Moog, Inc. to close Radford facility

Heather Bell
hbell@mainstreetnewspapers.com

Radford city officials have received word that Moog, Inc. is closing its Radford facility. According to Radford Mayor David Horton, the city was informed late Wednesday the West Rock Road facility will be closing its doors. "We received word late today that Moog, Inc. will close its Radford facility located on West Rock Road," said Horton. "We were told very little, but evidently employees were told today." "First and foremost, to the families and employees impacted - you have our greatest sympathy and I understand that workforce and transition support from the region and the state will be available to work with the affected personnel," Horton said. "Second, we really don't have all the information yet and how it will impact more things in Radford. Moog is an international company producing motion control products for many sectors of the economy and we hate to lose them in our community. We received a Work Adjustment and Retaining Notification Act message known as a WARN notice, from the company as required. This is the first WARN notice we have received since the foundry closed in 2013." "Monday, we have our regular city council meeting with a work session held jointly with the Economic Development Authority at 6:15 p.m.," he continued. "We continue to work for both today and tomorrow in Radford and are dedicated to seeking more economic development and growth. Hopefully we will have a new partner in this wonderful building very soon. We are fortunate to have an excellent economic development director in Kim Repass and a city council and administration dedicated to finding solutions for Radford."

Expert shares advice on the most effective strategies for tax season

Navigating tax season can be a source of stress for many individuals. Virginia Tech finance expert Jesse Lineberry shares ways to stay ahead on tax season to avoid being overwhelmed as the April 15 deadline approaches. Get organized early. "With so many details to account for it's essential to retrieve all information from previous employers and bankers," said Lineberry. He suggests creating a checklist of items you anticipate receiving and cross-checking those with last year's documentation. Don't overlook major life changes. "It's easy to forget that purchasing a home, getting married, sending a child to college or private school, retiring, or changing employers could have a significant impact on your tax bill. If you rolled an old retirement plan, such as a 401(k) or 403(b), into an IRA, this will need to be reported as well," Lineberry said. Don't miss out on credits. "Tax credits are especially attractive because they result in a dollar-for-dollar reduction in income tax owed. In general, they are more powerful than "deductions" and can make a significant impact on your tax bill," he said. "Common credits include the Child Tax Credit, Child & Dependent Care Credit, American Opportunity Credit, and Lifetime Learning Credit." Save for later. "Tax season represents a great opportunity to re-evaluate how much you are saving for retirement," said Lineberry. "If your tax bill was higher than anticipated, consider increasing the amount you're deferring into your employer-sponsored retirement plan or Traditional IRA (if eligible). Traditional IRAs, most employer-sponsored retirement plans, Health Savings Accounts, and Flexible Savings Accounts, allow you to make tax-deductible contributions, which reduce your taxable income." Ask for help. "A good CPA or Enrolled Agent can save you time and oftentimes, money while reducing the stress we often associate with preparing our taxes. This can help to reduce the stress often associated with preparing for taxes," said Lineberry.

Teaching history of Black music is integral to education, professor says

Cat Foster believes that teaching students to appreciate the history of Black music is integral to education. That's exactly what she is doing at Virginia Tech, through her role as assistant professor of practice of music education in the School of Education.

Black History Month "is a time where we can identify what makes the Black culture special," Foster said. "However, I feel like it's something that should be celebrated year round, and I think when we get into the habit of only celebrating something during a specific month, we're in danger of not giving that culture the respect and the honor that it needs."

Foster's first higher education job was at Fayetteville State University, the oldest public historically Black college or university in North Carolina. This experience informed her areas of research interest and her approach to teaching overall.

"I was able to build deep, meaningful relationships with my students even though there were many barriers that separated us," Foster said. "This was very different from my previous experiences in teaching, but I am appreciative that they trusted me and wanted to share their personal stories with me."

These connections and disclosures often came from Foster checking in on students when they had missing work, which has made that practice even more important to her.

"My research really centered more around this faculty experience and giving more grace as a faculty member, because you don't know what's going on and students are not always going to share all of this information," Foster said. "There were things that my students shared with me that I, as a white person with white privilege, I cannot relate to."

Her research and personal experiences led her to think about what she could do to help make the field of music education more diverse and to better represent different cultures in the classroom.

"If you look at the stats, we're overwhelmingly white and female, and so what can we do as teacher educators and white pre-service teachers? What can we do to expand our recruiting efforts and really train more teachers who look like the students who will be sitting in front of them?"

The importance of teaching the history of Black music

Foster said making sure people of color are part of how we discuss music both historically and in the modern day are essential to capturing the whole

"You can't tell me that things weren't happening on other continents besides Western Europe during, say the 1600s or 1700s," she said. "For example, there was a Afro-Brazilian composer at the same time as Beethoven — Jose Mauricio Nunes Garcia — but he was living in Rio de Janeiro, and he had no knowledge of Beethoven but their music was crazy similar."

Foster also is making an effort to discuss how Black people are influential in contemporary music. She launched the class Culturally Responsive Teaching last fall, which focused on teaching in a way that includes and respects the cultures of everyone in the classroom. She invited Devin Walker, an expert in percussion, racism in children's music, and the go-go music genre, to give a day-long presentation to both graduate students and local teachers. Walker's stage name is Uncle Devin and he is a Washington, D.C.-based teaching artist who calls himself a "drumcussionist."

Foster also thinks a lot of teachers limit themselves unnecessarily in terms of the genres of Black music they teach, leaving out many groups of people.

"We don't have to just talk about jazz. We can talk about jazz and we can talk about jazz musicians who are Black, but we can also talk about rappers and it's OK," Foster said, "It's OK to talk about hip-hop, and it's OK to talk about the roots of rock 'n' roll and the Black artists who really paved the way in some of these genres that we love so much."

When asked what she says to teachers interested in creating a more diverse music curriculum for their students, Foster said, "I encourage people to find resources and not just hope that it lands in your lap or that someone hands it to you. If this is something that you're really curious about or you want to make sure that there's representation in your classroom, you're going to have to do the legwork and you're going to have to go find the resources and find the information."

has been developed to offset this potential issue. The assortment of clothing is large with a variety of options for all. We have volunteers to help with the process of selecting just the right outfit. Other volunteers help with grooming tips when available. In addition, we’ve made sure that price will not be an issue, nobody will leave empty handed.

The boutique provides teens on a budget their fairytale prom by providing new and gently used formal wear, shoes and accessories for young men and young ladies.

“Finding a need and filling it, that’s what the YMCA at Virginia Tech does,” said Ron Ovelgoenner, YMCA Director of Thrift Shop Operations.

Prom and other formal occasions offer a special time in the life of a teenager. Everyone deserves the opportunity to attend if they wish yet it is also a very expensive event. It is especially so when one considers the cost of purchasing clothing, accessories and grooming. We do not want to see anyone that would like to attend their prom prevented from it because of the lack of resources.

We are delighted to have support from volunteers from VCOM for the event this year. Please let us help make your Prom Dreams come true!! We invite all high school students shopping on a budget to come to the Y Thrift Shop, 1000, N. ### Christiansburg Police investigating social media threats CHRISTIANSBURG – The Town of Christiansburg Police Department is continuing to investigate a series of posts being shared around social media.

Christiansburg police are aware of community concerns regarding threats posted on social media in the last 24 hours. Detectives have been working diligently to determine the source of the posts and the matter remains under investigation. At this point it appears all of the posts being shared in our community, are the same posts that originated in Roanoke City. It seems that through social media, these posts are circulating through several communities.

Currently none of the social media posts known to law enforcement reference any specific Christiansburg schools or localities. To confirm, currently we have no known social media threats to Christiansburg schools. Our detectives continue to investigate this matter and, as a precautionary measure, we have increased our patrol presence at all Christiansburg schools. For that reason, seeing a police car, or even multiple cars at a school should not be a cause for concern.

James M. Bradley, Sr., 72, went to be with his Lord and Savior on Feb. 19, 2024.

friends until the end. In 2004 he married Denise Wessinger. Jim battled and beat colon cancer in 2011 – 2012. The toll it took on him made the harsh Maine winters difficult, and in 2014 he and Denise moved to Virginia. This move allowed him to be closer to his parents and four of his brothers and allowed him to be able to help care for his parents into their 90's.

Jim, as he was known to friends and family, was born on Dec. 9, 1951 in Lebanon, N.H. to Robert L. Bradley, Sr. and Beverly M. (Raymond) Bradley.

He was married to Sandra A. Hughes in 1969 and graduated from Southwick High School in Southwick, Mass. in 1970.

Jim was a talented carpenter and in 1978 he moved to Maine with his wife and two oldest children to build his homestead and a small gentleman's farm. Once in Maine, they had two more children. He worked at various sawmills, woolen mills and leather/textile mills throughout his life and in the latter years worked in carpentry/home construction. He enjoyed woodworking and we will all cherish the various gifts he created for us over the years. Family was everything to him and he loved us all unconditionally. He had a love for the outdoors, music and had the best sense of humor. He was always the life of the party. Once you met him, he was your friend for life.

Jim and Sandy divorced just before their 20th anniversary but remained good

He is survived by his wife, Denise Bradley, of Va., his first wife, Sandra Hughes, of Maine, his children, Tammy (and Christopher) Creswell, Adam (and Jessi) Bradley and Sarah Bradley, all of Maine, and David Wessinger and Melina Wessinger both of Va; 14 grandchildren, Alycia (and Andrew) Reed, Jeffrey Ludden, Jacob Bickford, Hannah Bradley, Rachel Creswell, Kaileigh Clowry, Joshua Creswell, Mason Pelletier, Jackson Bradley, Jayden Bradley, Brandy McRobbie, Samantha McRobbie, Leilani Corali and Alex Corali; and five great-grandchildren, Oakley Ludden, Brinley Ludden, Avery

"Roses are red, violets are blue, Valentine's is over, and gas prices are going anywhere but lower," said Patrick De Haan, head of petroleum analysis at GasBuddy. "With Valentine's Day now behind us, we have officially entered the time of year when gas prices traditionally start their spring fling, but we've already seen the streak of consecutive increases in the national average hit four weeks. While the early start could also mean an early end, we still have as many as eight weeks that gas prices typically increase, and anything can happen between now and then. One of the most critical elements to how much gas prices will climb is how quickly and effectively refiners can finish their pre-summer maintenance, start producing EPA-mandated summer gasoline and build up supply of it before Memorial Day."

Radford Mayor David Horton participates in the Polar Plunge

She and JS ran the Wayside Market in Fairlawn for many years. After the market closed Glenna went into banking where she rapidly grew from the switchboard to an assistant branch manager in Dublin. After Glenna retired from the bank, she became the administrative assistant at Fairlawn Presbyterian Church.

She was an active member of Fairlawn Presbyterian church for over 70 years and spent time volunteering at the Radford-Fairlawn Daily Bread, the Radford Clothing Bank, and Radford Community Hospital. Glenna's

Radford WORSHIP DIRECTORY

YOU ALONE

Read Numbers 18:1 through 19:22

Monte had given his son one job: Shovel the walk. Monte returned to see messy piles of snow haphazardly scattered about. The boy had convinced his younger sister—who could barely lift the shovel—to do it for him so he could play video games. Monte promptly unplugged the game and sent the boy out to finish the job.

Similarly, God gave Aaron and his sons enormous responsibility. He expected them—and them alone—to follow through.

“But only you and your sons may serve as priests in connection with everything at the altar and inside the curtain. I am giving you the service of the priesthood as a gift. Anyone else who comes near the sanctuary is to be put to death” (Numbers 18:7).

Has God placed a burden on your heart? Is He pointing you toward work that will expand His kingdom? You are uniquely gifted and in just the right place to effect divine change in this world. Don't wait for someone else to do the job the Lord has given you. He wants you, and you alone, to follow through.

Thought for Today: The work of the Kingdom changes our hearts as it changes our world.

Quicklook: Numbers 18:1-7 through life's challenges- especially the loss of her husband JS in 2020 and her beloved granddaughter Ashley just seven months ago. She found comfort in the promise of eternal life with her Creator and the joy in seeing those who have gone on before her.

Glenna will be deeply missed by her family, friends, and all who had the privilege of knowing her. Though she may no longer be with us in body, her spirit will live on in the memories and hearts of those she touched. Her family echoes the Buddhist Prayer "May the brilliance of Glenna's life continue into the future; May the garden of her life proliferate endlessly."

Glenna was preceded in death by her, husband Junior Summers Childress, father and mother Glen Willie Carrier and Lena Hamilton Carrier, and granddaughter Ashley Nichole Childress.

Survivors include her son and daughter-in-law, Stephen D. Childress (Linda); daughter and son-in-law, Glenda L. Childress (Dale Milton); and numerous other family members and friends. We would be remiss if we didn't also mention leaving behind her grand dogs Asha and Zelda who loved their mee-maw.

The family will receive friends 11 a.m.- 12 p.m. Monday, Feb. 26, 2024, at the Fairlawn Presbyterian Church in Fairlawn. Funeral services will begin at 12 p.m. with Rev. Allison Unroe officiating. Burial will follow in Highland Memory Gardens in Dublin.

In lieu of flowers the family suggests donations be made to the Women of the Church at Fairlawn Presbyterian Church in continuation of the community service Glenna held dearly. http://fairlawncp.org/presbyterian-women/The Childress family is in the care of Mullins Funeral Home & Crematory in Radford.

Attorney general launches new public awareness tools for 'One Pill Can Kill' campaign

"One Pill Can Kill" aims to reduce opioid deaths, educate Virginians on the dangers of fentanyl-laced drugs, and provide community resources

RICHMOND – Attorney General Jason Miyares launched a new website and advertising campaign for the public awareness initiative "One Pill Can Kill." The One Pill Can Kill campaign will include a website with resources for Virginians, statewide billboards expected to launch in February 2024, and cable, broadcast, and digital/social media efforts in March 2024. The campaign is expected to run through October 2024.

The initiative, modeled after the Drug Enforcement Administration's national campaign, was initially launched in 2022 as a series of Public Service Announcements aired statewide.

"The opioid epidemic has impacted every corner of the Commonwealth. It's through education, prevention, and accessible resources that Virginians can fight back against the threat opioids and fake prescription pills present to us and to our loved ones," said Attorney General Miyares. "One Pill Can Kill is the product of federal and state programs working together to combat the fentanyl and opioid crisis facing our country. It will encourage open, honest conversations amongst families to ensure the health, safety, and prosperity of all Virginians."

The One Pill Can Kill campaign will be disseminated alongside the It Only Takes One campaign, which focuses on the opioid crisis in Roanoke, Virginia, led by First Lady of Virginia Suzanne S. Youngkin, with the support of Attorney General Miyares.

Fake prescription pills containing lethal substances like fentanyl pose a significant threat to public health in Virginia. Officials from the Drug Enforcement Agency report a dramatic rise in the number of fake pills containing at least 2 mg of fentanyl, which is considered a potentially lethal dose. Criminal drug networks are flooding the Commonwealth with these pills, masquerading them as legitimate prescription drugs and deceiving the public.

Laboratory testing indicates seven out of every 10 pills seized by the DEA contain a lethal dose of fentanyl. In 2023, the DEA seized a record 74.5 million fentanyl pills, which exceeds 2022's total of 58 million pills.

In 2022, an estimated 1,967 people died from overdoses of fentanyl or other synthetic opioids in Virginia. Fentanyl, the synthetic opioid most commonly found in fake pills, is the primary driver in this alarming increase in poisoning deaths.

Community colleges in Southwest Virginia participate in historic economic impact studies

Community colleges in Southwest Virginia (SWVA) including Mountain Empire Community College, New River Community College, Southwest Virginia Community College, Virginia Highlands Community College, and Wytheville Community College participated, both collectively and individually, in studies to determine specifically how having community colleges in the southwestern part of the state contribute to the local and regional economic landscape. The results reveal that these community colleges play a vital role in the economic growth as each college in the region serves its respective communities by providing accessible, affordable education and workforce training.

The economic impact study prepared by Lightcast, a company that researches global labor markets, shows a positive correlation between the colleges and their communities' economies.

The study revealed that community colleges in SWVA contributed to the economy by adding $560.4 million in income to the Southwest Virginia economy, a value approximately equal to 5.4 percent of the region's total gross regional product (GRP), supporting 8,424 jobs, employing 1,501 full-time and part-time faculty and staff with a payroll totaling $61.6 million, and spending $59.7 million (including construction) on day-to-day expenses related to facilities, supplies, and professional services.

According to the study, "the activities of SWVA colleges and their students support one out of every 14 jobs in Southwest Virginia." "The findings of this recent study reaffirm the profound impact that community colleges have on our region. These institutions, both collectively and individually, serve as catalysts for economic growth and life transformation. By offering accessible and affordable education, providing essential workforce training, and facilitating job placement, community colleges play a pivotal role in strengthening our local and regional economy," said AJ Robinson, who is a Southwest Virginia representative on the Virginia Community College System Board of Directors.

The results of the study show that SWVA colleges influence both the lives of their students and the regional economy by enhancing the overall quality of life, making higher education and workforce training accessible and affordable, preparing students to meet the needs of employers, and giving those students the skills they need to secure higher paying jobs.

The Virginia Community College System (VCCS) also recently participated in an economic activity study to analyze the economic impact of community colleges in the Virginia communities that they serve. The study revealed that Virginia's community colleges had an estimated impact of $11.6 billion on the state's economy during the 2021-2022 academic year.

Since 2021-2022, enrollment continues to climb throughout the VCCS; therefore, the economic impact from the colleges' existence is growing and will continue to have a positive impact on the communities in which their students live.

Another Bruin will play at next level

Marty Gordon

The softball grape line from Blacksburg High School has picked up another commitment to play at the next level. Tuesday, Junior Aubrey Hudgins announced on social media she will play at East Tennessee State University.

Hudgins said it was important she love the school and the area where it was located.

"I ultimately chose ETSU because it felt like home when I stepped on campus- it's beautiful, and I love Johnson City. I could truly imagine myself being there for the next four years of my life, so I knew it was the perfect fit," she said.

At Blacksburg, Hudgins has started at second base for both her freshman and sophomore years. Last season, she helped lead the team to the River Ridge District title, while hitting .342 at the plate with a fielding percentage of .950. She was second team All-River Ridge.

East Tennessee State University (ETSU) is a public research university in Johnson City, Tenn., and as of 2017, it is the fourth largest university in the state with a current enrollment of 9,768 students.

ETSU collegiate athletic teams, nicknamed Buccaneers, compete in the NCAA Division I Southern Conference.

The softball team is 2-8 so far this season after finishing 17-27 last year.

Cheryl Milligan took over the ETSU program four years ago. She came to ETSU with 25 years of coaching experience, including 18 years as a head coach – most recently spending the last four years at Army.

Milligan began her coaching career at Tufts in 1998 where she was an assistant coach at her alma mater. She spent her first six seasons as an assistant coach before taking over as the head coach from 2004-18.

In her 15 years at the helm, Milligan led Tufts to an astonishing record of 490-148 (.768), including seven trips to the Division III NCAA Tournament, five appearances in the Women's College World Series and three NCAA Division III National Championships.

Milligan led the Jumbos to three straight national titles from 2013-15, becoming the first team in NCAA Division III history to win three consecutive championships.

Hudgins hopes to grow as a player in the collegiate setting, competing to the best of her abilities and to positively contribute to the future success of ETSU softball.

In college, Hudgins plans to major in Early Childhood Development.

Hokie women claiming top headlines

From the Sidelines

Virginia Tech's women's basketball team has garnered the label of "Queens of the Cassell" because of its success over the past few years.

The big change came last season with a trip to the NCAA Final Four. The expectations remain high and already the ladies are taking most of the headlines. Matter of fact, you might say they are grabbing all of the attention from the media.

While the men's team is stepping backwards, the women are taking steps that no one could really predict.

The Virginia Tech women's basketball team is ranked eighth in the latest AP Poll and coming off a sounding victory against Louisville with North Carolina coming to town.

The Hokies will be back home at Cassell Coliseum on Sunday, Feb. 25 for a 2 p.m. tip. That game can be seen on ACCN and will take the national stage with some special guests.

Ahead of Senior Day, ESPN announced College GameDay Covered by State Farm will broadcast live at Carilion Clinic Court at Cassell Coliseum on Sunday in advance of the game.

It marks the first time the iconic show will be ahead of a Hokie women's game, making Tech the first-ever ACC school to host College GameDay on the women's side, and just the second time ever in Cassell (Feb. 26, 2011; men's side).

The show, which will be its third of five women's basketball shows this season, will run an hour long starting at 11 a.m. ET that features Elle Duncan, Andraya Carter, Carolyn Peck, Holly Rowe and Chiney Ogwumike.

Throughout the season, State Farm has had a bus specifically follow the women's College GameDay show all season long, and has also implemented a 3-point Challenge, entailing a select student competing for the chance to win $19,000. The selected student must make four 3-pointers from various locations around the arc in under 19 seconds.

On the court, the game is sold out.

The individual also keeps coming with Tech center Elizabeth Kitley, earning this week's ACC Player of the Week honors. For the graduate student, it is her fifth time winning the award this season and third week in a row.

Kitley helped the Hokies to a pair of victories to push Tech's win streak to nine games last week. The two-time Player of the Year scored 34 points against Duke and 26 at No. 18 Louisville, while shooting 76% from the field for the week. She also recorded double-doubles in both games taking her season tally in that category to 19.

With the road victory over Louisville, Tech owns the only road victories at each of the other top for teams in the league including NC State and Syracuse. Tech has won nine straight in ACC play in the same season for the first time ever.

Meanwhile the men are still scratching their way out of the bottom of the ACC. After a victory over UVA this week, the male-version of the Hokies slid back in the middle of the pack. There is still hope as fans will remember they came from the seventh seed just two years ago to the win the tourney.

But for now, it is the women that is selling out the Cassell and getting the national attention. Congrats to Coach Kenny Brooks and his team.

Five-7 format confirmed for 12-Team Playoff

The College Football Playoff (CFP) Board of Managers today unanimously revised the qualifying criteria for the 12-team event to now include the five highest-ranked conference champions, plus the next seven highest-ranked teams as determined by the CFP Selection Committee.

"This is a very logical adjustment for the College Football Playoff based on the evolution of our conference structures since the board first adopted this new format in September 2022," said Dr. Mark Keenum, President of Mississippi State University and Chair of the CFP Board of Managers. "I know this change will also be well received by student-athletes, coaches and fans. We all will be pleased to see this new format come to life on the field this postseason."

This change modifies the original plan, which called for the bracket each year to include the six highest-ranked conference champions, plus the next six highest-ranked teams.

Under the 12-team playoff format that begins this fall, the four highest-ranked conference champions will be seeded one through four and each will receive a first-round bye, while teams seeded five through 12 will play each other in the first round on the home field of the higher-ranked team. (The team ranked #5 will host #12; team #6 will meet team #11; team #7 will play team #10; and team #8 will meet #9.) The quarterfinals and semifinals will be played in the New Year's Six bowl games, the national championship game will continue to be at a neutral site. No conference will qualify automatically and there will be no limit on the number of participants from a conference.

Members of the CFP board of managers include Neeli Bendapudi – Big Ten Conference (President, Penn State); Tim Caboni – Conference USA (President, Western Kentucky); Jim Clements – Atlantic Coast Conference (President, Clemson); Michael Fitts – American Athletic Conference (President, Tulane); Gordon Gee – Big 12 Conference (President, West Virginia); Jack Hawkins – Sun Belt Conference (President, Troy); Rev. John Jenkins – President, Notre Dame (Independent); Mark

Keenum (chair) – Southeastern Conference (President, Mississippi State); Kirk Schulz – Pacific-12 Conference (President, Washington State); Satish Tripathi – Mid-American Conference (President, Buffalo); and Keith Whitfield – Mountain West Conference (President, UNLV).

The College Football Playoff (CFP) is the event that crowns the national champion in college football. The CFP Selection Committee ranks the top 25 teams at the end of the season, and the 12 playoff participants consist of the five highest ranked conference champions, plus the next seven highest ranked teams. The four highest ranked conference champions will be seeded one through four and receive a first-round bye. The schools seeded five through eight will host those seeded nine through 12 in first-round games. The quarterfinals and semifinals rotate annually among six bowl games – the Goodyear Cotton Bowl Classic, Vrbo Fiesta Bowl, Capital One Orange Bowl, Chick-fil-A Peach Bowl, Rose Bowl Game presented by Prudential and the Allstate Sugar Bowl. This year's quarterfinals will take place on Dec. 31, 2024 and January 1, 2025, while the semifinals will be Jan. 9-10, 2025. The College Football Playoff National Championship will be Monday, Jan. 20, 2025, at Mercedes-Benz Stadium in Atlanta.

AARP Virginia fraud alert: A new take on an old scam

One of the oldest scams around involves a criminal getting hold of one of your checks and forging the payee and the amount. Usually this is done by "washing" the check with chemicals to remove the real information you have written on it. Today, with access to new technologies, criminals are "cooking" checks by creating fake versions of real checks using computer programs. These "cooked" checks can be manipulated digitally and either printed or deposited electronically, saving the crook a lot of mess and hassle.

The best way to protect against these scams is to be careful how you send checks. If you use your checkbook to pay bills via mail, how you send those bills is the key to staying safe. Rather than dropping the bills in your mailbox and flipping up the flag, take them to the post office and drop them off inside. A criminal can't wash or cook a check they don't physically have, so taking this extra step to safeguard your mail can protect your bank account in the long run.

Be a fraud fighter! If you can spot a scam, you can stop a scam.
