lifetime to have been chosen to lead them as Chief,” said Ramsey. “I am fortunate to be assuming command of an excellent Department staffed by the finest officers.

It is our commitment to the citizens that we will continue to work in partnership with our community to not only provide the best possible

NRCC announces three percent tuition increase

A new EMT certification offered this fall

New River Community College (NRCC) tuition will increase for the first time in five years.

The three percent increase of $4.61 per credit hour will go into effect for the 2023-2024 academic year.

Recognizing the impact of mandatory cost increases, which include statewide adjustments for compensation and benefits, the State Board for Community Colleges recently voted unanimously to increase tuition at all 23 Virginia Community College System institutions. The new rate is $158.61 per credit hour, or $2,379.15 for a 15 credit-hour semester.

At about one-third of the comparable costs of tuition of Virginia’s public four-year universities, NRCC continues to be an affordable option for those in the college’s service region. With programs like Access to Community College Education (ACCE), G3 tuition assistance, and scholarships through the NRCC Educational Foundation, NRCC remains committed to assisting students reach their educational goals.

In other New River Community College news, the school will offer the Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) career studies certificate program this fall.

The 16-credit program consists of five courses that can all be completed in one semester.

The EMT program is designed to lead to entry-level employment opportunities in the emergency medical services field. The program prepares students to assess and care for patients at the basic life support (BLS) level. Students who successfully complete the required courses can sit for the National Registry of Emergency Medical Technicians EMT certification exam.

Program courses include HLT 105 Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR), EMS 111 Emergency Medical Technician, EMS 120 Emergency Technician—Clinical, BIO 141 Human Anatomy and Physiology I, and ENG 111 College Composition I.

The program is based on the Virginia EMS Education Standards (VEMSES) which are derived from the National EMS Education Standards (NEMSES). The EMT program is also approved by the Virginia Office of Emergency Medical Services.

Classes begin August 23. For more information, including Virginia Department of Health eligibility requirements, visit www.nr.edu/ems/ or contact Sheila Hart in Admissions & Records at (540) 674-3600, ext. 4204 or shart@nr.edu.

Small Animal Community Practice re-energized in its commitment to clients and students

CPRAC is back on track. Small Animal Community Practice (CPRAC, commonly pronounced “SEE-prak”) is a clinic within the Veterinary Teaching Hospital (VTH) at the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine that accepts pets from a 35-mile radius of Blacksburg. “It’s small animal primary care here at the veterinary college,” said Jenny Marin, who joined the community practice as a clinical assistant professor in 2022. “We do a lot of preventive care, vaccines, parasite prevention, disease prevention, things like that. A lot of holistic care, looking at the whole animal and making sure we’re addressing every little thing from their eyes and their ears to the heart and their ability to get around.”

These are not referrals, but community members who bring their pets for checkups and basic health care, as they would with any private-practice veterinarian. “CPRAC, along with the emergency room, are the only two services that you don’t need a referral to access,” said Anthony Graftsky, hospital administrator. “These are our services that are open to everybody.” After some loss of personnel and other challenges during the pandemic years, the community practice is fully staffed once again, and looking to expand its clientele. The clinic recently added Mary Songster-Alpin as its newest clinical assistant professor in community practice. Erin Phoenix ’11, DVM ’17, hired last year as an instructor in the Animal Care in Education program, has also been added as a clinical assistant professor. They join Marin, Mark Freeman, hired in 2012 and recently promoted to clinical associate professor, and Michael Nappier, hired in 2015 and promoted to clinical associate professor in 2020, as full-time clinicians, giving the clinic a complete lineup. Additionally, Rebecca Persons DVM ’20 has stepped in as a clinical instructor and Kelly Mallette — a major in the U.S. Army Veterinary Corps — has been serving as a resident. The community practice also has five licensed veterinary technicians and a veterinary assistant to support the clinicians. Graftsky said the clinic saw 2,854 cases between March 2022 and February 2023, down 3.5 percent from the previous year. But with plans to increase caseload from 12 to 18 a day soon, those numbers could jolt upward in the year ahead. While the clinic serves the community by providing another option for veterinary care, it also provides an important educational opportunity for veterinary students, about three-quarters of which will enter companion animal primary care upon graduation. “The reason community practice is here, is to give our students an opportunity to have a primary care, or regular general practice, companion animal experience, within the confines of the teaching hospital,” said Nappier. “We’re a regular general practice with the addition of vet students. Whereas your regular practice’s goal is solely focused on you and your pet, we’re focused on you and your pet and teaching the next generation of veterinarians how to take care of them.” “The vast majority of our students go into general practice,” said Freeman, whose arrival in 2012 was only a couple of years after the community practice started. “So we feel it’s really important for students to get an experience that replicates what they will be doing in practice, day to day.” As a result of the teaching aspect, the appointments take longer for clients than those at most private practices, but “we have more eyes on things,” Nappier said. “I think a lot of our clients who come here enjoy interacting with the students,” Nappier said. “It’s just fun for them. Many of our clients are in some way involved in education, whether here at the university or local K-12 schools.” One advantage to clients utilizing the community practice is the resources of the full Veterinary Teaching Hospital and its many specialties being easily accessible. “When I need to get an echocardiogram, it’s usually the same day,” Nappier said. “I can get an ultrasound exam the same day, we have anesthesiologists to consult, we have a lab that I can just run my samples to on foot.” “When they come to see us, they are essentially coming to see the whole hospital,” Freeman said. Freeman said the clinic strives to make its care affordable for clients. “I feel like the one area of emphasis that we have tried to consistently provide, and I think we’ve done well on is providing what is now being referred to, and very heavily focused on, as spectrum of care,” Freeman said. “We always offer the very best we have to offer. But we do understand that there are limitations to what clients can do.

And if they can’t meet us at our gold standard, we can offer other more affordable options. And I think we’ve managed to do that consistently.” There is much optimism about the future of the community practice and its opportunities for students and clients in years to come. “We’re excited to expand our primary care education for students,” Marin said. “COVID was hard on everybody. And there were some changes. We needed some more people to replace folks who had left. Now, we’re adding doctors. The goal is to get more appointments for students to see and be able to help as many patients and their people as we can. COVID hit that a little bit hard, we didn’t have as many patients coming in. There’s a lot of interest in refocusing on primary care education for students. That is what we do.”

Keep your car safe from spiking summertime vehicle thefts

RICHMOND — Summer may be perfect for barbecues and vacations, but it's also a hot season for car thieves.

Vehicle thefts spike during summertime, and that's why police departments, transportation associations and organizations like Drive Smart Virginia are reminding people about car security during July's Vehicle Theft Prevention Month.

"Vehicle thefts have increased 25% over the past few years," said David Tenenbaum, Virginia Farm Bureau Mutual Insurance Co. senior actuarial manager and Drive Smart Virginia board member. "Having a vehicle stolen is not only an inconvenience; it's a violation of your personal safety and security. Luckily there are precautions people can take to help prevent it from happening."

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reports that more than 1 million vehicles were stolen in 2022, costing vehicle owners over $8 billion. A vehicle is stolen every 32 seconds in the U.S., and passenger cars are thieves' favorites—making up over 74% of all stolen vehicles.

About half of those thefts involved driver error.

"Keys left in the car is far and away No. 1, regardless of whether the vehicle is locked," explained James Walker, VFBMIC senior claims investigator. "This includes spare keys to any vehicle sitting in the driveway. I've seen situations where every car is stolen out of the driveway in one night."

In addition to never leaving keys or fobs in cars, drivers should park in protected or well-lit areas, close and lock windows and doors, and never leave the area with the vehicle running—a quick trip into the house or store is prime opportunity for a thief.

Items left in plain sight also entice thieves. "Don't leave valuables in the back seat," Walker advised. "Lock them in the trunk, cover them up—thieves will break the window and steal a backpack or gym bag just to see if there's anything good in it. While they're in the car, they'll go through the console to see what else is worth stealing."

While vehicles' anti-theft systems can deter thieves, using secondary security devices like steering wheel locks adds protection and makes thefts more challenging—especially for Hyundais and Kias, which have become targets.

If you find yourself a victim of vehicle theft, immediately contact the police to file a stolen-vehicle report. Call your insurance company within 24 hours of the theft to file a claim.

Protecting your privacy on Meta's new app, Threads

New users signing up for Threads, Meta's response to Twitter, should be aware of the app's data collection capabilities, says a Virginia Tech privacy expert.

"Threads collects user data across 25 different categories, surpassing Twitter's data collection capabilities," says Donna Wortalik, a professor of practice in marketing at the Pamplin College of Business at Virginia Tech and Voices of Privacy co-host.

For more than a decade, Wortalik's research has focused on the growing importance of information privacy. Wortalik is watching Threads closely and says the current state of the app is akin to Twitter in 2007.

Because the social media platform is so new, there are privacy concerns - specifically when it comes to your data. Essentially, all of your information is fair game for Meta, she said.

Threads launched in more than 100 countries on July 6, but not the European Union due to privacy concerns tied to two recent rulings. Some of the data Meta can collect on its users includes location, contact information, contacts, user content (photos, videos, messages), search history, and purchase history.

Wortalik offers these tips for people using the app so they understand what they are signing up for and can protect their privacy.

Decide whether to make your account public or private. This allows the user to control who sees their content.

Understand Threads policy for deleting your account. Meta's policy prohibits users from deleting their Threads profile without also deleting their Instagram account. Most apps you can delete, and Wortalik says a policy that forces the consumer to delete both has never been done. "Perhaps this is Meta's way of having more control and strategies toward future monetization for Threads."

Walk through all settings in the app. This will allow the user to in some cases limit what data is collected by the company and third-party users. There are seven settings that limit what you see on the app. Two of them limit accessibility to your posted content by other users. Since the app is connected to Instagram, your privacy choices should apply there too.

Donna Wortalik currently serves as director of marketing strategy and analytics and is a professor of practice in marketing in the Pamplin College of Business at Virginia Tech. She has diverse corporate and academic experience, training, and acquired skills in the identification of marketing opportunities, brand management, social media engagement and measurement as well as overall product development. Current Christiansburg Police Chief Mark Sisson will be retiring on Aug. 31, 2023 after nearly 30

"I am confident that the Christiansburg Police Department has effectively implemented strong succession training for its leadership," said Sisson. "For this reason, the agency will continue to be successful during its transition of

Declare the Truth

Read Isaiah 43:1 through 45:25

"You are my witnesses," declares the Lord, "and my servant whom I have chosen, so that you may know and believe me and understand that I am he. Before me no god was formed, nor will there be one after me" (Isaiah 43:10).

When the people of Israel persisted in looking to the gods of the nations that surrounded them, the Lord was provoked to address their unfaithfulness. He called Israel to make a thoughtful examination of exactly what the gods of other nations had to offer. He then contrasted these false gods with himself.

These gods of the nations, which were no gods at all, could not choose Israel. But God, who is the only God, did make a choice. In His choosing, He had a purpose. He wanted Israel to know that He alone is God, to believe in His character, and to understand His love for His chosen.

Then He wanted one more thing. He wanted His people to acknowledge Him before all others and declare His glory. Instead of seeking false gods, Israel should have been declaring: "Only our God is God; no other is like Him."

Thought for Today: God wants our love for Him to be evident to all.

The family extends their deepest gratitude to all those who have shown their support and love during this difficult time. Your kind words, gestures, and presence have provided comfort and strength to our family.

New table for CT scanner allows examination of large animals at Veterinary Teaching Hospital

BLACKSBURG - You can lead a horse to water, but you can't get one easily into a CT scanner.

Until recently, clinicians at the Veterinary Teaching Hospital in the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine couldn't use CT, or computed tomography, for large animals. But the recent purchase of an $85,000 table for large animals that can be wheeled to the CT scanner now allows for that option, particularly useful for studying conditions inside the heads of equine animals.

"We commonly use the CT scanner for imaging dogs and cats," said Gregory Daniel, professor of radiology in the Department of Small Animal Clinical Sciences.

"The current CT scanner works great for small animals, but most scanners have a 450-pound table limit. For most people and certainly for all small animals, that is sufficient. But if you've got a 1,000-pound patient, then a traditional CT scanner cannot accommodate that weight."

Now, a horse or other large animal can be anesthetized, laid upon the table, and rolled to the CT scanner. The table is electronically synced with the scanner, allowing it to capture slice-by-slice imagery of a large animal's skull, teeth, and cranial cavities, providing much more detail than X-ray radiographs can reveal.

"When you look at the radiograph of a horse skull, it's is a two-dimensional image of a three-dimensional object," Daniel said. "A radiograph is composed of shadows from multiple overlying structures, superimposed over each other. When you've got a complex anatomy with a lot of overlying bones and cavities, a radiograph can be challenging to interpret."

Radiographs work fine for most problems involving teeth or the more outward bone structure, but become more difficult to rely on when issues extend into the nose or other interior parts of a horse's face and head.

The Veterinary Teaching Hospital in Blacksburg will be the only veterinary hospital offering the capability to employ CT scans for large animals in a radius extending roughly 240 miles, to as far away as North Carolina State University's veterinary college in Raleigh and to the Marion duPont Scott Equine Medical Center (EMC) in Leesburg, where there is a CT scanner that allows equine animals to stand during the exam.

Pry emphasizes defense in year two

Marty Gordon
NRVsports@mainstreetnewspapers.com

Brent Pry came to Blacksburg after serving as the defensive coordinator at Penn State. Wednesday, he spoke at the ACC Media Kickoff and pointed to his second year at Virginia Tech with a heavy hand on the defensive side of the ball. He told reporters there should be a lot of growth on that side of the ball.

“Defensively we lost a couple of leaders obviously with Chamarri [Conner] and Dax [Hollifield], but I really like the speed and athleticism that returns on that side of the ball,” said Pry. “We got a fast group. Coach Marve has them racing to the football.”

The idea of defense possibly being the strong point for the Hokies this season is no surprise, especially how the defensive-minded coach addresses the game plan. Pry said the team has really honed in on fundamentals and techniques.

“We’ve got a good plan to create more explosives through personnel, through scheme, maximizing what we do well,” he said.

Pry was joined by defensive lineman Josh Fuga, tight end Nick Gallo and wide receiver Ali Jennings.

Fuga said Pry’s personality is contagious when you walk into the building.

“It’s nothing but good vibes,” said Fuga. “I’m a family-oriented guy, and Coach Pry and the whole staff have done a phenomenal job since they got here of making that the vibe. That this is a family place.

“You can have hard conversations, and there’s nothing -- there’s no emotions to it. It’s a hard conversation. You have to be able to have a hard conversation, but then also, you can also sit back and talk, whatever, about anything. You can laugh, joke with anybody in that building, and it means a lot. You don’t want to be uptight every day like, oh, man, I got to do this, I got to do that.”

Fuga (6-2, 313) is a redshirt senior from Woodbridge and will be leaned on heavy this season. Last season, he played in 10 games, making five starts at defensive tackle, recording 12 tackles (one solo), 2.0 TFL (6 yards), 0.5 sacks (3 yards), two pass breakups and one quarterback hurry.

He, along with Mario Kendrick and Norell Pollard, will be the run stoppers in what should be a much-improved defense.

Meanwhile, the other side of the ball could depend on a lot of new faces. Wide receiver Ali Jennings has transferred from Old Dominion where he was a terror for opponents, including Virginia Tech.

He was an All-Sun Belt First Team, Phil Steele All-American Honorable Mention and led the team with 54 receptions for 959 yards and nine touchdowns, third in the country with 106.6 yards per

RU accuser ordered out in open

Marty Gordon
NRVsports@mainstreetnewspapers.com

U.S. District Judge Michael Urbanski has ordered a Radford University baseball player, who came forward accusing his former coach of mistreating players, to no longer stay in the weeds.

He must no longer be listed as “John Doe” in the lawsuit against former Coach Karl Kuhn. Now, he must list his name in all court documents.

The court said it’s unfair to Kuhn, who resigned in the midst of player complaints. Urbanski called it an “inequality” in allowing the accuser to proceed pseudonymously while Kuhn is forced to defend himself publicly.

The former player said he sought to protect the privacy of his academic and medical records. In the suit, the student, who is black, said Kuhn prohibited players from attending a racial justice rally, which was being held on campus. A second accusation said Kuhn grouped minority players together in an area of the locker room.

Kuhn has denied the allegations.

The court said it would take the request under advisement for the next days, during which the former player must amend the suit to include his real name.

The unknown player has said he was targeted by his former coach after “leading” a group of players about their concerns over longtime verbal abuse.

Kuhn is the current pitching coach for the Charleston Southern Buccaneers, who are in the same conference as his former team, Radford.

In 2019, he was named the head baseball coach at Radford University. Three years later, he resigned in the midst of the investigation by the university’s human resources department. He was 47-64 at the school and was previously the pitching coach at the University of Virginia.

RU, Tech mourn death of Sayer

Virginia Tech Athletics is deeply saddened to announce the passing of assistant men's tennis coach Martin Sayer. He was 36.

"Our thoughts and prayers are with the Sayer family and everyone impacted by the devastating loss of one of our own," director of athletics Whit Babcock expressed. "Martin was a beloved member of our athletics family whose passion for tennis and unwavering commitment to our student-athletes were undeniable. His legacy will live on through the countless lives he impacted, both at Virginia Tech and Radford."

Sayer joined the men's tennis program as an assistant coach ahead of the 2016 spring season and served in that role for eight seasons. While with the team, Sayer played a pivotal role in three NCAA Tournament appearances: 2016, 2018 and 2021. Sayer assisted the oversight of Joao Monteiro's run to the NCAA Singles Final Four in 2016, which is the furthest a Hokie has progressed in the singles tournament. Mitch Harper, Jason Kros and Ryan Fishback later joined Monteiro as student-athletes that qualified in singles for the NCAA Tournament. Five doubles pairs qualified for the NCAA Tournament during Sayer's tenure at Tech, as well. Prior to being named assistant coach for the Hokies in January of 2016, Sayer spent two seasons as head coach of Radford women's tennis – beginning in August of 2013. Ahead of his time with the Highlanders, he served as an assistant for both the Virginia Tech women's tennis team and the Radford men's tennis team.

Sayer was part of the Highlanders' staff when they claimed the 2010 Big South regular-season title and 2011 Big South tournament title. He was an integral part of Ivan Salec's development as a player en route to the NCAA Singles Tournament in 2010 and 2011.

As a player at Radford, Sayer was and will remain a standard for excellence. The program's all-time leader in wins (114), he was a four-time Big South Player of the Year and made four appearances in the NCAA Singles Tournament – twice advancing to the Round of 32. Paired with Zack Watson, Sayer was part of the first RU duo to earn an at-large appearance in the NCAA Doubles Championship in 2009. On the international stage, Sayer was a member of Hong Kong's Davis Cup team and was part of one of its most successful doubles pairs with Brian Hung, posting a 4-1 record. Sayer first represented Hong Kong in the 2005 Davis Cup.

Sayer was married to the former Ashley Glass and the couple have one son, Roger.

game and led the Sun Belt with nine touchdowns including five, 100-yard receiving games.

"As most of you know, I've been a few places, but this environment here, it's the most tight-knit, family-oriented place I've been," said Jennings. "You see guys coming in every day, staying long hours even after the mandatory meetings and workouts are done, doing whatever they can to help better each other, better themselves, and the team."

Tight end Nick Gallo has seen both the good and the bad in Blacksburg but is optimistic about the changes.

"I think we were definitely pretty disappointed with how we played last year, and I think kind of the first thing that we addressed was all the mistakes we were kind of making, putting ourselves in bad situations," said Gallo. "So, one of the fundamentals we talk about is details. Offensively we've been really dialed in on the details all offseason."

Gallo thinks with the experienced guys coming back, settling into the second year of Coach Bowen's offense, it's all going to pay off.

The ballots were handed out on where each team would finish this season, but the results have not been published as of yet. Right now, onlookers think the Hokies could finish in the lower part of the pack with at least six wins, meaning the Hokies could be back in the bowl swing of things.
