RADFORD - The Radford High School Bobcats capped off a 15-0 season with the Class 2 Finals 39-21 win over Riverheads on Sat. Dec. 9.

The stands were packed with over 4,000 fans dressed in black and gold at Salem Municipal Field to watch Radford win its first state championship in more than 50 years.

Wednesday, many of those fans came down to West Main Street to cheer on their team once again in a parade to commemorate the state championship.

Lifelong Radford resident Gary Harris, commander of VFW Post 776, and his brother, Ken "Harry" Harris, have been watching the Bobcats play for 63 and 73 years respectively. They participated in the parade in Gary's car, adorned with the American flag and signs of support.

"Anytime you see your team win a championship it is great," said Gary. "My brother, Ken, saw all three. This was my first as I was in the military for the first two. It was a great season, and I did make up for all the lost good times."

Following the state championship, Radford Mayor David Horton released a statement of support.

"Radford is incredibly proud of our Bobcats," he said. "This state championship is the result of hard work and dedication and indicative of the values our community holds dear - perseverance, determination, ingenuity, and heart. Often this season it felt like a David vs Goliath scenario with our Bobcats as an underdog, but they never gave up and found a way to come out on top. We are so proud of all our students in Radford City Public Schools, their teachers, coaches, and mentors."

"After 51 years the return to this pinnacle of success is welcome," said Horton, "and is such a positive feeling throughout the city. Together as we support each other and strive to be our best, there is nothing we cannot accomplish."

Santa Claus, with the help of officers from the Radford City Police Department, is in hot pursuit of the Grinch on Tyler Avenue on Thursday afternoon. The Grinch led Santa and the police officers on a low-speed chase throughout the city, delighting children all around Radford. Officers also handed out candy canes along the way. The annual Santa's Police Cruise had to be postponed two weekends in a row due to bad weather, but was able to commence on Thursday, the first day of Winter Break for Radford City Public School students.

Glencoe Mansion decked out for the holidays

The museum shares a bit of history about Christmas traditions

RADFORD - Glencoe Mansion is looking festive these days, and the museum is also sharing some historical reference for the decorating people do at Christmastime.

Glencoe took to social media about the origins of Christmas trees, garlands and the like:

"There are a lot of traditions observed around Christmas and the winter holiday season, but where do many of these practices come from?"

Today we look at the history of garland and wreaths. The tradition

Beta Sigma Phi supports the Agape Center of NRV for the holidays

The local Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority has made a holiday donation to the Agape Center of NRV, and also remembers a former small business owner who assisted the Chapter in fundraising for its community service efforts.

“Members of Alpha Mu Master Chapter collectively agreed to forgo Christmas gifts to one another and donate instead to The Agape Center NRV, who assists people in need throughout the NRV, including Montgomery County and the City of Radford,” said Carolyn K. Sowers, Public Relations Chair of the Beta Sigma Phi Chapter.

Chapter members wanted to honor the memory of Louise Via of Floyd, a Stanley products salesperson who for many years collaborated with the chapter for a major fundraising Stanley Products Sale event.

“Mrs. Via took a lot of pride and effort in planning the party, conducting an on-site party event with the chapter, realizing proceeds would assist many community needs,” said Sowers. “The funds that the chapter raises through these events is what allows such community service donations to be possible. The Chapter wanted the Via family to know just how much Mrs. Via’s assistance and support meant to the entire chapter and affected many in the community. A portion of the chapter donation was earmarked in her honor.”

Cambria Baptist Church returns to historical building for Christmas Eve, candlelight services

Lori Graham
Contributing writer

CHRISTIANSBURG - To say this is a homecoming of monumental and historical proportions would be an understatement for Cambria Baptist Church.

After over 100 years, Cambria Baptist Church will return to their place of origin at 100 West Main St. in what is now known as the Great Roads on Main.

On Dec. 24, Cambria Baptist Church welcomes the public to their services on Christmas Eve in the historical hall with an 11 a.m. service and a 5 p.m. traditional candlelight service. The candlelight service will begin with a devotional, then will follow with Christmas hymns, and will conclude with the congregation moving outdoors into the patio area for the candle lighting. Due to fire restrictions in the building, the candles must be lit outdoors; however, the courtyard provides a garden area that makes the setting perfect for a gathering.

Pastor Keith Crowgey will lead the congregation in prayer and song with a backdrop of cathedral ceilings and ornate stained-glass windows, says Kayla Zwald, Director of Family Ministries, as well as the Communications and Marketing for the Church.

“It has been over 100 years since we’ve held a service there,” Zwald said. “The church was planted in 1909.”

Great Roads Café recently closed, and the building is now up for sale with Long and Foster listing the commercial property at $2.5 million. There are three

Reminiscing about the Christmas orange

Evans "Buddy" King
Columnist

I was in the grocery store the other day doing a little Christmas stocking up. I spied an item that must be seasonal – a bag of spectacularly colored apples – reds and greens – and brilliant oranges. I wasn't used to seeing them packaged that way and I had to buy them. If nothing else it helps provide cover for the little white lies I tell my doctor and my health insurance carrier that "oh, yeah, sure, I always have fruits and vegetables around." Never know when they might ask for receipts.

It brought back a poignant Christmas memory. I don't remember how old I was, maybe eight, but I can still hear my father when I asked what he got for Christmas when he was a kid. He said, "an orange". I said, not intending to be funny, "an orange what?" An orange bicycle? An orange baseball glove? An orange wagon? He said "no, we just got oranges". Remembering that moment always fills me even more with love and warmth for my Dad – and anxious to tell the King family story.

In case I am losing readers at this point, there is one urgent take away here – learn about your families while you have the chance. It's easier to chronicle and preserve now – in my youth it was mainly an oral history and I did not do my part by being a good listener as well as I would have liked. Take the time.

Back to the King's of Christiansburg. My dad was the oldest of eight (there had been one more – another boy John – who died in early childhood in 1918 from the Spanish flu. The kids consisted of my dad (Evans), the twins Clyde and Cline, Elbert, Violet, Ruth, Pearl and Barbara. (No argument from me if you say they sure don't name them like they used to – Aunt Barbara, the youngest, got off easy (must have run out of cool names by then). My grandfather was Charlie and my grandmother was Virgie Mae (no comment please), Virgie Mae Sutphin.

The first several years of my dad's life were spent in a hollow near the Montgomery-Floyd County line. Huffville, a suburb of Pilot. I don't think they knew which county they were in. They were the classic southern family of that era – post-reconstruction, pre-depression – subsistence farmers. I was away at college before I learned that "damn" and "yankee" were separate words. My father said that they didn't even notice the Depression when it came along. They had lived it their whole lives.

When things got really rough grandfather Charlie would go to southern West Virginia and work in the mines – he was a mechanic and worked on the rail cars that hauled the coal out of the ground. He lived in coal camps and sent money back to his family. He worked underground some. Here is where the story gets a little more interesting. The King's are known as a loquacious lot – we talk. A lot. But apparently this trait wasn't from the King side. My dad said one time that he heard his father say "maybe 10 words in his whole life." Charlie King was just a simple, hard-working, God-fearing man who did the best he could to provide for a family that got away from him numbers-wise. The penchant for talk, and a thirst for learning, came from my grandmother. In the early part of the 20th century, she obtained a "normal school degree" – which, from what I understand, entitled her to teach school – and she was determined that her kids would get educations, like it or not. I think they did like it, judging from the results.

My grandmother's desire that her children be "properly schooled" led her to move the family into Christiansburg after my dad had finished the 8th grade – for the third time. His mother had been waiting for some of the younger members of the brood to catch up with him to justify the move. There had been no high school where they lived – just a bunch of King's and Epperly's and Huff's and Turner's, and an old one room school house. Altoona School I think it was called.

Christiansburg had about 1,000 residents when the Kings moved into town in the late 1920's, making a substantial bump in the population. I like to say that they were the poorest family in town, but small southern hamlets of that era were not exactly swimming with Carnegie's and Rockefeller's, so they were probably typical, just a few more mouths to feed than most.

They settled on Craig Street, not far from the stockyard, the "economic engine" of its day. My vague memories (Charlie and Virgie Mae died close together around the time I was in 1st grade) are of a chicken coop in the yard and a small pasture next door. Smack in the middle of town. They knocked the back wall out and built rooms on to extend the house as more Kings arrived (Charlie and Virgie Mae apparently spurning overtures from Planned Parenthood as farm families did). They never owned a car. My mother taught my dad to drive when he returned from World War II – when he was already principal of the high school. Grandfather Charlie worked at the mill and was a handyman in town, still going to the mines when circumstances required.

Virgie Mae's passion for education, and for a better life for her kids, was fulfilled many times over. All four sons graduated from college, my dad and the twins from Emory & Henry, Uncle Elbert from VPI. The girls, who my father said were all brighter than any of the boys, all finished high school and family legend (my dad) has it that each was valedictorian of her class. (The times being what they were, college was not in the cards for the girls.) The Kings of Craig Street had the largest number of graduates of Christiansburg High of any nuclear family ever, again per my father. Since families don't get that large anymore, I think this record will endure.

The kids all worked hard – in school and at home. They all had after school jobs. The boys played sports, Clyde and Cline being among the better football players in the area. Cline eventually coached the football team at CHS for a couple of years while my dad was principal. My dad worked in a grocery in high school in addition to playing football and baseball. In college he worked in the campus cafeteria and sold class rings to get by, at the height of the Great Depression. Later, three of the brothers were in three separate graduate schools in New York City at the same time – my dad at Columbia and Clyde and Cline at NYU and City College. Around that time, the fourth son, the youngest, Uncle Elbert, began a long and successful career as an engineer with Foster Wheeler, also in the City. Pretty remarkable for a family from hillbilly country. Most of the kids served in World War II. All were solid members of their communities.

Inevitably, each generation takes the past more for granted than the previous one. For goodness sake, it's the past. We assume that things are the way they are because of our own efforts and our own brilliance. How we got to where we are is irrelevant. We are born on third base and go through life thinking we hit triples. But every year at Christmas, when I see an orange, I count my blessings for the family that gave me the opportunities and the life I have been given.

Holiday season contributes to December being the top month for U.S. home fires

Many hallmarks of the holiday season, including Christmas trees, holiday decorations, and festive meals, present potential fire hazards that contribute to an annual increase in U.S. home fires. According to the National Fire Protection Association* (NFPA*), Christmas Day and Christmas Eve are among the leading days of the year for home fires.

"December is a leading month for home fires, which is largely due to the activities we engage in during the holiday season," said Lorraine Carli, NFPA vice president of Outreach and Advocacy. "Additionally, an increase in the use of heating equipment, driven by colder temperatures across most of the country, contributes to this heightened risk."

Fortunately, Carli notes, many winter fires can be averted with added awareness and planning. "By knowing where potential fire hazards exist and taking basic precautions to prevent them, people can enjoy a festive, fire-free holiday season," said Carli.

NFPA's winter holiday resources include tips and guidelines for helping reduce the risk of fires, while the association's latest statistics underscore the increased risk of fire during the holiday season and beyond:

Christmas trees

An annual average of 150 home fires involving

Christmas trees were reported by the US fire departments between 2017-2021.

Electrical distribution or lighting equipment, such as decorative lights, were involved in more than two of five (44 percent) home Christmas tree fires.

Nearly one in five Christmas tree fires (19 percent) were started by decorative lights. Eight percent were started by candles.

As Christmas trees dry out, they become more flammable. Thirty percent of Christmas Tree fires occur in January.

Decorations

An estimated average of 790 home fires began when decorations (excluding Christmas trees) caught fire. These fires caused an annual average of 4 civilian fire deaths, 33 civilian fire injuries, and $14 million in direct property damage between 2017-2021.

17 percent of home decoration fires occurred in December.

In 48 percent of fires involving decorations, the decoration was too close to a heat source such as candles or operating equipment.

Candles

An estimated average of 5,700 home fires (2 percent) started by candles caused an average of 80 civilian deaths (3 percent), 560 civilian injuries (5 percent), and $247 million (3 percent) in direct property damage per year between 2017 and 2021.

Year-round, 33 percent of fires began with candles; in December, the number jumped to 46 percent.

Christmas is the peak day for candle fires, at an average of 35 fires, roughly 2.5 times the daily average; Christmas Eve ranked second. New Year's Day is ranked third, with 30 fires per day.

In three of every five candle fires, the candle was too close to something that could catch fire.

Falling asleep without extinguishing the flame was a factor in 10 percent of home candle fires and 12 percent of the associated deaths.

Cooking

Cooking is the leading cause of reported home fires (49 percent) and home fire injuries and the second leading cause of home fire deaths.

Unattended cooking is the leading cause of home cooking fires.

Thanksgiving is the peak day for home cooking fires, followed by Christmas Day and Christmas Eve.

In addition, home fires caused by heating equipment peak during the winter months, with nearly half (49 percent) of home heating fires occurring in December, January, and February. Put a Freeze on Winter Fires, an annual NFPA campaign with the U.S. Fire Administration (USFA), works to educate the public about ways to stay safe during the colder months, offering tip sheets and other resources to help reduce the risk of heating fires and other winter hazards.

of decorating with these elements are as old as Christmas trees. When all trees were still real, it was necessary to trim them down to fit the room they were in. Due to this, there were extra branches that could be used to make decorations.

Evergreen branches also had a lot of symbolism in them. Green was often seen as a color for good luck as it promoted abundance. This combined with the resiliency of evergreens to keep their foliage year-round, became a staple of hope for the coming spring during the harsh winter months. Due to all of these reasons the tradition of hanging garland and wreaths became synonymous with our modern winter festival, Christmas.

Let's look at the history of Christmas Trees. While the origin of the Christmas tree is disputed, the first recorded example was decorated in 1604. The Christmas tree came to America with waves of German immigrants and was recognized in 1856 when Franklin Pierce decorated one at the White House. They were originally decorated with fruits, cookies, and candles, which evolved into the bulb ornaments, novelty ornaments, and strung lights that we know today.

OBITUARIES

Cooper, Richard Ferguson

Richard "Rick" Ferguson Cooper, he was THE ONE that she had waited for "a sign" of, and together they enjoyed 45 years of amazing love, abundant laughter, casual construction and renovation projects, horseback riding, and farming of a hay field.

born Dec. 17, 1953 stepped into heaven during his sleep on Tuesday, Dec. 19, 2023 at the age of 70 in his home in Blacksburg. Rick moved to Blacksburg from his home in northern Virginia to attend Virginia Tech. He fell in love with the scenic mountain landscape, adventurous spelunking (exploration of underground caves) opportunities and its community members, and small town life around Virginia Tech and remained employed in the Electrical Engineering department at Virginia Tech until his retirement, loving every minute of it, even the difficult parts. He taught Electrical Engineering labs, sharing his passion and expertise with students and anyone interested; he lived and breathed the Hokie motto of Ut Protism (that I may serve).

He married Debora "Debbie" Massa Cooper on March 18, 1978 after proposing while wearing a cute, red, bow collar to jokingly prove to her that is survived by his wife, Debbie, his daughter, Amanda Christine Cooper, his brother, Michael Cooper, his sister Stephanie Cooper, and many wonderful nieces and nephews.

The memorial will be held on Friday, Dec. 29, 2023 at Dwelling Place Christian Fellowship located at 3325 N Franklin St, Christiansburg, VA 24073 with visitation at 2 p.m. and a service at 4 p.m.

WORSHIP DIRECTORY

ONLY ONE WAY

"I am the way, the truth and the life.
No one comes to the Father except through Me." John 14:6

In our culture, almost anything goes. The overwhelming idea is: whatever works for you. It's okay to believe in God, but it's not acceptable to suggest there is only one way to know Him.

The problem is that if you believe in Christ, you must also believe His words. He did not say, "I am a way." He said, "I am THE way." Think about it. If anything would work, why suffer? If anything else could save us, why would God send His son?

Read Isaiah 43:10-11. First, understand that God does want us to know Him. It's why He sent His son in the first place. Second, recognize that there is only one Savior and put your trust in Him. Perhaps you have long since accepted that only Christ can save you, but have you really accepted that only He can save somebody else? Knowing how much others need Christ motivates us to tell them about Him. After all, "how, then, can they call on the one they have not believed in? And how can they believe in the one of whom they have not heard?" (Romans 10:14) Tell someone about the Savior today!

Worship: Today, thank God for sending the Savior. Pray for those who do not know Him, those who live and work right around you as well as those in foreign lands. Read Romans 10:14-15. Pray that God will send His people to preach good news and ask Him to give you opportunities today to share His love with someone.

Record $80 million grant to fund pilot program encouraging the implementation of climate-smart practices on farms

Virginia Tech received a record $80 million grant to help farmers implement climate-smart practices that could significantly reduce greenhouse gasses.

With the Alliance to Advance Climate-Smart Agriculture, which is now underway, the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences will distribute more than $57 million of the largest grant in the university's history to producers to enact climate-friendly practices and serve as a pilot program for a national model.

The $80 million grant from the United States Department of Agriculture will pilot a program that pays producers to implement climate-smart practices on farms of all sizes and commodities, an initiative that could have significant impacts on curbing climate-changing gasses.

A three-year pilot program will be created in Virginia, Arkansas, Minnesota, and North Dakota that will test the feasibility of rolling out a similar program on a national scale. If scaled up nationally, the program could help producers reduce agricultural emissions by 55 percent and total emissions in the United States by 8 percent after 10 years.

"We are proud to lead this effort that gives agricultural producers incentives to enact climate-smart practices and the financial means to do so," said Tom Thompson, principal investigator on the project, associate dean of the college, and director of CALS Global. "This is a watershed program that helps the agricultural industry be a leader in addressing climate change."

According to Thompson, the credit for the pilot concept belongs to RIPE (Rural Investment to Protect our Environment). Virginia Tech leads the Alliance to Advance Climate-Smart Agriculture.

The pilot program will pay producers $100 per acre or animal unit for voluntary adoption of climate-smart practices that deliver more than that amount in public environmental benefits. Unlike previous cost-sharing programs that shared some of the financial burdens of adopting climate-smart practices on producers, this program pays producers more than the cost of implementation of these practices while also improving their bottom lines. More than 20 state and national organizations will help to implement the Alliance to Advance Climate-Smart Agriculture. Producers interested in learning more information can visit the Alliance's website.

The Alliance to Advance Climate-Smart Agriculture will reach an estimated 4,500 agricultural operations representing up to 500,000 acres in the initial four states. If scaled up nationally, as much as 80 percent of agricultural producers could be enrolled in the program, which would make a significant impact on global carbon emissions. Only about 3 percent of producers currently participate in carbon reduction programs.

In tandem with tackling the issue of climate change, the project also targets boosting agricultural productivity in order to help feed a growing global population that is expected to reach 9.7 billion by 2050.

Producers will be able to market their climate-smart commodities to the American public through certificates with tracking numbers. Informed by feedback through a series of roundtables, the tracking system will include information needed by commodity purchasers to meet their sustainability goals.

The USDA "is delivering on our promise to build and expand these market opportunities for American agriculture and be global leaders in climate-smart agricultural production," Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack said in his announcement. "This effort will increase the competitive advantage of U.S. agriculture both domestically and internationally, build wealth that stays in rural communities, and support a diverse range of producers and operation types."

Virginia Tech researchers will create a model that selects participants to ensure program diversity. At least 40 percent of participants will be underserved and small producers, reaching at least 1,900 operations. A minimum of 500 operations with socially disadvantaged or limited resource producers will participate in the pilot project.

The grant will provide $2 million to both Minnesota and Virginia to pilot the implementation of high-value and high-cost climate-smart practices in animal feeding operations. The pilot's near-term impacts will be an estimated greenhouse gas benefit of 300,000 metric tons of carbon dioxide equivalent and a total environmental value of $200 million. The national program would have a benefit-to-cost ratio of 5:1, reaping a total environmental benefit of $415 billion (working under the assumption that multiple climate-smart practices are implemented on the same cropland acres and animal units after ten years of the program).

The program will rely heavily on research and programs at Virginia Tech, including the Global Agricultural Productivity (GAP) Report and insights from experts in the Department of Agricultural and Applied Economics, the School of Animal Sciences, and the Eastern Shore Agricultural Research and Extension Center.

There will be rigorous monitoring during the three-year pilot program to ensure the transaction costs associated with implementing the climate-smart initiatives are minimized and that there are few barriers for producers who enact such initiatives in their operations. Virginia Tech researchers will track the greenhouse gas savings of the initiative as they are implemented, quantify the benefits of other environmental impacts such as reduced soil erosion, and examine consumers' willingness to pay for products with climate-smart labels.

"This is an extraordinarily exciting time to be involved in agriculture," Thompson said. "Farmers have always been the great stewards of our land, and American agriculture has always been a productivity powerhouse. This pilot program will help them continue to do so for generations to come."

MCEAP food pantry receives huge food donation from Christiansburg Fire Department

Food distribution to people in need at Moose Lodge today, Sat. Dec. 23

Lori Graham
Contributing writer

CHRISTIANSBURG - The Montgomery County Emergency Assistance Program's (MCEAP) food pantry received a large donation due to the over 2,211 collected food items delivered by the Christiansburg Fire Department.

According to MCEAP's Facebook page, Santa and the Christiansburg Fire Department delivered 700 food items on the first day, 331 on the second day, 665 on the third day, and 515 on the fourth day to MCEAP's Food Pantry.

The MCEAP is located on 760 Roanoke Street in Christiansburg and is a 100%-volunteer operated program. According to their website at www.mceap.com, their operations are supported entirely by donations and profits made from the store. The store provides food, clothing, household items, and assistance to the community that other assistance programs might not be able to meet.

Additionally, on December 23, Montgomery County Moose Lodge #1470 will be holding a food pickup from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. One box of holiday and canned food supplies will be available for pickup for families that need a little extra assistance this holiday season. Boxes of food will be given out while their supplies last. Food distribution will not begin before 11 a.m., according to MCEAP's website, but interested parties should arrive early to secure their spot in line.

The Moose Lodge asks that those individuals or families wishing to pickup a box of food pull in front of the building at 1637 North Franklin St. where a volunteer will assist in loading the food items.

RADFORD SPORTS

Cromer leaves Christiansburg for Floyd Co.

Marty Gordon

NRVsports@mainstreetnewspapers.com

Tim Cromer has always loved to coach high school football.

In 2017, he stepped down after 15 years of coaching to become the athletic director at Christiansburg High School. Tuesday, he was named the head coach at Floyd County High School, replacing long-time legend coach Winfrey Beale. Cromer is only the second head coach at the school in the past 43 years.

Cromer, who is a native of Christiansburg and who graduated from CHS in 1987, started his teaching and coaching career in Citrus High School in Inverness, Fla. to be followed by stints at Radford and Christiansburg High School.

He has coaching experience in football, indoor and outdoor track, girls' basketball, baseball, golf and weightlifting, which the latter he will carry into his other new task at Floyd as a physical education teacher.

Of course, his main focus in those 30 years of experience has been coaching football, with 20 as a head coach. During his coaching tenure, Cromer has garnered multiple honors including leading Christiansburg to the 2011 Double-A state championship.

He has served as Christiansburg's current athletic director during a changing time at the school including the opening of a new turf field and track. In addition, the school has added a new softball complex and is undergoing the next phase of its athletic facilities that will include the addition of a new annex gymnasium.

Cromer led a multiple of Region Championships in 2009, 2010, and 2011, and also attained Region Runner-Up titles in 2004, 2006, and 2012. Christiansburg's consistent presence in the VHSL Playoffs from 2003 to 2014, allowed him to finish with an overall record of 98-75 and a playoff record of 13-10.

Floyd officials said Cromer's commitment to fostering a positive and inclusive team culture aligns seamlessly with the values of Floyd County.

"We are confident that under his leadership, the FCHS football program will continue to thrive and exemplify the excellence that our community has come to expect."

"As we welcome Coach Cromer to our Floyd family, we are excited about the energy and expertise he brings to our football program," said Barry Hollandsworth, Principal of Floyd County High School. "His dedication to developing both athletic skills and character aligns perfectly with our commitment to providing a well-rounded education for our student-athletes."

Cromer expressed his enthusiasm for joining the Floyd community.

"While talking with the Floyd County administration, it became very apparent that this is a great fit," he said. "We will continue the FCHS tradition of playing competitive football the right way, while building men of character. I am so thankful to God and grateful for the opportunity to serve the Floyd County community in this capacity. Teamwork makes the dream work."

Cromer replaces a legend, so to speak, in Beale who stepped down following the conclusion of the 2023 season. He stepped down after 43 years as the head coach at Floyd. Beale was hired in 1981 and hung up his whistle with 245 wins, taking the Buffaloes to the state title game three times: 1999, 2001, and 2008.

Letter to sports, no fun for bowl season

Marty Gordon

NRVsports@mainstreetnewspapers.com

Bowl season is upon us, but it doesn't matter. "Going Bowling" just does not mean the same thing it did 10 years ago.

Let's set this straight in a letter to sports.

Dear Sports or the NCAA or the College Football Committee or collegiate athletic directors (and whoever that had a hand in taking down this time of year),

We used to love this time of the year. It was fun to see where the Hokies or our favorite college football team would be playing in December and early January. But you have taken all of the fun out of it.

Maybe this isn't all your fault, but you sure had a hand in it.

I can step back to a time when people wanted to watch the Sugar Bowl or even the Cotton Bowl. Then it all changed. I think you let it start with sponsors and the tons of money that was poured into the games.

Thus, the Rolo Chocolate Mayonnaise Bowl (doesn't exist, but it sure seems like it could be) was created.

Do you really know how many Division I football teams currently play?

There are 133 schools in the Division I Football Bowl Subdivision (FBS) of the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) in the United States.

Do you know how many bowl games there are as of this year?

There are 43 games on the 2023-24 bowl schedule, culminating with the CFP National Championship Jan. 8 at NRG Stadium in Houston. Thus, 86 teams play in a bowl game.

This leaves us scratching our heads that 57 teams are left out in the cold.

Of course, to make a bowl game, those schools must win six games. That didn't happen, did it. There will be several bowl games with teams who have a .500 record.

I know it has come down to money just look at the recent media conversation. Bowl games will pay out somewhere around $375 million to conferences in exchange for their teams' participation in the 40 non-CFP matchups alone, a figure similar to last year's payout. CFP bowl games pay conferences $6 million for each participant, a number that will only grow in the future.

The NIL money has also led to this change and there are so many players are opting out of playing in bowl games.

So far, more than 150 players chose to enter the transfer portal rather than play in a bowl game and another 45 or so opted out simply to protect themselves from injury in their preparation for the NFL draft.

Why should fans care when those players don't seem to.

Pass me the bowl of chips and let's watch a Hallmark movie instead of this year's bowl games.

And finishing out my letter, thanks for making the college championship series even less interesting.

Thanks, from the typical college football fan. I think I will pass this year.

Bowl Snapshot: Returning to the Military Bowl

Virginia Tech football is only two weeks away from playing in its first bowl game with Brent Pry at the helm.

The Hokies are slated to play No. 23 Tulane on Wednesday, Dec. 27, in the Military Bowl presented by GoBowling.com.

Organized by the Military Bowl Foundation, the National Capital Region post-season bowl game benefits current and former service members.

Formally known as the EagleBank Bowl, the DC Bowl Committee signed Northrop Grumman as the bowl's new title sponsor in 2010, thus creating its current name, 'Military Bowl'.

The football program in Blacksburg has an illustrious history with bowl game attendance, with a 27-bowl-game streak that lasted from 1993 to 2019. The meeting with the Green Wave in Annapolis, Maryland, will be the team's latest bowl game showing since the Pinstripe Bowl in 2021.

Tech will make its third appearance in the Military Bowl and its first since 2018. The Hokies split their first two visits to the Military Bowl, both matchups against the Cincinnati Bearcats within a four-year span.

In its inaugural bowl game appearance on Dec. 27, 2014, Tech faced Cincinnati at Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium in front of 34,000+ fans. In a 33-17 victory over the Bearcats, running back J.C. Coleman rushed for 157 yards and a touchdown, while kicker Joey Slye connected on all four of his field goal attempts.

Tech's defense forced three turnovers, with two interceptions by defensive backs Chuck Clark and Kendall Fuller and a fumble return touchdown by Greg Stroman that essentially sealed the victory.

our years later, the two programs met once again, and Hokie Nation found themselves watching a back-and-forth affair. Tech scored first on a 21-yard pass from quarterback Ryan Willis to wide receiver Eric Kumah. The teams would continue exchanging touchdown blows with a 14-14 score going into halftime.

The Hokies opened the third quarter with a 28-yard field goal by kicker Brian Johnson and responded to the Bearcats' 40-yard touchdown run with a 14-play 72-yard scoring drive to take a 24-21 lead.

Following Cincinnati's 75-yard touchdown drive to open the fourth quarter, Tech would rebuttable once more with a five-yard rushing touchdown by Willis for his third score accounted for on the day.

After a nine-minute stalemate, the Bearcats scored six more points with 1:29 left on the clock. The Hokies were unable to answer Cincy's touchdown once more on their final offensive possession, falling short 35-31 in a competitive outing.

Five years later, another six-win Tech team will face another 11-2 program in Tulane. Kickoff is set for 2 p.m. ET at Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium.

Virginia Tech athletics announced its allotment of Bowl tickets is sold out. Fans still interested in attending the bowl game are encouraged to visit SeatGeek, the official secondary market of Tech athletics.

Steele mentions eight Virginia Tech Hokies

College football analyst Phil Steele has named his All-ACC teams and All-Americans from the recently completed season, which include several Hokies.

Antwaun Powell-Ryland made the second team All-ACC defense, while Bhayshul Tuten was on the second team as a kick returner and Tucker Holloway as a punt returner. Dorian Strong was selected for the fourth team defense. Kaden Moore and Parker Clements made Steele's fourth team all-conference squad on the offensive line, while kicker John Love and punter Peter Moore were fourth team specialists.

In addition, Tuten was recognized as a fourth team All-American kick returner, while Powell-Ryland garnered an honorable mention.

Tuten is one of two Power Five kick returners who co-lead the nation in touchdowns and one of five players overall in the FBS ranks. The North Carolina A&T transfer was selected to the 2023 All-ACC Second Team as an all-purpose back, ranking third nationally in average kick return yardage (30.6).

Among Tuten's 16 kick returns this season, eight have qualified as explosive plays totaling 20 yards or more, including returns of 99, 94, 50 and 35 yards. The Paulsboro, New Jersey native registered 489 return yards on the season.

Powell-Ryland led the Hokies with 9.5 sacks and 13.5 tackles for loss. He recorded 39 tackles on the season, forcing three fumbles and recovering two. APR also tallied seven quarterback hurries.

Holloway was eighth in the country in average yards per punt return (13.6) and ranked first in the ACC.

Strong allowed completions on just nine of the 32 passes (28%) thrown his way for 83 yards. He intercepted three passes and broke up seven more.

Moore played 791 snaps, including 412 pass-blocking snaps, while allowing just one sack this season. Clements registered 764 snaps, including 405 pass-blocking snaps, allowing just three sacks.

Love had a breakout season as a redshirt freshman, connecting on 20 of his 22 field goals, including a career-long 47 yards against Virginia. He also made all 39 of his PATs.

Moore punted 58 times this season for 2,508 yards, an average of 43.2 yards per punt. Eighteen punts were for 50 yards or more, and 16 were downed inside the 20-yard line.
