NRV offers several options for Independence Day festivities

RADFORD — America celebrates its independence tomorrow, Thursday, July 4, and there are several options for fun throughout the New River Valley.

From live music to festivals and, of course, fireworks displays, here are some of the options:

Blacksburg's Fourth of July parade, organized by the Mount Tabor Ruritan Club, "A Child's Fourth of July" parade starts at 2 p.m. on Eheart Street, runs through downtown on Main Street, and ends on Alumni Mall. The Town of Blacksburg will have music and fireworks at the Municipal Park, near the Rec. Center: Live music is 6 - 9:30 p.m. and fireworks at 9:30 p.m. (even if raining).

Christiansburg Fourth of July celebration includes a festival on Main Street from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. There will be live music performances by Lonesome Heart (10 a.m.), Solacousix (noon) and Isaac Hayden (2 p.m.) Food trucks and arts and crafts vendors will be along Main Street and a special kids' zone with Touch-A-Trucks will be available, too. Enjoy this free event with your family and friends all day, and at 9:15 p.m., go to the Uptown Mall or Walmart parking lots to watch the fireworks.

Radford's Spirit of America Celebration will be held at Bisset Park, 49 Berkley Williams Dr., Radford, 1 - 10 p.m. This is a free event. There will be a dog show, kids' zone, vendors and food trucks, live music, including Cat 5, Motown Revue and The Embers, and fireworks.

Shawsville Ruritan Club's 4th of July Parade will begin at 4 p.m. After the parade, there will be a concert with Big Daddy Ray and special guest Jerry Wimmer before the Independence Day fireworks show. There will also be a car show by E&E Automotive and a cornhole tournament by Shawsville Ruritan Club during the in-field concert festivities. The Shawsville Ruritan's will host the 4th of July Cornhole Tournament, sponsored by First Bank and Trust, on Old Town Fields at 6 p.m.

Fireworks displays will be offered by several New River Valley localities tomorrow, Thursday, July 4, including Shawsville, whose display is seen here.

How to crush your summer reading goals

Summer reading lists. Poolside favorites. Best beach reads.

Reading often takes on a sunny spotlight during the summer months. School is out and some work and personal schedules may lend themselves to sitting down with a good book. So, what's the best way to tackle those reading lists?

First, remember that reading is like exercising a muscle, said Jared Gibbs, senior instructor and assistant chair of the English Department at Virginia Tech. It may take time to build a reading habit.

"If you are out of the habit of reading, don't start with 'Moby Dick,'" Gibbs said. "Instead, choose books that keep you reading. Don't worry about reading the right type of book, just read what interests you, what keeps you coming back. And if you just can't get into a book, put it down and find a new one. There's no shame in leaving a book unread."

Gibbs offers more tips for sticking to a summer reading routine.

Do summer reading lists motivate people to read more?

Summer book lists are one way to organize that reading, though one doesn't have to be organized about it at all. I like going to the public library and wandering the fiction stacks, stumbling upon authors I'd meant to read but forgotten about or seeing what jumps out at me from the new arrivals shelves. You don't always have to approach reading methodically.

What are your best tips for crushing summer reading goals?

Summer is the perfect time to tackle the books on your reading list.

I don't set a goal for a specific number of books to read. Instead, I keep track of the books I have read, noting the title, author, and what I thought about each one. I don't always have much to say about a book, but sometimes I do. When the summer is over, I can look back on the list of books I have read and feel a sense of accomplishment, no matter the number. If I start with a specific goal in mind — say, 15 books — that goal is likely to be too ambitious and it just sets me up for disappointment.

I also like looking back over a book list and seeing patterns, which helps me see more clearly

July Fourth celebrations coincide with troubling traffic safety statistics

RICHMOND—The first week of July is typically one of the busiest American travel periods of the year. It's also one of the deadliest.

Seven individuals lost their lives in Virginia traffic crashes during the two-day statistical counting period over last year's July Fourth holiday, according to data from the Virginia Department of Motor Vehicles Highway Safety Office.

Virginia State Police urge motorists to practice safe, sober and distraction-free driving to avoid becoming a statistic in 2024.

"We are in the height of the summer travel season, so traffic safety should be of the utmost importance for all Virginians," said Col. Gary T. Settle, state police superintendent. "Excessive speeding, drivers and passengers failing to buckle up, and distracted driving continue to put all at risk traveling on our highways. We need Virginians to put forth the extra effort and comply with speed limits, buckle up and put the phone down, and avoid distractions."

During 2023's holiday period, state police investigated 377 total traffic crashes statewide. Troopers cited 2,051 speeders and 980 reckless drivers. They also issued 254 citations to individuals for failing to buckle up, and another 74 citations for improperly secured children.

Virginia troopers cited 124 drivers for being in violation of Virginia's "hands-free" law that took effect in July 2021. To limit distractions, motorists are advised to program GPS and hands-free devices before departure.

"Pull over to a safe place when you are doing something that will take your eyes or mind off the road," said Virginia Farm Bureau Mutual Insurance Co. senior actuarial manager David Tenenbaum. He serves as treasurer for DRIVE SMART Virginia, a nonprofit partner charged with raising awareness and changing behavior to improve roadway safety.

"When free of distractions, a driver can be prepared for the unpredictability of other motorists who may be distracted themselves," he said.

Arranging sober transportation is another preventable action motorists can take to keep themselves and others safe during the celebratory weekend.

Troopers arrested 36 drivers for operating under the influence of alcohol or drugs during the July Fourth holiday period last year. DRIVE SMART reported that 4,400 people were injured and 293 were killed as the result of alcohol-related traffic crashes in Virginia during all of 2023.

"With just a few drinks you could be too impaired to safely drive," Tenenbaum noted. "So, designate before you celebrate! Plan to use a rideshare app or designate a sober driver before kicking off the holiday weekend."

Gas prices up slightly over last week

Average gasoline prices in Virginia have risen 0.8 cents per gallon in the last week, averaging $3.31/g today, according to GasBuddy's survey of 4,081 stations in Virginia. Prices in Virginia are 10.9 cents per gallon lower than a month ago and stand 0.7 cents per gallon higher than a year ago. The national average price of diesel has risen 1.4 cents in the last week and stands at $3.77 per gallon.

According to GasBuddy price reports, the cheapest station in Virginia was priced at $2.92/g yesterday while the most expensive was $3.99/g, a difference of $1.07/g. The lowest price in the state yesterday was $2.92/g while the highest was $3.99/g, a difference of $1.07/g.

The national average price of gasoline has risen 5.0 cents per gallon in the last week, averaging $3.46/g today. The national average is down 6.0 cents per gallon from a month ago and stands 5.4 cents per gallon lower than a year ago, according to GasBuddy data compiled from more than 11 million weekly price reports covering over 150,000 gas stations across the country.

Historical gasoline prices in Virginia and the national average going back ten years:

July 1, 2023: $3.31/g (U.S. Average: $3.52/g)
 July 1, 2022: $4.64/g (U.S. Average: $4.83/g)
 July 1, 2021: $2.94/g (U.S. Average: $3.12/g)
 July 1, 2020: $1.99/g (U.S. Average: $2.18/g)
 July 1, 2019: $2.48/g (U.S. Average: $2.72/g)
 July 1, 2018: $2.61/g (U.S. Average:

$2.84/g)
 July 1, 2017: $2.04/g (U.S. Average: $2.23/g)
 July 1, 2016: $2.10/g (U.S. Average: $2.27/g)
 July 1, 2015: $2.57/g (U.S. Average: $2.76/g)
 July 1, 2014: $3.48/g (U.S. Average: $3.67/g)

Neighboring areas and their current gas prices:

Roanoke- $3.23/g, up 0.9 cents per gallon from last week's $3.22/g.
 Richmond- $3.31/g, down 1.2 cents per gallon from last week's $3.32/g.
 West Virginia- $3.37/g, up 3.0 cents per gallon from last week's $3.34/g.

"As we approach July 4 later this week, motorists have seen the national average price of gasoline inch up ever so slightly for the third straight week," said Patrick De Haan, head of petroleum analysis at GasBuddy. "While the increases have been fairly tame, with oil continuing to hold above $80 per barrel, we could continue to see the national average climb slightly. Other areas that see price cycling saw prices shoot up early in the week, but those areas are now starting to see prices fall back down. For many Americans hitting the road for the July 4 holiday, prices in most areas are very comparable to what we saw last July 4. However, with Hurricane Beryl now formed in the Caribbean, we're reminded that gas prices could experience some jolts in the second half of the summer should a storm threaten refining capacity in Texas or Louisiana."

New traffic laws in effect as of July 1 DMV shares what you need to know

RICHMOND – Laws passed by the Virginia General Assembly set into motion changes for DMV customers effective July 1, 2024.

These changes and updates include the uninsured motor vehicle fee, permanent DMV-issued farm use placards, disabled parking placard duration and conversions of manufactured homes. Below are details on what is new and what customers need to do to prepare.

Uninsured Motor Vehicle Fee

Effective July 1, 2024, the option to pay a fee rather than maintain insurance coverage for your vehicle will be eliminated, and DMV will no longer collect the Uninsured Motor Vehicle (UMV) fee. All vehicles registered in Virginia will be required to obtain an insurance policy that meets Virginia's liability limits. If Virginia DMV cannot verify the insurance information provided with the insurer, customers should be prepared to show proof of insurance when requested by the Virginia DMV. If you previously paid the UMV fee, you will need to obtain an insurance policy that meets or exceeds Virginia's liability limits.

Farm Use Placards

Permanent DMV-issued farm placards are required for unregistered farm use panel trucks, pickup trucks and sport utility vehicles beginning July 1, 2024. This requirement is a result of legislation passed by the 2023 General Assembly. The DMV-issued placards replace, in most cases, the unofficial farm use tags typically purchased at a local store for use on these three types of unregistered farm vehicles. Placards cost $15 and are good for the lifetime of the vehicle but are not transferable. An additional $15 may be required if the owner does not already hold a title for the vehicle. Placard transactions are not available online. Please bring the completed application to your local vehicle-only DMV Select or make an appointment to come to your local full-service customer service center. Use this chart to determine which farm use plates or placards are right for your vehicle or for more details on placards for unregistered farm vehicles, please visit our website.

Disabled Parking Placards

As of July 1, 2024, there will not be a fee for disabled parking placards. Previously applicants paid a $5 fee for a disabled parking placard. In addition, temporary placards now have a validity period of up to 12 months, if a medical provider certifies the temporary placard will be needed that long. This is double the previous maximum of 6 months. To apply for a disabled parking placard or license plate, you must submit a completed Disabled Parking Plates or Placard Application by mail or return it to your local vehicle-only DMV Select.

Manufactured Home Conversion

Effective July 1, 2024, manufactured homeowners who are not listed on the title as the owner of the manufactured home will be able to submit a deed, court order or decree, or other legal document or record establishing that the manufactured home was transferred by the owner listed on the title to the current manufactured homeowner. If the owner listed on the title did not transfer ownership directly to the current owner, the current owner will need to provide records establishing a chain of successive ownership of the manufactured home. Owners will also need to submit documentation proving that any existing lien on the manufactured home has been released.

AARP Virginia fraud alert: Summertime door-to-door scams

Summer is officially here, which means door-to-door sales crews are too. But buyer beware because what they're selling isn't always legit.

These scams can show up in a variety of forms. Sometimes it's solar panels for your home at a can't-be-beaten price or it's a student selling magazine subscriptions to help fund their school program. Other times it's a construction worker who say they stopped by because they just happened to be working in the neighborhood. One thing they all have in common is pressure to sign up or pay upfront.

Any "deal" that you have to sign up for right away or that you have to pay for in advance is likely no deal at all. Your best bet is to proactively seek out the services you need. And consider making a deal with yourself to never do a deal with someone before you've had time to do your research.

Be a fraud fighter! If you can spot a scam, you can stop a scam.

Leveling up cybersecurity through AI games

Playing games is a universal human experience. Every country and culture plays games unique and ubiquitous to its people, from the ancient Chinese game Go to modern computer games such as SimCity.

But games are more than a human hobby. They're a training ground for artificial intelligence (AI) to learn fundamental decision-making skills, handle uncertainty, and tackle complex interactions. AI's ability to tirelessly explore thousands of possibilities makes it the perfect tool for finding strategies humans might overlook.

Angelos Stavrou, professor in the Bradley Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering and founder of mobile security startup A2 Labs, plans to take AI training to the next level with a multi-agent training exerciser (MATrEx). Through this "matrix," AI faces a new opponent — other AI — but the implications go beyond a fun game.

"What we want to do is take a network, like the Virginia Tech network, copy it into a virtual environment, and then run simulations of attacks and defenses with logic generated by AI agents," said Stavrou, who's also entrepreneurship lead for the Virginia Tech Innovation Campus. "AI can play billions of game variations so they can actually characterize the cybersecurity start of the system, and decide which attacks or defenses are superior."

Playing the game

In a world plagued by persistent and never-ending cyber threats, improving the security of computer networks by minimizing vulnerabilities is essential for protecting cell phones, the 5G wireless system, and the thousands of data centers in the United States. The process is called "network hardening." It's like adding strong locks to a home and reinforcing its walls.

MATrEx is a $16 million project funded by the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency as part of Cyber Agents for Testing and Learning Environments. It's a trailblazing way to train AI in a three-tiered gaming system — simulations, emulations, and a real network. Within the MATrEx, AI agents are grouped into two categories:

Red agents, that need to learn the gaming network and how best to break through system defenses for attacks

Blue agents that understand the network fully, including defense capabilities

The "games" are scenarios red and blue

As a professor in the Bradley Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering and faculty at the Innovation Campus, Angelos Stavrou is changing the face of cybersecurity with AI training games.

agents run against each other. Researchers will study what attacks break through, which defenses stop the attacks, what happens during a specific attack, and more.

"The idea is that we'll create a loop, so the AI can play in a network that will start from a real network, then emulate it and simulate it," said Stavrou. "The real system is accurate, but it's slow. The simulation is fast, but it's not as accurate. So you need to play the game across all these environments, transferring knowledge from the real network to the simulated. Then you transfer strategies from the simulated back to the real network."

The distinctive combination of real, simulated, and emulated networks sets MATrEx apart from any other AI training system in the world. Each network provides a training ground — and researcher data set — for the AI.

Real network: This is the physical computer or wireless network used by people every day. It has actual switches, routers, cables and devices that connect together to transmit data. In MATrEx, this is a copy of a company's real network, provided and hosted by the company themselves.

Emulated network: This "digital twin" of the real network is a collection of virtual machines that run the actual operating system from the real network, and also mirrors its network configuration.

Simulated network: Also called a "state machine," this network captures the behaviors of the computers within a network, without having to utilize the network's real operating system. Because of that, actions can run much faster than in real time.

As the AI agents run games through each of these networks, the agents

Recalling the July 4th celebrations of my youth

With Independence Day upon us tomorrow, I decided to reflect on the 4ths of my youth growing up in Christiansburg. I don't remember parades or speeches or community gatherings or fireworks displays, except in our backyard. Perhaps these events took place somewhere in Christiansburg or surrounds, but in my memory the 4th was quiet in the 1960's, exciting in small spurts, but more of a family day that mainly stood out to me because my dad didn't go to work. And this just didn't happen. Ever.

During this time, my dad was allotted two weeks of vacation as Superintendent of Schools. He usually took three days, at most four, depending on how long our trip to Myrtle Beach was. As I said in a recent column, my dad took his responsibilities seriously, particularly the functioning of the Montgomery County schools. I never remember him home during the week unless it was a holiday and even then he worked some of those. And he never left work early. On call, available to respond to emergencies, parents, teachers, bus drivers.

But he was always home on the 4th. The day for him sometimes included early golf with his pals but he was usually home by noon. Some years he might paint a room in the house during the morning if needed. The "big event" of the day involved an afternoon trip by my dad and me to the icehouse located next to Jabe Thomas' Gulf Station near the high school, where we would buy the biggest watermelon we could find. I have great memories of that trip because it provided time with my dad alone and a brief respite from the heat.

At that time most houses in Christiansburg, including ours, were not air-conditioned, and air-conditioned cars were unheard of. Only rich people up north had those. You used a hand crank to roll down your windows and let the "air" in. So going in this icehouse to look for the biggest watermelon we could find was needed relief from what was often the hottest day of the year.

We would eventually chill to the point that we were ready to pick out our prize and lug it to the car and drive home. We would then sit on the back porch and spit seeds into the yard, sometimes with my aunts and cousins around, sometimes just my parents and me. I wasn't even all that fond of watermelon but always looked forward to the tradition of the icehouse trip.

Another good memory of the day was of several of the fathers in our wonderful neighborhood sitting in the yard next door and drinking Old Milwaukee, listening to the NASCAR race on the radio. The Firecracker 400 from Daytona I recall. I can still hear the broadcast - "Is that lap 166 or 167 they just completed Bob?"

Evans "Buddy" King

Columnist

My father might go over for a visit, but he was neither a beer drinker nor a NASCAR fan, so his visit was usually short. I still have trouble imagining anything less enticing to me in the world of sports than NASCAR on the radio, unless it would be being forced to watch soccer in any fashion.

The evening was what my dad lived for on the 4th - for the sun to drop. It was a 4th of July Griswold moment for him. He would go to his special hiding spot and drag out the stash of Roman Candles and other firecrackers that we had bought the year before at Myrtle Beach (you couldn't buy them in Virginia). He was convinced that I loved the "display" he would put on. He thought that 4th of July fireworks were second only to Christmas morning in my life. He was wrong.

I have had two distinct periods of my life with fireworks. Those very early years, when I was terrified that my dad was going to blow himself (and perhaps my Mom and me as well) to smithereens, when I would close my eyes and pray for a happy ending, and then the rest of my life, indifference and even dread because of the terrifying effect on my pets. Not a big fan in other words. I hope my dad went to his grave without ever realizing what a wimp I was when it came to fireworks. Just never thought sticking a match to something containing gun powder that you were holding in your hand was a good idea.

There are a few highlights that stand out in my memories of those early 4ths though. One year cousin Bobby, a good athlete and an excellent diver, and then a lifeguard at Round Meadow Country Club, entered the diving competition at the Club. He completed a beautiful flip, came down sitting on the front of the board, and then completed his dive into the pool. But the judges awarded first prize to some five-year-old twit from Radford who did a cannonball. A cannonball! It was the height of unfairness, but if the kid had been from Christiansburg my family would have thought it was cute. I also remember a special 4th when the summer league baseball team I played on was scheduled for a double-header at a park in Radford as the featured event of a day-long celebration. We played in something called the Southwest League with teams in Christiansburg, Radford, Wytheville and other towns around the New River Valley. We were 15-17 years of age and competed against many of the same guys we were playing football against in the fall. Spirited contests in other words. Particularly between Christiansburg and Radford.

I think I was 15. I was our second baseman and NOT a good hitter but was a decent fielder and a great base runner. At least in my mind. About the third or fourth inning of the first game, I decided to try to score from second base when Radford tried an around the horn (third to second to first) double play. I made it into home safely, but, shamefully looking back, I had my Pete Rose/Ray Fosse moment (for non-baseball fans Pete blind-sided Ray at home plate in the All-Star game one year, effectively ruining Ray's career). The Radford catcher was waiting for the throw, blocking the plate (which you are no longer allowed to do), not looking up the baseline at all towards me. I confused my sports and decided to put my shoulder into him going full speed, not making either of us feel very good afterwards, but successfully removing him from the plate. The benches emptied, the players swore at each other, and the coaches exchanged snarls.

An inning or two later, one of our guys tried to reach third on a close play. Guys on that team with me will probably remember who our guy was. Suffice it to say that he had "anger issues." The Radford third baseman was applying the tag when our guy came up out of his slide with a solid punch to the third baseman's jaw. Again, the benches emptied, the players swore and the coaches exchanged snarls. And the coaches decided that nothing good would come from continuing the game or playing two or having the two teams in the same town. So, we loaded in our cars and headed home, ending by 2 p.m. the featured event of the day.

The Radford baseball game was the rarity of my 4ths as a youth growing up in C'burg in the 60's. It was a big-time event, a 4th of July double-header just like the major leaguers played back then. Unfortunately I played a pivotal role in ruining the day. I vaguely remember my dad not being happy about the fighting, but he did say I "took a good shot at the guy" and "he didn't have the ball and shouldn't have been blocking the plate".

But most of my 4th's back then were quiet, uneventful, boring.

Delegate supports risk-limiting audits of elections

One of the important roles Virginia's Department of Elections conducts - in concert with local registrars - is risk-limiting audits of election results. A risk-limiting audit involves the selection of a random number of random ballots from precincts all over Virginia, and comparing them with the reported result. The audit is not a full recount or manual verification of all ballots. It is a hand verification of ballots until there is strong statistical evidence that the reported outcome is the actual outcome. Even though Virginia conducted a risk limiting audit in the wake of the 2020 presidential election, General Assembly democrats have forced language into the state budget blocking such an audit from taking place after the 2024 election.

The supposed reason for the lack of a risk-limiting audit after this year's presidential election is that the potential for legal disputes over presidential electors could prevent Virginia's electoral votes from being counted. Federal law requires the courts to move as quickly as possible to adjudicate disputes over electors; nonetheless, missing the December 11 deadline for reporting Virginia's chosen electors could prevent Virginia's 13 electoral votes from being counted and reported to the Archivist of the United States. Regardless of the practicalities of timing, this budget language inserted by House Democrats does nothing to help instill a sense of trust in the electoral process. If they are serious about restoring this trust, democrats should work to expedite the audit process, not cut it out entirely.

Delegate Jason Ballard

Virginia General Assembly

Closer elections require the examination of more ballots - such that in some cases, it is simpler to conduct a full manual recount of the election. Generally, Virginia elections are among the best run in the nation. Also, fraud typically occurs in terms of single votes, not large numbers of election-swaying ballots, but it certainly can occur. Fortunately, we employ a system in which both partisan and unaffiliated observers are allowed access to polling locations to ensure elections are conducted in a fair manner. Nonetheless, trust and public confidence are the foundation of our system of governance. Republicans have been working continuously to restore that trust, and we will continue to do so.

As the delegate representing the 42nd House District in the Virginia General Assembly, your concerns are my greatest priority. If ever I may be of assistance to you and your family, please do not hesitate to reach out to me at DelJBallard@House.Virginia.Gov. Hagan nominated for ESPY award

Reigning NHRA Funny Car world champion Matt Hagan has been nominated for the 2024 ESPYS Best Driver Award for his stellar performance during a standout 2023 NHRA championship season.

Hagan picked up his fourth career title and the first-ever NHRA world championship for Tony Stewart Racing in his 11,000-horsepower TSR Direct Connection Dodge//SRT Hellcat.

This is the first time Hagan has been nominated for the illustrious Best Driver Award, as Hagan entered select Funny Car company in 2023 with his fourth world title. With the championship, Hagan joined legends John Force, Kenny Bernstein, and Don Prudhomme as the only Funny Car drivers in NHRA history with four or more world titles.

"I'm blown away to be nominated for the ESPYS,"

Hagan said. "It just goes to show what you can do when you're surrounded by a great group of guys who are motivated and work hard. It takes a small army to do what we do, and it does take everyone. It's a huge opportunity, but it's not just me, it's the entire team."

"It's a humbling sport, and it's a humbling car to drive, and this is a group that just works hard. We're thankful for all the fans who support us, and hopefully, they'll go out and vote for us, but at the end of the day, I'm just very honored to be nominated."

Voting is open until 5 p.m. ET Thursday, July 11, three hours before the ESPYS will air at 8 p.m. ET on ABC.

Hagan enjoyed an incredible 2023 season in the Funny Car ranks, picking up six victories and advancing to eight final rounds in the loaded category. He held the points lead for the bulk of the regular season and then got hot at a key time in the Countdown to the Championship, winning back-to-back playoff races in St. Louis and Dallas to take the points lead for good. Other highlights of his banner title season included victories in Gainesville, Pomona 1, and Denver, as well as qualifying No. 1 at Bandimere Speedway. This year, Hagan recorded another milestone, earning his 50th career Funny Car win at the four-wide race in Charlotte, joining Force, Ron Capps, and Robert Hight as the only drivers in Funny Car history with 50 or more wins. Hagan and Force are the only Funny Car drivers with four or more world titles and 50 or more wins. Hagan also earned his 51st career victory last month in Chicago and is currently third in points.

Joining Hagan on the ESPY Best Driver ballot is NASCAR's Ryan Blaney, IndyCar's Alex Palou, and Formula One's Max Verstappen.

Duo wins bocce ball tournament

The Montgomery County Chamber of Commerce Foundation held its annual Bocce Ball tournament this past week. Movement Mortgage took first place. Pictured are the winners: Sean Allen (left) Loan Officer with Movement Mortgage, and James Craighead (right) a Realtor at RE/Max8. The three other finalist teams were New River Radio Group, First Community Bank and The Hughes Educational Center. The event raises money for the Montgomery County Chamber of Commerce Foundation, which provides opportunities for scholarships to various professional development opportunities, and a Teacher of the Year fund through the Foundation provides a $1,000 check to the Montgomery County Public Schools annual Teacher of the Year recipient.

Sports news: Local radio station out as flagship

With changes to the sports marketing program at Virginia Tech, the New River Valley radio group seems to be out as the flagship station for Virginia Tech athletics.

The 105.3 FM station has been the flagship for football and men's basketball for the past 15 years, but as of this past week, management says they have been told they would not be when the fall hits this year.

Former Hokie signs with Cavs

Virginia Tech's Hunter Cattoor signed an NBA Summer League deal with the Cleveland Cavaliers Friday, creating an opportunity for him to continue playing professionally.

Cattoor cemented his legacy as one of the Hokie greats by guiding Tech to its first-ever ACC title in 2022, earning ACC Tournament MVP honors following a 31-point outburst in the championship game against Duke.

The Orlando, Fla., native was an elite sharpshooter in his time in Blacksburg, drilling a program-record 332 career threes, which also ranks seventh in ACC history. He averaged a career-best 13.5 points per game in his fifth year in the maroon and orange, eclipsing the 1,500 career point plateau.

Cattoor also played in a program-record 151 career games while knocking down 41.5% from beyond the arc.

The NBA 2K25 Summer League starts July 12.

Stangle joins volleyball team

Virginia Tech volleyball head coach Marci Byers tabbed Haley Stangle as the program's director of operations Tuesday. Stangle has spent the last two years at the University of Arkansas as a graduate assistant – operations for their volleyball program.

She will be involved in the day-to-day operations of the program, including management of the program's budget and coordination of team travel.

At Arkansas she orchestrated travel logistics, facilitated practice schedules, collaborated with the staff on team budget, provided administrative support and liaised with groups such as nutrition to help fuel the student-athletes.

Stangle also has experience as a marketing and communications intern at Texas A&M where she worked in the 12th Man Foundation. There, she was responsible for the creation and execution of HTML emails through Eloqua while also producing content for social media platforms.

She holds a bachelor's degree in sport management from Texas Tech and a master's degree in recreation and sports management from Arkansas.

Hand joins Roanoke wrestling program

The Roanoke College wrestling team announced three coaching moves Friday afternoon.

Assistant coach Blake Rosenbaum was elevated to Associate Head Coach and Recruiting Coordinator and two new additions joined the staff. Collin Gerardi is the new assistant coach and director of training and Matt Hand will serve as Head Regional Training Center Coach.

Rosenbaum has been with the program since the start, serving as a volunteer assistant in 2020-2021 and then as head assistant coach from 2021-24. He has coached three Maroon All Americans and was named the Southeast Regional Assistant Coach of the Year this winter.

"Blake has been here since the beginning and helped shape our culture and program," said head coach Nate Yetzer. "I can't think of a more deserving person being elevated to this position. From his days as an athlete to his time as a coach at Ferrum College and now here at Roanoke, I am so proud to call Blake a friend and colleague. He has proven himself as one of the top recruiters in the country the last few years and has continued to be someone that I lean on heavily. I'm very happy for Blake."

Gerardi, a former wrestler at Virginia Tech, is a two-time Division 1 National Qualifier. Gerardi was a U23 USA Wrestling Freestyle All American and a two-time VHSL State Champion. Also, a NHSCA Senior National Champion, he is a former assistant at Machine Shed Wrestling Club.

"I have known Collin for a number of years and one thing that has always stood out to me is his positive attitude and work ethic," said Yetzer. "These two things really stood out during the interview process. When we look at bringing people into our program, we always look what kind of person are they. You won't find many as genuine as Collin. His experience, knowledge, and passion for the sport of wrestling will help him mold our young men and I'm excited to work with him."

Hand of Christiansburg is a former wrestler at the University of Iowa and was part of the 1996-2000 National Championship Teams. He was also an Iowa State Champion. Hand served as the head coach at VA Elite from 2017-2022 and at Machine Shed from 2022-24. He guided his squads to VAWA Team Titles in 2021, 2023 & 2024 and coached several VAWA and VHSL Champs.

"I am so fired up to add coach Matt Hand onto the staff to head up our Regional Training Center," said Yetzer. "The club deserves someone that will invest themselves fully and Matt is that guy. I was bummed we did not get him last year, but finally glad to have him guide our RTC program. The RTC has been growing the last few years and is ready to take off to the next level. Matt will be the guy to do it."

VT Helmet Lab expands beyond sports

Barry Miller, director of business and outreach development in the Virginia Tech Helmet Lab, adjusts a safety helmet on a test rig.

Thirteen years after releasing the first independent safety ratings for varsity football helmets, the Virginia Tech Helmet Lab is expanding beyond the field of athletics.

This summer, researchers will begin an 18-month study to develop the first ratings system for safety helmets, also commonly referred to as hard hats or construction helmets. The ratings system will join the nine sports the lab already produces ratings for using their five-star scale.

The lab has conducted injury biomechanics research outside sports before, including its research on toy product safety and work with the Virginia Tech Mid-Atlantic Aviation Partnership on drone impact testing for operations over people. However, this is the first time that the lab will extend its impact by developing a ratings system to evaluate a non-sports helmet.

"Of all industries, construction has the most workplace fatalities," said Steve Rowson, the lab's director. "Identifying, improving, and implementing better head protection could be the difference between life and death for some of these accidents."

From 2000-08, the construction industry was responsible for more traumatic brain injuries (TBIs) than any other industry, according to an article published in the American Journal of Preventive Medicine. These injury scenarios cause high head injury risk from the high speeds involved.

In this project, researchers will study head impact and concussion risk in a work site environment with the following objectives:

Characterize the conditions associated with head impacts in construction through analysis of accident reports and surveillance video.

Generalize the real-world loading conditions observed in the reconstructions to controlled laboratory test systems.

Test commercially available safety helmets and publicly release data on the Virginia Tech Helmet Ratings website.

The lab will also use its Summation of Tests for the Analysis of Risk (STAR) model to combine data from multiple test sites and compute an overall performance score representative of expected real-world injury rates. The STAR score is calculated based on a helmet's performance in a series of impact tests and assigned a number of stars between one and five to categorize impact performance. Impact conditions are sports-specific and inclusive of the broad range of head impacts likely to be experienced, hence the need to develop a STAR model specific to safety helmets for this project.

This innovative work has been propelled forward by a joint commitment of funding and guidance from the John R. Gentile Foundation, ELECTRI International, the American Society of Concrete Contractors, and the Association of Union Constructors.

"We are honored to support research that will improve the safety of the men and women building our nation by focusing on the industry-specific factors that contribute to head injuries," Raffi Elchemmas of the Mechanical Contractors Association of America, said on behalf of the four construction organizations. "We are all committed to finding solutions to the challenges that the construction industry faces every day and confident this project will lead to improved head protection and reduce injuries."

The lab is scheduled to complete the project by August 2025.

"We hope this work leads to fewer disabling or fatal head injuries resulting from accidents by providing stakeholders with data to make informed decisions on equipping the workers with the most effective personal protective equipment," Rowson said.

Lexi Clatterbuck, Virginia Tech

grow smarter and the networks increase in complexity, providing clients the ability to bulk up or restructure their real, non-MATrEx networks.

Securing the future
Security is an arms race, and the "good guys," like researchers in cybersecurity, aren't the only ones with access to AI agents.

"The work hackers do opens up many more possibilities for attack than it does defense, because attackers only have to succeed once, even if they fail 1,000 times," said Stavrou. "We're opening Pandora's box, but we're trying to understand the effects of AI in cybersecurity."

The end for MATrEx is to scientifically assess the red agent capabilities – what new strategies will they develop – and to teach the blue agents to outsmart their attackers. MATrEx will be designed for companies to run the program internally, so their protected data never leaves and all developed agent strategies stay contained. It's the first training environment that will not only test on traditional network-connected servers, but also 5G.

"There has never been a 5G system connected to a cybersecurity testbed with this level of emulation," said Stavrou. "5G networks are fairly new, and they're usually enclosed within big companies. This will allow us to see what will happen when AI agents attack or defend that type of network and connectivity."

Adam Gorski installs CCI xG Testbed components

While Virginia Tech provides scientific infrastructure and a connection to the Commonwealth Cyber Initiative xG testbed in Arlington, four additional partners will support the MATrEx through large-scale network simulation and emulation, cyber range setup, agent learning optimization, management, and more:

- A2 Labs, formerly Kryptowire Labs
- Scientific Research Corporation
- Raytheon Technologies
- PUNCH Cyber Analytics Group

Over the next four years of the project, Stavrou is looking for more than AI to play games; MATrEx will serve as a cyber training ground where humans can play, train, and learn about cybersecurity with a trained red agent built to win the game.

He also wants to build out an educational component that will support hands-on student learning and the future of the Innovation Campus.

"The goal of this project isn't just to create a company, but to develop a company-university collaboration," said Stavrou. "On the Innovation Campus, we'd like to have a space where we can showcase our work, a one-of-a-kind teaching lab for AI, for students to create projects. Really, we want it to be anything you can imagine."

Virginia Tech

my own reading habits. When did I read many books quickly? When did I take longer to finish a book? What was happening to allow me to read faster or that forced me to read at a slower pace? My experience has been that this approach helps me to both read more and feel more satisfied with the reading that I do.

How should reading plans be adjusted while on vacation?

A vacation period can be a great time to do a lot of reading all at once. The key is to set realistic expectations. Is your vacation's purpose to read or are you traveling or taking time off work to do other things? A family trip to France is probably not the type of vacation that will include much reading time. But a week-long trip to the beach or to a state park can include more time for reading.

If you are set on reading a certain number of books while on vacation, then reading should be the main purpose of that vacation — something like a reading retreat. Such a vacation may not appeal to everyone, but it's a great way to read many books in a short time. It also helps to choose a location with poor internet and cell service, cutting down on potential distractions.

Some people are in the middle of reading several books at one time, while others may only read one at a time. What is the best strategy?

There's no one way to be a reader. And one's reading habits are likely to change throughout the year. There are times when I'm working on three or four books at once. More often, though, I'm just reading two at a time — a more serious or challenging book during the day, and something lighter that I read to relax before bed.

During her two-year tenure as interim dean, Downey led several transformative initiatives. She was instrumental in renaming the School of Nursing, making Radford University the first public institution in Virginia to establish a College of Nursing. Additionally, she secured full CCNE accreditation for all nursing programs in 2023 and obtained a significant gift for the newly named JoAnn Bingham Clinical Simulation Center.

"Wendy has already been transformative as a leader of Radford's Nursing programs," Provost and Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs Bethany Usher said. "With her vision, Dr. Downey has led Radford to graduate excellent nurses and has spearheaded initiatives to improve health and well-being in Southwest Virginia and the Commonwealth."

Under Downey's leadership, student enrollment in the College of Nursing has surged, making it the second largest college at Radford University. Her innovative programs, including Direct Admission to the BSN for freshmen, the Nursing Undergraduate Recruitment Success and Engagement Program (NURSE) and the Nursing Living Learning Community, have significantly boosted student recruitment and success.

"I am thrilled and humbled to be selected as the permanent Dean of the College of Nursing," Downey said. "We have substantial momentum built from our college's accomplishments over the past two years, and I am confident we will continue to excel, delivering the highest quality nursing education in Virginia."

Radford University is committed to being the premier destination for health education in Virginia, and to leading healthy communities in Southwest Virginia. The College of Nursing, under Downey's leadership, will play a key role in supporting this goal.

Downey brings over 35 years of experience in healthcare, leadership and academia. As a second-career nurse and exercise physiologist, Downey has extensive relationships in healthcare and communities across the New River and Roanoke Valleys. Her previous roles at Carilion Clinic, LewisGale Regional Health System, and Good Samaritan Hospice highlight her commitment to interdisciplinary collaboration and healthcare excellence.

She will continue to serve as a tenured associate professor alongside her new role as dean.
