The current site of Bisset Park (the Trigg site) was once a Native American village.

Many items, including pottery, were recovered from the Trigg site.

Glencoe Mansion highlights Radford's connections to Native American Heritage Month

RADFORD - In observance of Native American Heritage Month, observed in November each year, Glencoe Mansion took some time to explore the Native Americans that lived where Radford is today:

Did you know Bisset Park was once home to a Native American village?

In 1974 and 1975, during the creation of the Park, a Native American village was excavated on the bank of the New River. The Trigg Site, named after the local family who owned the property, revealed that Native Americans occupied the village from the Archaic period (8000 BC-1800 BC) until the Historic period (1550 AD-1780 AD). Due to the location of the village, erosion had destroyed a portion of it, but the majority of site was still intact.

Recently we received a few questions about what Native American tribes lived at the Trigg Site. Archaeologists still have not identified which tribe or tribes inhabited the site due to the diverse origins of the artifacts, in addition to the lack of written historical information. However, these factors do reveal that Southwestern Virginia was a crossroads of Native American culture. Mississippian people entered the region from the south along the Tennessee River system. Ohio Valley people came down from the north along the New River, and other native people advanced north up the Roanoke River. Many of the Native American footpaths from the past are still in use today as major highways across Virginia.

What are some of the items that were found? The artifacts indicate goods were obtained from local and non-local sources. Local items included stone used to make projectile points and knives; clay ceramics such as pots and clay pipes; bone tools including fishhooks. Non-local items included shell materials from the coast of North Carolina, and glass and copper beads most likely obtained from English, Spanish, or other early explorers. These non-local items indicate the high level of trading and movement

Virginia Tech receives $3.5 million award to study impact of adolescent exposure to opioids

Opioid addiction is a pressing public health crisis with far-reaching implications. More than 100,000 deaths a year have been linked to drug overdoses since 2020.

Jenna Catalano prepares epigenomic assays; photo by Peter Means for Virginia Tech. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reports that more people died from drug overdoses in 2021 than from firearm and motor vehicle deaths combined. Three-quarters of these overdose deaths were attributable to opioids.

A five-year, $3.5 million grant from the National Institutes of Health's National Institute on Drug Abuse will fund the Virginia Tech Department of Chemical Engineering's pioneering research to understand how adolescent exposure may contribute to opioid addiction. Examples of adolescent exposure include youth taking prescribed opioid medication for pain relief following a sports injury or experiencing neglect in instances of parental opioid addiction.

Chang Lu, the Fred W. Bull Professor of Chemical Engineering and graduate chair, will serve as the contact principal investigator of the initiative, leading a team in the research.

Chemical engineers bring in unique skills

According to Lu, chemical engineers have a unique set of skills that they can leverage in chemistry, biotechnology, and process engineering to clarify how addiction takes hold, making it possible to eventually develop processes and products that alleviate the societal burden of drug addiction. Additionally, their proficiency in data analysis and modeling allows them to develop the tools required to unveil complex neural networks, opening new avenues for brain research.

Lu's team in the initiative includes Julie Blendy, professor of pharmacology at the University of Pennsylvania, and Wei Wang, professor of chemistry and biochemistry at the University of California, San Diego.

Blendy's expertise in long-lasting effects of adolescent oxycodone exposure on reward-related behavior and gene expression in mice make her an ideal collaborator for the initiative. Likewise, Wang brings proficiency in analyzing large data sets like the ones that will be generated in the research.

"My research at University of Pennsylvania focuses on understanding the molecular basis for the biochemical and behavioral changes that come with chronic drug use," noted Blendy. "How drugs lead to long-term adaptations within the brain to impact drug-taking behavior is not known, but alterations in gene expressions are likely involved. Our team — led by Lu — is well-poised to significantly advance the field in understanding the biological basis of addiction."

A complex problem

Opioid addiction is a multifaceted issue, involving both genetic and environmental components. Genetic factors can predispose individuals to addiction vulnerability, influencing how their brains respond to opioids.

Environmental factors such as early-life adversity, social networks, and access to opioids play pivotal roles in addiction initiation and maintenance. Understanding how genes and the environment interact at the molecular level is central to understanding the neurobiology of addiction. Epigenetics, the study of how behaviors and environment can cause changes in how genes work, provides valuable insights into the gene-environment interactions that drive addiction.

In this project, Lu's team will focus particularly on one environmental factor: How early exposure to opioids potentially contributes to addiction. "When adolescents are injured during sports, they are often prescribed strong pain relievers that contain opioids," Lu said. "It is important to understand what footprint such early exposure leaves in a developing brain, in terms of epigenetic alterations."

Artists host Holiday Open House benefitting charities

RADFORD - Three local artists will be hosting a Holiday Open House this weekend, just in time for holiday shopping, which will also benefit local charities.

The annual open house event will be held at the home of Susan V. Lockwood, one of the featured artists, at 408 Eighth Street, Radford, (corner of Berkley and Eighth) with parking on Berkley, on Saturday, Dec. 2 and Sunday, Dec. 3, 10 a.m. - 5 p.m.

The show will feature artwork by painter Charlotte Chan, colored pencil artist Jennifer Carpenter, and photographer Susan V. Lockwood. Originals, prints (framed and unframed), and cards will be available. Area residents are invited to stop by and enjoy fine art and refreshments. Also, 10% of all sales will be donated to a local charity of each artists' choice.

Lockwood's work has been shown in national juried exhibitions in Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Maryland, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia, and West Virginia. In awarding her first place, the juror of a regional show commented, "Her photographs combine technical skill and a fine eye to create formally interesting compositions strong enough to evoke intense and lasting emotional responses from a variety of viewers."

Carpenter, formerly of Radford and a current resident of Christiansburg, brings 40 years of colored pencil experience and many unique, one-of-a-kind original artworks to the event. A multitude of reasonably priced giclee prints and note cards will also be available. Carpenter has won awards at the international level and her colored pencil expertise and has been featured in numerous art publications, colored pencil books, and artist magazines. She was a Special Education teacher in Radford City Schools until 2013 when she left teaching to focus on art full-time. She currently works from her home studio; she is a member of the Floyd Artists Association, exhibiting work year 'round at A New Leaf Gallery in Floyd."

Chan, of Blacksburg, learned how to paint with Chinese brushes when she was a teenager in Hong Kong and now she is using this technique to paint with watercolor. She loves colors and forms, so she paints a lot of nature. Her artworks were accepted into the juried shows of Virginia Watercolor Society and West Virginia Watercolor Society. She is expanding her artistic endeavor by adding acrylic paints as well as oil with cold wax in her artwork.

Students' research into persistent problems on display at Wicked Festival

Jae Horst and Emma Sneed stood beside a house of cards inside a room so busy with movement that it seemed likely the fragile structure could crumble at any time.

The cards served as a metaphor for the "housing crisis in the New River Valley," Horst explained. "If you pull one out, everything crashes down, and that's what housing can be like."

Throughout their fall semester at Radford University, the duo studied housing issues of the 182,000 people who reside in the region. They gathered statistics, analyzed the impact of housing costs, examined efforts to remedy the problems — such as government-funded projects — and, true to their assignment, developed possible solutions — perhaps a legislative rent cap might work? — to what classifies as a wicked problem.

"Obviously, our solution isn't perfect," Sneed confessed, "but it's a place to start."

The challenge of finding solutions to nearly impossible issues is how wicked problems are defined.

As Horst and Sneed stood for an hour discussing their work, so did a few hundred other Radford University students taking part in the bi-annual Wicked Festival on Nov. 9 inside the hustling and bustling Kyle Hall.

The goal of the Wicked Festival is to give Radford undergraduate students, from freshmen to seniors, the tools and resources needed for them to become experts and problem-solvers for complex, persistent and "wicked" public issues.

This year, almost 500 students participated, a substantial increase from the 270 who presented at the spring event. In two sessions, students shared their work through elaborate posters displayed in Kyle while also engaging in conversations about their extensive research with fellow students, faculty, university administrators and others who walked through the event.

The College of Humanities and Behavioral Sciences hosted the fall 2023 festival with support from the Center for Innovative Teaching and Learning (CITL), Citizen Leader and the Office of Undergraduate Research and Scholarship (OURS).

Each student's research grew from their work in a variety of disciplines, including philosophy, political science, economics, design, marketing, geography, education, criminal justice and social work. Students worked individually and in groups on their projects throughout the fall semester, building on their understanding of and possible solutions to a particular wicked problem. gender, poverty, education, the environment, food insecurity, U.S. and global politics and technology were among the themes students explored.

The festival is a product of Radford's Wicked Problems Initiative, which is based on decades of research aimed toward engaging students in research that will develop their problem-solving skills as they examine some of the world's most complex problems.

"Students love the Wicked Festival because it helps them solve practical problems, and it gives them confidence to say, 'When I go into the real world, I can solve real-life problems,'" said Director of International Studies and Professor of Political Science Tay Keong Tan,

Be careful with on-line scams during the holidays, says Virginia Tech cybercrime expert Katalin Parti.

Tips to avoid charity scams during the holidays

For many people, the holiday season is a time to give back. It's also the time of year when scammers ramp up their efforts to take advantage of your goodwill to steal your hard-earned money.

Virginia Tech cybercrime expert Katalin Parti explains that charity scammers typically impersonate other successful charities. "They may call you using a local phone number," says Parti. "That tactic can give you a false sense of security."

Once they get you on the line, it's time for the scammer to make their pitch. "It will be a good one. It will tug at your heart-strings," says Parti. "But listen closely because they will never actually specify how they will help. They may even claim that you've donated before and ask you to do it again."

Parti recommends keeping the following in mind when giving this holiday season:

Do your research. Use the IRS tax-exempt organization search tool or a watchdog like Charity Watch to get more information and learn if the charity is credible. Google also works.

Pay close attention to the charity name and website. False charities like to mimic other popular charities. If it seems too close in name to another, it might not be real.

Keep track of your donations. Even if you accidentally donate to a scammer, you need to ensure that the donation isn't recurring.

Don't give away all your personal information. Of course, it's normal to provide your card information, but don't do the same with your Social Security number or bank account number.

Don't make a cash donation. Unless you're certain about a charity's credibility, don't give away cash, gift cards, or cryptocurrency.

Yates, Ila Ann

Ila Ann Yates, 90, of Fairlawn, passed peacefully into the waiting arms of her Savior on the morning of Tuesday, Nov. 21, 2023.

Ila was a strong woman of faith, who loved the Lord with all her heart. She was an active figure in the local church for many years. Ila loved reading and gardening, getting her hands in the dirt. Be it flowers or vegetables, she was always proud of her work and had a "green thumb." She was also a very skilled seamstress and did beautiful works of knitting and crochet. Originally from Springfield, Mass., she met the love of her life through mutual friends while he was stationed in Berlin. She and Jesse K. Yates, of Blacksburg, wrote to each other for a year. When he was discharged from the service, he went to Massachusetts to meet her. Not long after, they were married and he brought her back down to Virginia, where they lived, happily married for 49 years and 11 months before he lost a long battle with cancer and went home to be with the Lord. During this time, they were blessed with three children. Ila was preceded in death by her parents, Alexander and Lottie LaFleur Neill; her beloved husband, Jesse K. Yates; brother, Jimmy Neill; and her sister, Olive Mae Beresford.

Canode, Jr., George Nathan

George Nathan Canode, Jr., 78, of Shawsville, passed away on Tuesday, Nov. 21, 2023.

He was born on Nov. 10, 1945. George was a graduate of Newcastle High School and went to Virginia Tech where he received a degree in animal science. He was a dedicated member of the block and bridle club. After that, he joined the army, serving in Germany during the Vietnam era. After being discharged, he worked a few jobs before working at Triangle Equipment in Christiansburg and leaving there to start his business, Farmland Equipment, in 1979. He was a lifelong member of Craig Healing Springs Christian Church and served there in various capacities throughout his life. George was preceded in death by his parents, George Nathan, Sr. and Elizabeth LaFon Canode; his loving wife, Carol Ellen Rucker Canode; and an infant grandson, William Nathan Canode.

Survivors include his son and daughter-in-law, Gregory Taylor Canode and his wife Kristi; grandchildren, Taylor and Luke; sister, Becky Hutton; brother-in-law and sister-in-law, Jamie and Christie Rucker; special friend, Judy Purks; and many other relatives and friends.

George was a very proud "Papa" to his grandchildren, and they were his pride and joy. He always said that the reason that parents never killed their kids was for the hope of them having grandchildren. He thought the world of them and worried about them even up until the end.

George was proud that it was the oldest continuously family run farm equipment dealership in Montgomery County. As many will attest, George was not always the friendliest but would do anything for anyone if he was able. He liked the many customers that have supported him over the years. George will be dearly missed.

The family will receive friends 12 - 1 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 29, 2023, at the Mullins Funeral Home in Radford. Memorial services will begin at 1 p.m. with Pastor JB Beane and Minister Kenny Davis officiating. A graveside service will follow at 2:30 p.m. at the Southwest Virginia Veteran's Cemetery in Dublin.

Sonya Sanie participated in Radford's first Wicked Festival in the fall of 2021. "I still have my poster," she said, smiling.

About 100 students participated in the first festival, held in a group of rooms on the ground floor of Heth Hall. Now, in only three years of existence, "it's taking up three floors of Kyle Hall," said Sanie, a senior political science major from Fairfax, Virginia, who is graduating in December. "It keeps getting bigger and bigger every year."

A developing network of faculty incorporating wicked initiatives into their courses is sparking the growth.

Wicked at Radford is much more than a festival.

The Department of Philosophy offers a wicked problems class, which engages students early in their educational journey to think about difficult public problems and ways to construct solutions. The course established a foundation for a new wicked problems minor built from coursework in philosophy, religious studies and political science.

Under Tan's direction, students are spearheading further initiatives through the creation of the Wicked Student Society for undergraduates and the Wicked Graduate Alliance for grad students interested in advancing their wicked problems research.

And that's not all. Students have also established a Wicked Problems Toolkit, allowing them to work with the United Nations Principles for Responsible Management Education to create resources for faculty across the world who are teaching wicked problem-solving.

The Radford students' work in all these initiatives was a big hit in Lisbon, Portugal, in September when they presented at the 10th Responsible Management Education Research Conference. Tan and each of the five Radford students, including Sanie, presented and received an award.

"Because of wicked, I'm now able to think about issues in several different ways, politically, economically, culturally and geopolitically," said Sanie, who didn't present at Radford's fall festival but instead served as a volunteer.

Making connections is a big part of the festival and wicked initiatives, too, Sanie said, referring to those friendships she has forged with faculty.

"My relationship with Dr. Paige Tan and Dr. Tay Keong Tan has been really nice, and I've been able to work with them directly on wicked initiatives," Sanie explained. "Those connections mean a lot."

Those relationships are vital. There are numbers to prove it.

A fall 2023 analysis shows students who participated in the Wicked Festival from fall 2021 to spring 2023 were retained at Radford, 5.7% more than those who did not participate.

"Students and professors benefit from this," Sanie said of the Wicked Festival. "It really brings people together when everyone is using their critical-thinking skills and working with each other and supporting each other."

As many students mentioned during their Wicked Festival presentations, the semester-long research was quite demanding.

"It's been challenging trying to put it all together," said Sneed, a freshman political science major from Salem. "It was a challenge to place such big-picture issues into a small frame."

However, after chronicling the work's demands, another word often followed.

Rewarding.

"It has been challenging, but the Wicked Festival is very beneficial because it opens our eyes to issues that you may not always see in the classroom," explained Spencer Rawlins, a senior political science major from Tampa, Florida. "The research we have done and getting the opportunity to present is very rewarding and beneficial to us."

Standing beside her poster displaying research into cellphone dependency and screen addiction, psychology major Prestyn Akers spoke of the festival's benefits for science majors.

"With the amount of research assignments we have, it really helps us to get an understanding of what it takes to do thorough research," said the sophomore from Virginia Beach, Virginia.

For a few students, tangible honors were given out the night of the festival.

As the students presented, three teams of judges – each made up of a student, faculty and Radford alumni – trekked up and down the Kyle Hall steps to score the presentations. At the end of the night, awards were given for Distinguished Research, Outstanding Presentation and Impactful Solution. After the festival, another team of judges will evaluate video presentations for the video excellence award.

About 30 minutes before the awards ceremony began, Tay Keong Tan stood on the third floor of Kyle, looking over some of the projects and talking about some of those that had developed in his courses.

"There are so many good projects here tonight, and the students have put in a lot of work," he said as a smile crept onto his face. "But many of us professors are competitive, and we want our students to win."

Volunteers exemplify Warm Hearth Village mission

BLACKBURG – As the only local nonprofit retirement community in the New River Valley, Warm Hearth Village (WHV) strongly values collaborations with the greater community to provide enriching programs for residents. Residents benefit greatly from interactions with school-aged children, local college students, performers and peers from throughout the New River Valley. Volunteers bring a vibrancy to the village and complement the efforts of staff adding a layer of engagement and interaction that takes everyone a step beyond the expected.

Sachin Gandhi, a junior in Clinical Neuroscience at Virginia Tech became a volunteer seven months ago to socialize with residents for an intergenerational interactive experience. "Volunteering at Warm Hearth lets me put myself in the residents' shoes, learn their perspectives and understand their backgrounds. Everyone has a story to tell and it's important to take a step back and listen so we can help as much as possible," he said. He continued, "Plus as our population lives longer, we deal with more age-related diseases like dementia. Volunteering my time socializing with the residents keeps them active and contributes to their overall mental health. It also gives me a sense of purpose because working with the elderly lets me make a direct, positive impact on the lives of others," he said.

In 2022, Warm Hearth Village invested in a new volunteer management and communication platform called Volgistics. This platform facilitates volunteer engagement by posting available opportunities and directly scheduling more than 270 in roles such as hosting "senior" proms to cleaning up woodland walking trails. Sara McCarter, Project Manager, works to train new volunteers and coordinates volunteers in the Village.

Intergenerational experiences were integral to our founder's vision for Warm Hearth. Dr. Kroontje knew the value of collaboration with our greater community not only from the resources it would bring to the village but for how it would help seniors living here contribute their own talents and remain engaged and active.

To learn more about volunteer or collaborative opportunities at the village, visit our website at retire.org and click the Volunteer button at the upper right.

Warm Hearth Village is a nonprofit senior living community in Blacksburg that provides a full continuum of living options on our campus and in the home.

Remembering some of the greatest characters who have stalked the football sidelines

Evans "Buddy" King

Columnist

You can't listen to sports news or read a word about college football these days without hearing something about a coach, usually not good. This season started with a hazing scandal at Northwestern which resulted in an almost revered coach, one who was a "feel good" story leading his alma mater, losing his job, and then quickly progressed to the head coach at another Big 10 school being fired for allegedly sexually harassing the sexual harassment trainer he had hired to work with his team. Really?

Of course, the coup de grace of scandals came at Michigan, a school that prides itself on being "almost an Ivy" for its academic achievements and high character. This reputation has been sullied by the sign stealing scandal that has reached Watergate-like proportions, sadly overshadowing great seasons by what seem to be tremendous kids like running back Blake Corum and quarterback J.J. McCarthy.

The Michigan situation at least has added some comic relief when you consider that Coach Jimmy has attempted to turn his suspension for what appears to be a blatant cheating scheme into an attack on the American way of life, just like Tim Matheson turned the suspension of his college fraternity into an indictment of the American educational system in Animal House. Watch the scene on You Tube if you don't know it. I must admit I borrowed this analogy from my friend Rick Neuheisel, another famous former coach turned broadcaster.

All these events led me to think about college football coaches and some of the great characters who have stalked the sidelines on autumn Saturday afternoons during my lifetime.

First, I have to put in a plug about my neck of the woods in North Central West Virginia. Miami of Ohio, a little to our west, has long been known as the "Cradle of Coaches", boasting of former coaches Earl Blaik, Paul Brown, Woody Hayes, and Ara Parseghian to name just a few of a long list. But my little corner of the world has put out some legends of its own, most recently Nick Saban and Jimbo Fisher (a softball teammate of mine when he was in college and I was a young lawyer in town and the coach who recently impacted Wall Street with his buyout), and Rich Rodriguez, who has had his ups and downs but is still one of the more innovative coaches around.

Within the same 25-mile radius is Shinnston, the hometown of legendary

USC Coach John McKay, who perhaps became most famous while, when coaching the 0-16 Tampa Bay Bucs and being asked about his team's execution, said he was in favor of it.

My favorite Saban story is one Nick tells on himself. Just a few years ago, when Nick and his wife "Miss Terry" returned to their hometown of Monongah, they spotted the guy Miss Terry had dated in high school before Nick. He was working in a gas station and Nick kiddingly said, "Look where you would have ended up if you had married him". Miss Terry quickly said, "No, if he had married me, he would have ended up as the head coach at Alabama". Touché.

Add to this list of northern West Virginia college football coaches the names of Lou Holtz and legendary Syracuse coach Ben Schwartzwalder who were from the northern panhandle area, and you can see the reason for bragging rights. You could also include Tommy Bowden and brother Terry who were either born or raised in Morgantown while their dad Bobby was coaching the Mountaineers. This was before the wise folks there said, "we can do better, let's hang him in effigy and run him out of town". Like to rethink that one?

Any article on great college football coaches by someone my age and with the roots I have in the Commonwealth has to include shout outs to Jerry Claiborne, who coached the decade of the 1960's at Tech and set the path for the current Iowa team which wins with great defense and special teams and an offense that couldn't score a TD if the opposition had left the field, and Frank Beamer, who did the near impossible by taking Tech consistently to the Top 20, and George Welsh, who did the impossible at Virginia by having umpteen winning seasons in a row.

When thinking of college football coaches, I have to go back to my high school football days and my idols - the aforesaid John "there are 600,000,000 people in China who don't give a damn about who wins this game" McKay at Southern Cal and Darrel "dance with the who brung you" Royal at Texas and Woody "a clash of thunder and a cloud of dust and 3 yards" Hayes at Ohio State and Paul (Bear) "call your mamas tomorrow boys, I wish I could call mine" Bryant at Alabama.

In junior high, somewhat jokingly and somewhat wishfully, I asked my dad what would I do if I got recruited by all four of those coaches. He said, "Son, let's cross that bridge when we get to it." Thankfully, I wasn't forced to let any of them down.

Financial Focus: Do your investments match your goals?

As you go through life, you'll have various financial goals — and to achieve them, you'll need to invest. But just recognizing the need to invest is not as useful as matching specific types of accounts or investments with specific goals. How can you make these connections?

Let's look at some common goals and how they could possibly be met with appropriate accounts and investments:

Saving for a down payment on a house — When you're saving for a down payment, you want a certain amount of money available at a certain time — so, for this goal, you won't want to take too much risk. Consequently, you might consider investing in certificates of deposit (CDs), which will pay you regular interest payments and return your principal when the CDs mature. CDs are issued in a range of maturities, from one month to 10 years. Other vehicles you might consider are money market accounts or other cash equivalents.

Saving for a child's education — If you have children, and you'd like to help them pay for some form of higher education, you may want to consider a 529 education savings plan. Any earnings growth in a 529 plan is federally tax free, provided the withdrawals are used for qualified education expenses, and you may also receive state tax benefits. A 529 plan can be used for college, approved trade school programs, student loan repayments and some K-12 costs. And if the child you've named as a beneficiary chooses not to continue their education, and doesn't need the money in a 529 plan, you can generally switch beneficiaries to another immediate family member.

Saving for retirement — This is the one goal that will remain consistent throughout your working years — after all, you could spend two or even three decades in retirement, so you'll need to accumulate as many financial resources as you can to pay for those years. Fortunately, you likely have access to several good retirement-savings vehicles. If you work for a business, you might have a 401(k) plan, which offers you the chance to put away money on a tax-deferred basis. (If you have a Roth option in your 401(k), your withdrawals can be tax free, although, unlike a traditional 401(k), your contributions won't lower your taxable income.) If you work for a public school or a nonprofit organization, you may be able to participate in a 403(b) plan, which is quite similar to a 401(k), and the same is true if you work for a state or local government, where you might have a 457(b) plan. And even if you invest in any of these plans, you can probably also contribute to an IRA, which gives you another chance to invest on a tax-deferred basis (or tax-free basis, if you're eligible for a Roth IRA). Try to take full advantage of whatever retirement plans are available to you.

Here's one final point to keep in mind: While some investments and accounts are appropriate for certain goals, they may not necessarily be suitable for your individual situation — so keep all your options in mind and take the steps that are right for you.

Radford slips by Glenvar to state semi-finals

Marty Gordon

NRVsports@ourvalley.org

Radford and Glenvar gave fans everything they would want in a high school football playoff game on Friday night.

Over the past two years, Glenvar has scored in the final minutes to knock Radford out of the postseason. This week, it was Radford who scored with a minute to go to pick up the 29-24 win.

QB Landon Clark was picked off three times but completed 26 of 40 passes for 295 yards with two touchdowns. He also rushed 13 times for 116 yards in the game. Max Kanipe caught 13 of those passes for 154-yard night with a score. Sincere Taylor added six catches for 73 yards.

Clark is 63 yards from passing his yardage record from last year. Friday night, he passed his record for completions and set the record for passing attempts in a season. Kanipe tied Parker Prioleau's receptions record from last year.

For the season, Clark is now 191 of 296 through the air with 2,910 yards with 34 touchdowns. He has rushed 105 times for 1,056 yards with 24 touchdowns.

Kanipe now has 62 catches for 1,333 yards with 14 touchdowns, while Taylor has added 44 for 631 with four TDs.

On the season, J.D. Grubb has rushed 94 times for 495 yards to give the running attack a one-two punch.

Radford will now play a familiar foe in the form of Graham, who beat Union on Saturday.

The game will be held at Christiansburg High School on Saturday at 2 p.m.

Graham is 12-1 after Saturday's 33-24 win over Union. The 2022 Class 2 Offensive Player of the Year Ty'Drez Clements rushed for 306 yards and four touchdowns for the defending Class 2 champions.

The G-men have outscored opponents 489 to 165 this season. Their lone loss came to Union in the regular season.

Of note this season, they beat the Class 1 semi-finalists Galax 42-13 and Pulaski 52-24.

Last year, Graham finished 15-0 and took down Central Woodstock 34-7 in the title game.

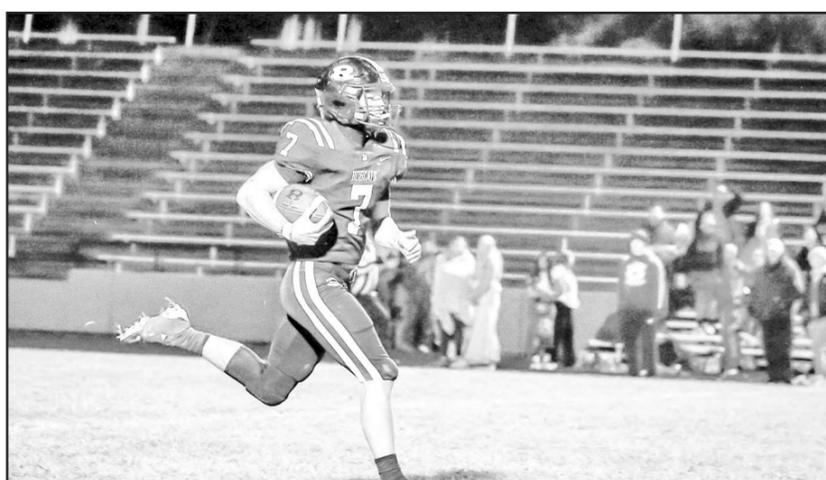

The school is 93-11 since the 2015-16 season when they finished 6-6. Since Tony Palmer took over as coach, the G-men have dominated the competition.

Senior receiver Max Kanipe picks up extra yards after the catch by breaking tackles.

Sam Khandan-Barani (#22) and Reece Honaker (#62) assist on a tackle by Ricky Bailey (#77) in Friday's Regional championship victory.

Senior quarterback Landon Clark races for a score with 6:01 to play in the fourth quarter to put the Bobcats up 21-16 before later converting the 2-point conversion to extend the score to 23-16.

Receiver Luke Woodard hauls in a touchdown pass with 10 seconds left in the game to give Radford the 29-24 victory over Glenvar.

Besties continue together on collegiate softball field

The Blacksburg High School combo of catcher Katey Mathena and pitcher Lorelei Spradlin have played softball with each other for over eight years. They will graduate this May and then continue their collegiate softball careers together at Carson Newman University.

Marty Gordon

Lorelei Spradlin and Katey Mathena have been friends since preschool, and they have played softball together since elementary school.

This has included several years of recreation-age softball and four years for the Blacksburg High School varsity. This week, they announced plans to attend Carson-Newman University to continue their collegiate careers, but what else, together on the diamond.

Spradlin is excited about continuing the journey with her friend.

"I'm looking forward to being able to mature in the game together," Spradlin said. "We've already been together for so long (10 years), and built a strong foundation of chemistry, but playing at a higher level will push us further than ever before, and I can't wait."

Spradlin is a pitcher and Mathena is her catcher, making this relationship even stronger. Those positions will not change in college.

Mathena chose CN after looking at over 30 schools with the only one that excited her being the final decision.

"The atmosphere and welcoming nature that that school gave made it feel like home. The coaching staff at Carson-Newman is also another reason why I chose to continue my softball career at Carson-Newman. They spent a lot of time telling me all about their program and showing me how much they cared about each of their athletes. It also helps that my best friend and pitcher is also attending," she said.

Spradlin said the school checked all her boxes.

"I was looking for a small, Christian, environment that had my major and an opportunity to play softball. Plus, all of the coaches and players are super kind-hearted, so I can tell that's where God wants me to be."

Mathena has been a starter for the past four years and was named first-team All-District for two years in a row and second-team All-Region her sophomore year. Last year, she batted .417 with 25 hits.

Spradlin has been right there with her battery mate. In her sophomore and junior years, she was named first-team All-District and second-team All-Region. She pitched 90 innings this past year with 123 strikeouts, giving her 200 strikeouts for her career, while posting a 2.0 earned run average including a perfect game against Salem.

Carson-Newman University is a private Baptist university in Jefferson City, Tennessee with current enrollment of 2,536 students. The school is a member of the South Atlantic Conference (SAC) and fields 21 varsity teams in the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Division II competition.

CNU finished 31-18 in softball this past season, losing in the NCAA Regionals. Michael Graves returns for his 16th year as the head coach of the softball team.

In his five full seasons at the helm of the program, Graves has coached Carson-Newman to a trio of NCAA Southeast Regional appearances. In 2018, as the Eagles' interim head coach, he also captained C-N to a regional appearance, as well as a SAC tournament title.

In college, Mathena plans to major in Graphic Design and minor in marketing, while Spradlin is leaning toward Kinesiology/Exercise Science (Athletic Training).

The Virginia Tech football team battled sprinklers after Saturday's win over UVA as they were attempting to take a post-game group shot.

Hokies get a little wet in win over Hoos

Marty Gordon

NRVsports@ourvalley.org

Virginia Tech's football team brought the Jekel side of the closet this past week as they continued the domination of UVA.

Just two weeks ago, it was Hyde that took the field in a loss to N.C. State.

It's just getting harder and harder to understand which Hokie squad will take the field on game day.

The bottom line is the Commonwealth Cup is starting to tarnish after every player and coach on the team took a drink from it. Of course, this has been an ongoing tradition for a number of years and probably will continue as UVA is still trying to find the right road where wins come more often than losses.

Kyron Drones threw three touchdown passes, Bhayshul Tuten scored on a 32-yard run and a 94-yard kickoff return and Virginia Tech beat Virginia for the 18th time in the last 19 meetings, 55-17, on Saturday to achieve bowl eligibility. Hokie Nation can celebrate the dominant win with an exclusive Tech Triumph win shirt.

The win gives the Hokies one point in the Commonwealth Clash, presented by Smithfield. The score for the Commonwealth Clash currently is 5-1 in favor of Virginia. Drones threw touchdown passes of 44, 84 and 34 yards and the Hokies (6-6, 5-3 Atlantic Coast Conference) also scored on two long runs. They had a 294-60 yardage edge at halftime and boosted their total to 378 on Drones' 84-yard pass to Da'Quan Felton on their first play from scrimmage after halftime to go ahead 31-0.

Virtually nothing went right for the Cavaliers (3-9, 2-6), who were facing their top rival for the first time in two seasons because last year's game was canceled after the fatal shootings of three Virginia players with two weeks

Tech's 55 points scored against the Cavaliers were the most points scored by either team in the 104-game series. Tech's previous high was 52 - twice, once in a 52-14 win in 2005 and again in a 52-10 win in 2016.

The most points Virginia has scored is 45 back in 1950. The last time Tech scored 55 or more points was against William & Mary in 2018. The 55 points are also tied for the second most points scored by the Hokies in an ACC contest. Tech scored 55 in 2004, their first year in the ACC, against Maryland. The most points scored by Tech in an ACC game is 59 against North Carolina in 2017.

But it might have been the after game incident, which is getting the most attention.

Apparently, the University of Virginia facilities staff has a timer, which turns on the field sprinklers shortly after everyone leaves the stadium. The problem was this past week, Virginia Tech Coach Brent Pry decided it would be cool to take a team photo with the Commonwealth Cup at mid-field.

The program here was he probably should have sought advice from the facilities staff. Have way through the pic, the field sprinklers turned on and left the Hokies a little wet.

Without trying, UVA got back at the Hokies.

Of course, Hoos might have more than a bit upset. When the scoreboard hit triple-zeros, Hokie fans rushed the field like it was a home game at Lane.

Do remember, someone did change the google address search engine four years ago to say the address of Scott Stadium was really called "Lane Stadium North."

Game staff just gave up and let the chaos happen. Sorry from some of the Hokie faithful that knows even if it was UVA, that's just something you don't do.

Radford storms past Northern Colorado

From a double-digit first half deficit to a double-digit win, the Radford men's basketball team stormed back for a 79-68 victory over Northern Colorado to win the 2023 Cancun Challenge Mayan Division Championship at the Hard Rock Hotel Riviera Maya on Wednesday.

Redshirt senior guard DaQuan Smith was named tournament MVP after dropping 22 points, six rebounds and four assists in the championship game. The veteran sharpshooter carried the Highlanders (4-3, 0-0 Big South) through a slow start and kept it going until the clock hit zero.

It was a nerve-racking start to the contest as the Highlanders missed every one of their first seven shot attempts. Down 9-0 right off the jump, Radford's first point came at the 15:40 mark on a Justin Archer free throw and the first field goal to hit its mark didn't come until the 14:13 mark, courtesy of TJ NeSmith.

Northern Colorado (3-3, 0-0 Big Sky) built its lead to 20-7, but it would prove to be their largest advantage of the night.

A smooth jumper from Bryan Antoine was the first sign of life for the Highlanders and a pair of free throws from D'Auntray Pierce tied the game at 32-all with 2:51 to go in the period. All of a sudden, the 13-point deficit was a 40-34 halftime lead as Radford closed the half on a 15-2 run.

The Highlanders held that lead for the remainder of the game, shooting 46.8% (29-62) from the field, 35.0% (7-20) from three, and 82.4% (14-17) at the charity stripe when it was all said and done. It took a complete team effort to pull off the comeback win, as the defense held the Bears to a 39.7% (23-58) clip overall on the other end.

Joining Smith on the All-Tournament team was sophomore guard Kenyon Giles, who turned it on late to extend his double-digit scoring streak to seven games with 11 points. NeSmith contributed a crucial 14 points and seven rebounds while Antoine gave Radford a fourth major scorer with 11 points of his own.

The Bears were paced by Saint Thomas (19 points, five rebounds) and Riley Abercrombie (14 points).

Notes and stats: Wednesday marked Radford's seventh straight game with the same starting lineup (Giles, Smith, Antoine, Turner, Archer). The team's longest streak last year was only six games straight with Jeffers, Smith, Antoine, Archer and Niang from Jan. 26 to Feb. 11.

Radford entered the week averaging just 15.6 bench points this season. Truth

Harris and NeSmith were central to 19 bench points on Tuesday and then 25 bench points on Wednesday.

The Highlanders earned a 32-to-20 advantage in points in the paint.

Coach Nichols' squad committed a season-low nine turnovers against Northern Colorado.

Cancun challenge results (Mayan division):

Game One: Radford 82, Morgan State 72

Game Two: Northern Colorado 78, Chicago State 77 (OT)

Third-Place Game: Chicago State 84, Morgan State 83

Championship Game: Radford 79, Northern Colorado 68

All-tournament team from RU: Daquan Smith and Kenyon Giles.

Opioids

environment Epigenetics refers to hereditary changes in gene expression that do not involve alterations to the DNA sequence. Epigenetic modifications alter the accessibility of DNA and play critical roles in regulating gene expression and shaping an individual's response to environmental stimuli.

Many of the genes that are thought to play a role in opioid addiction are involved in the endogenous opioid system, which is the body's internal system for regulating pain, reward, and addictive behaviors. It consists of opioid substances produced naturally within the body, called endogenous opioids, and their receptors, into which opioids fit like keys into locks.

Opioids introduced from outside the body, called exogenous opioids, including opioid medications and heroin, also act on these receptors. Variations in the genes that provide instructions for making opioid receptors have been studied extensively as genetic risk factors for opioid addiction. Researchers hypothesize that differences in the receptors' structure and function influence how the body responds to opioids.

Using low-input epigenetic profiling techniques developed in Lu's lab, the team is better able to study gene-environment interactions in the brain. These techniques will allow them to examine epigenetic changes within limited quantities of brain tissue, making it feasible to explore the dynamics of specific brain regions and cell types involved in addiction.

Key insights gleaned by this approach include:

Identifying epigenetic biomarkers. These biomarkers may serve as diagnostic tools for assessing an individual's risk of addiction or as targets for therapeutic interventions.

Unraveling developmental trajectories. Epigenetic profiling can reveal how adolescent experiences environmental factors shape epigenetic patterns over time, offering insights into critical windows of vulnerability to opioid addiction.

Personalized medicine. Tailoring interventions based on an individual's epigenetic makeup may enhance treatment efficacy and reduce the risk of relapse.

Informing policy changes. A fundamental understanding of how opioid addiction works in the brain can inform policy and regulatory decisions.

"Opioid addiction is a complex and devastating public health crisis," said Lu. "Low-input epigenetic profiling is a powerful tool in unraveling the intricate gene-environment interactions that underlie addiction vulnerability and progression. By studying epigenetic dynamics within specific brain regions and cell types, we hope to identify biomarkers and shed light on when people — especially adolescents — are vulnerable to addiction, and why. Successfully doing so means opening the door to personalized treatment approaches and prevention strategies in the future."

"With the national average price of gasoline declining for the 10th straight week, motorists are enjoying the longest downward trend at the pump since the summer of 2022. The timing couldn't be better as Americans head into the holidays, leaving them with more in their wallets at a time of year many start to spend on gifts for loved ones," said Patrick De Haan, head of petroleum analysis at GasBuddy. "In addition, gasoline demand continues to be dragged lower as Americans stay inside more often, helping to put continued downward pressure on gasoline prices. However, we're carefully monitoring OPEC's delayed meeting, set to occur this week, for potential surprises that could eventually mean an end to lower gas prices should they make any surprise oil production cuts."
