NRV passenger rail takes new path

Marty Gordon

NRVsports@ourvalley.org

Rising costs for a preferred route for passenger service through the New River Valley has quickly changed the whole project.

The project took on a whole new path this past week or in the case of the train, a whole different rail line.

The Virginia Passenger Rail Authority has agreed to sell approximately 28 miles of track back to Norfolk Southern. Initially, the Commonwealth had bought this same line from Salem to Christiansburg to enable passenger service to be on its own set of tracks with no freight traffic.

Norfolk Southern could then move freight traffic back to the older line. Five years ago, the plan included a small platform and possible station to be located across the street from the Christiansburg Aquatics Center. After a community study, the location was then moved to a site near the Uptown Mall. Gradually, the plan then pushed the site closer to the Virginia Line's Merrimac connection.

This where the cost started to National Farmers Market Week highlights markets' impact

RICHMOND—Picking out farm-fresh produce, mingling with growers and supporting the community are all part of a day's fun when visiting a local farmers market.

As National Farmers Market Week kicks off Aug. 4-10, communities are celebrating the role farmers markets play in supporting local agriculture, building connections and delivering fresh local produce to patrons. Now in its 25th year, the annual event is sponsored by the Farmers Market Coalition, which aims to highlight markets' impact on the nation's food system and economy.

"The food sales at farmers markets create stronger local economies because a greater share of the money spent there is more likely to remain in the community—supporting local jobs and services, compared to the money being sent to a distant corporate office," explained Tony Banks, senior assistant director of agriculture, development and innovation for Virginia Farm Bureau Federation.

That's evident in a statistic from the U.S. Department of Agriculture that reports growers selling locally create 13 full-time farm operator jobs per $1 million in revenue earned, compared to only three jobs created by those who don't.

Additionally, of $2.9 billion in direct-to-consumer sales, on-farm stores and farmers markets accounted for $1.7 billion. And 78% of farms selling directly to consumers sold their marketed food within 100 miles of the farm.

Farmers markets also play a crucial role in addressing food insecurity. Many markets accept Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program benefits and participate in Virginia Fresh Match.

In 2021, over $100 million in federal nutrition benefits was redeemed nationally at farmers markets and through direct market sales, according to the USDA.

Marketgoers can find an abundance of fresh produce at any of Virginia's 250 farmers markets, including peak-season berries, heirloom tomatoes, melons, snap peas and sweet corn. Beyond fresh produce, markets are hubs for local meats and seafood, artisan wares, fresh flowers and value-added products like cheese, baked goods, jams, pesto and salsas.

"Consumers may find cherished varieties or foods prepared from old-time favorite recipes that aren't available in grocery stores," Banks noted.

Farmers market fans can vote for their favorite market through the America's Farmers Market Celebration. Hosted by American Farmland Trust, the contest highlights farmers markets' importance and is the only annual ranking of top farmers markets in the U.S. as voted by the public. Voting is open through July 31 at markets.farmland.org.

The top five farmers markets will receive a combined $15,000, which they can use to help with marketing, communications and other needs to expand the market's reach and impact.

According to the AFMC website, the Charlottesville City Market ranks third nationwide. The Portsmouth Olde Towne Farmers Market ranks fifth among the Southeast region's top markets.

Commonwealth Transportation Board awards $361 million contract for Interstate 81 widening project

Design is underway with construction expected to begin in fall 2025

SALEM – The Commonwealth Transportation Board at its July 16 meeting in Richmond awarded a design-build contract valued at $361.6 million to Branch Civil Inc. of Roanoke to widen northbound and southbound Interstate 81 to three lanes between exit 143 in Roanoke County and exit 150 in Botetourt County.

Project design is still being completed, and construction is expected to begin in fall 2025 and to finish in summer 2031.

This widening project is part of the Interstate 81 Corridor Improvement Program (CIP), which aims to improve safety, increase reliability and foster economic growth. It is one of the largest and most complex I-81 CIP projects and includes replacing eight bridges on I-81 and installing more than 8,500 feet of sound barrier along the northbound lanes.

“This is a big step forward,” said Dave Covington, I-81 program delivery director for the Virginia Department of Transportation (VDOT). “It is the largest contract that we’ve awarded for I-81 to date, and it reinforces our commitment to improving this vital corridor.”

“VDOT has a long history of working with Branch Civil, and we look forward to a continued strong partnership to successfully deliver a project of this magnitude,” said Ken King, district engineer for VDOT’s Salem District.

The new lanes will be built on the existing right and left shoulders of I-81 with most of widening to take place in the median. At exit 150, the ramp from northbound Route 220 (Roanoke Road) onto southbound I-81 will be realigned and the southbound I-81 off ramp will be modified to connect with Route 220 at a new signal at Tinker Mountain Road. Interchange lighting will be installed at exits 141, 143 and 150.

Virginia Department of Transportation
VDOT has produced a podcast and a video to provide more information about the widening project between exits 143 and 150. Additional podcasts and videos about the I-81 CIP can be found on the News & Multimedia page of Improve81.org.

The I-81 CIP includes 65 capital projects and numerous operational improvements throughout the interstate’s 325-mile corridor in Virginia. The $3 billion program was signed into law in spring 2019. More information is available at Improve81.org.

Zoning Ordinance Amendment (ZOA) #60/ORD #2001-An amendment to amend the text of the Town’s Zoning Ordinance to create a new Downtown Northwest zoning district for the area bounded by North Main Street, Turner Street, and Prices Fork Road. In 2019, the Town adopted the Downtown Strategic Plan which identified six sub districts for Downtown including the Downtown Northwest district bounded by North Main St., Prices

Fork Rd., and Turner St. The proposed amendment will create a new floating zoning district applicable to the Downtown Northwest area. The district includes an applicability criteria, permitted use table, definitions specific to the new district, building dimensional standards, building design standards, site development standards and signage provisions. The district incorporates many new form-based zoning regulations, which have more specificity in building and site design requirements than typically found in traditional zoning districts.

Lights, camera, Emmy: Alumnus shares his success story

Ross Breitenbach '92 didn't have the typical college graduation experience. He didn't wear a cap and gown or walk across a stage.

Earlier in his senior year as a Hokie, Breitenbach started an internship at WLSL, the NBC affiliate in Roanoke. So rather than attending his graduation as a student, he covered the ceremony as a video intern for WLSL. He was the one capturing those special moments instead of being involved in them.

"I was there shooting everybody throwing their caps into the air instead of participating," he said. "That was writing on the wall for me for what I should be doing for a career."

Now Breitenbach, who majored in marketing with a minor in communication, is an Emmy Award winning executive producer and creator of "Hack My Home," a Netflix series about home improvement.

He's also director of "Brat Camp" on ABC and a sought-after showrunner on over 20 highly acclaimed television series.

"Hack My Home" was named outstanding instructional/how-to program at the Daytime Emmy Awards in June. Breitenbach shares the excitement of winning an Emmy and how Virginia Tech helped shape his 25-year career in film and television.

How would you describe that moment of winning an Emmy and what it meant to you?

When we were sitting around the table at the awards and you see other tables jumping up and screaming when they win, I said, "Not me. Let's be cool." It will be great if we win. I'll stand up and get excited. But yelling, that's weird when we're adults. When they announced the show, all we heard was "Hack..." That's all that came out of their mouth and our whole table jumped up screaming. All that was thrown out the window of keeping it cool. We were as uncool as you can get, but so excited hugging and high fiving.

It was a huge crown to my career. I was just an undergraduate at Virginia Tech, but it finally felt like I got my Ph.D. in television with that Emmy because it will stick with me wherever I go. To me as a storyteller, as a producer, it was huge because I created this show. I didn't just work on it, I created it. It was a proud moment, and it still is. A bunch of articles came out and it says, "Emmy winner Ross Breitenbach" not "Producer Ross Breitenbach," so that's cool."

Ross Breitenbach celebrates his Daytime Emmy for outstanding instructional/how-to program for his work as executive producer and series creator of Netflix's "Hack My Home."

The Emmy is the culmination of many years in the industry doing your part to get where you are today. Is there a particular moment in your career where it clicked, and you knew that this is what you're supposed to be doing?

I think it was as a kid. I found my dad's old Super 8 cameras [motion picture cameras], and I just loved the flickering picture and how it felt more real to my eye than what I was seeing on TV. I fell in love with the medium of Super 8. From that early influence, I knew I wanted to be in film and capture those images. What I was seeing I wanted to see in moving pictures, not just in still images. When I got to Virginia Tech, we were still editing on film. I spent all my time editing in the darkroom at Virginia Tech. I just loved it.

How have you found the interdisciplinary nature of marketing and communication work together in your career?

I found a lot of synergy with marketing and communication. You're communicating to the masses. One you're trying to convince. One you're trying to entertain or inform. Arguably marketing is the same — entertaining and informing. Right now, we're seeing a huge convergence of branded entertainment. My worlds have always collided with those two disciplines.

How would you describe the impact Virginia Tech had on you and helping you get to where you are today?

For me, Virginia Tech really provided a safe place to experiment and to try new things. Experimenting, doing things out of the box, and doing things the way you're not supposed to do them was really exciting for me. Virginia Tech gave me the blank canvas to do that and try it and fail. I'm very grateful to have that time to figure things out with myself and who I was, but also in media and what I was going to do with it. It all provided a nice backdrop for me.

Virginia Tech's motto is Ut Prosim (That I May Serve). What does that mean for you and how you go about your work?

What I can do is help young people. I encourage them to get in touch with me. It's all about networking. You have to play the game. Because of where I live in Los Angeles, it's hard to get back to Blacksburg. Any students who want to come out here and learn this business, I've really opened myself to them. Come in and you can do an internship. I'll hire you as a production assistant. I will sit down and have a coffee with you and give you advice on who to talk to.

What would you tell students who are interested in a career similar to yours?

My advice is to manage expectations. You're going to have to start at the bottom like everyone else and you'll have to work your way up. Ask for help. Ask questions. Be curious. Find that thing you love. Find your passion and pursue it with everything you have in you. You'll never regret that. You might not end up doing that, but you'll learn a lot along the way and use that skill later on. It's amazing how things come back. People are happy to help you. You just have to ask.

What gets you out of bed in the morning and keeps you going on this journey?

I love what I do. I really have found something I'm passionate about. I like getting up and tackling my problems. I like figuring out solutions. I like the challenge of doing something I'm passionate about. That has really helped me through my career because I enjoy it. It doesn't feel like busy work. It doesn't feel like work if you're really passionate about something, and I fortunately have found something I'm really passionate about. I don't mind the downturns because I know it's just a downturn and there will be a peak over the horizon. It's been a worthwhile career. I'm grateful to have the opportunity that Virginia Tech gave me.

MCPS to implement division wide student cell phone use policy

CHRISTIANSBURG - The MCPS School Board has adopted a division-wide student cell phone use policy, effective immediately.

The policy prohibits students from using cell phones during the school day without prior written permission from the school's principal. Earbuds, smart watches, and other devices are included in this policy. The goal is to further promote a "conducive learning environment" throughout all MCPS buildings, according to MCPS.

"It's important for our school division to take this step together to ensure we have the best learning environment possible for our students," MCPS Superintendent Bernard F. Bragen, Jr. said. "We understand the need for connectivity in this day and age, but we are confident that eliminating distractions in our buildings will push students to be the best they can be."

"I'm proud of our administration for developing this policy," MCPS School Board Chair Linwood Hudson said. "I think it will make a significant, positive impact on our students' daily lives. Cell phones are a constant distraction in our schools, we need our students to put them away and focus on learning and engaging with their peers. We also need a commitment from everyone involved: students, parents, teachers, and administrators. Together we can make this policy work and give the phones a rest."

Students may bring their devices to school, but they must be turned off and out of sight during the school day. This includes school-sponsored events both on and off school grounds.

Exceptions will be made for medical reasons, IEP/504 Plan accommodations and legal compliance.

OBITUARIES

Robinson, Paul Michael

Paul Michael Robinson, 75, of Christiansburg, passed away peacefully at his home into the arms of his loving savior on Sunday, July 21, 2024.

Paul was born in Pikeville, Kentucky on Sept. 22, 1948, and later made his home in Christiansburg.

Paul was predeceased in death by his parents, Zollie and Gelois Robinson; his father-in-law and mother-in-law, Elmer and Elizabeth Brammer; and his brother-in-law, Corlis Brammer.

Paul is survived by Linda, his loving and faithful wife of 57 years. He is also survived by his daughter, Leigh Anne Ryals (Dale) of Robertsdale, Alabama; his son Drew Robinson (Nicole) of Braselton, Georgia; his brother Don Robinson (Linda) of Christiansburg; his sister Elizabeth Brooks (Darrell) of Live Oak, Florida; brother-in-law, Dennis Brammer; his beloved grandchildren, Taylor Austin (Griffin) of Austin, Texas, and Mackenzie, Skylar, and Michael Robinson of Braselton, Georgia, and a host of wonderful friends.

Paul was the owner of First Stop Auto Sales and worked for several car dealerships over the years. He was an avid golfer and loved to hunt and fish.

Paul was a devoted Christian and had served the Lord in various positions in his church throughout his years.

He was a faithful and devoted member at Faith Missionary Baptist Church and served as the adult Sunday School teacher and in the Men's Fellowship. He loved working to prepare food boxes for Thanksgiving and Christmas, the Angel Tree and with any task needed.

The family will receive visitors Sunday, July 28 from 2-4 p.m. Monday, July 29 there will be a brief visitation at 1 p.m. followed by the funeral service at 2 p.m. The viewings and service will be held at McCoy Funeral Home Chapel. The services will be conducted by Pastor Dale Ryals.

Whittaker, Pamela Jean

Pamela Jean Whittaker, 63, of Newport, Virginia, entered the kingdom of Heaven (where she undoubtedly received a joyous reception from her Mommy, Daddy, and the love of her life for over 45 years, Donald) Tuesday, July 23, 2024, at Roanoke Memorial Hospital.

She was born in Radford March 21, 1961, to the late Eugene Roger and Elva Lou Pearman Poff. She was also preceded in death by her husband, Donald Lee Whittaker and her father-in-law, Mark (Dick) Whittaker, Jr.

Left to cherish her memory are her son, Randy Whittaker (Cassie Miller); grandchildren, Wyatt, Waylon, and Oaklee Whittaker, Aaron, Jalen, and Nolan Miller; sisters and brothers-in-law, Dodie and Billy Webb, Kim and Heath Haug and Mandy and Mark Huff; brother and sister-in-law, Kevin and Joy Poff; mother-in-law, Shirley Whittaker; numerous nieces and nephews; and special friend, Glenda Lucas.

Pammi will forever be remembered because of her enormous presence in the lives of everyone who was lucky enough to know her. Her infectious laughter and sense of humor, her ability to make you laugh with the perfect inappropriate comment, her deep love of her family and friends, her love of her pets, her happy place in her camper by the river, and the immense pride she had for her son and her grandsons, will live on in our hearts forever.

We'll think of her when we visit the beach, when we see a good yard sale, at every cookout (where her macaroni salad will be sorely missed), and especially during the Christmas season where she always had a gift for every kid in the room. Her generous spirit and selfless nature when it came to her family and friends was a true blessing to witness and a privilege to experience.

Funeral services will be conducted today, Saturday, July 27, 2024, at 2 p.m. in the McCoy Funeral Home Chapel with Scott Obenchain officiating. The family will receive friends from 1-2 p.m. prior to the service.

WORSHIP DIRECTORY

Declare the Truth

Read Isaiah 43:1 through 45:25

"You are my witnesses," declares the Lord, "and my servant whom I have chosen, so that you may know and believe me and understand that I am he. Before me no god was formed, nor will there be one after me" (Isaiah 43:10).

When the people of Israel persisted in looking to the gods of the nations that surrounded them, the Lord was provoked to address their unfaithfulness. He called Israel to make a thoughtful examination of exactly what the gods of other nations had to offer. He then contrasted these false gods with himself.

These gods of the nations, which were no gods at all, could not choose Israel. But God, who is the only God, did make a choice. In His choosing, He had a purpose. He wanted Israel to know that He alone is God, to believe in His character, and to understand His love for His chosen.

Then He wanted one more thing. He wanted His people to acknowledge Him before all others and declare His glory. Instead of seeking false gods, Israel should have been declaring: "Only our God is God; no other is like Him."

Thought for Today: God wants our love for Him to be evident to all.

Quicklook: Isaiah 43:9-13

Avoid sparking fires during summertime lawn maintenance

RICHMOND—As summer heat amps up, so does the risk of setting off a natural disaster while tidying up the yard.

Lawn mowers and other yard equipment like weed eaters, chainsaws, grinders, welders and tractors can potentially trigger wildfires during the dry, hot summer months.

Lawn mowers can spark a fiery chain reaction in a number of ways, noted Scott DeNoon, a member of Virginia Farm Bureau's Safety Advisory Committee.

Dry grass that has built up in the mower deck and reached the muffler can catch fire, fall out and ignite the surrounding area.

"Additionally, the mower blades can hit rocks or other hidden debris in dry vegetation and generate sparks that ignite dry weeds, brush and leaves," DeNoon added.

The Virginia Department of Forestry responded to 21 wildfires in a single week in June.

Wildfires are especially dangerous to people who use forests and outdoor areas or live in nearby homes and communities. They also wreak havoc on the environment—harming wildlife and their habitats.

Unlike most natural disasters, nine out of 10 wildfires are sparked by humans—meaning most are preventable.

Common causes of lawn mower fires include adding fuel or oil to a hot engine and failing to properly maintain a mower. A lawn mower can overheat and ignite if the carburetor has a leaky gasket, DeNoon cautioned.

"Invest the time necessary to create a safe mowing experience," he said.

Before starting up the mower, DeNoon advises keeping the following safety tips in mind:

Fill up the mower with gas and check the oil level before use. Let the mower cool down before refueling.

Routinely clean out grass from the mower blades with a hose. Never put your hands near the blade unless the spark plug has been disconnected and the unit has completely cooled.

Mow in the early morning hours before temperatures rise and humidity levels drop. DOF recommends mowing before 10 a.m.

Avoid mowing during excessively dry, hot or windy days whenever possible.

Maintain mowing equipment to prevent overheating and inspect before each use.

Ensure that the blades are sharp—dull blades are more likely to produce sparks.

Check for fuel leaks.

Remove rocks and debris from the mowing area.

Virginia Farm Bureau Mutual Insurance Co. homeowner and farm owner policies provide coverage for fires caused by lawnmowers that damage covered property.

New technique could help treat aggressive brain tumors

Tackling brain cancer is complicated, but groundbreaking new research could help add another tool to the cancer-fighting arsenal.

A team from Georgia Tech and Virginia Tech published a paper in APL Bioengineering in May that explores a new option that could one day be used to target glioblastoma, a deadly and fast-growing brain tumor.

Supported by National Institutes of Health grants, this work stems from past research on high frequency irreversible electroporation, better known as H-FIRE. H-FIRE is a minimally invasive process that uses non-thermal electrical pulses to break down cancer cells.

Treating any type of cancer isn't easy, but when it comes to brain cancers, the blood-brain barrier adds an extra challenge. The barrier defends the brain against toxic material — but that's not always a positive thing.

"Mother Nature designed it to prevent us from poisoning ourselves, but unfortunately, the way that works, it also excludes about 99 percent of all small-molecule drugs from entering the brain and achieving adequate concentrations to elucidate their therapeutic effect. That's particularly true for chemotherapeutics, biologics, or immunotherapies," said John Rossmeisl, the Dr. and Mrs. Dorsey Taylor Mahin Professor of Neurology and Neurosurgery at the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine. Rossmeisl is one of the paper's coauthors.

The square-shaped wave typically used with H-FIRE performs double duty: It disrupts the blood-brain barrier around the tumor site while destroying cancer cells. However, this was the first study to use a sinusoidal wave to disrupt the barrier. This new modality is called burst sine wave electroporation (B-SWE).

The researchers used a model to study the effects of the sinusoidal wave versus the more conventional, square-shaped wave. They found that B-SWE resulted in less damage to cells and tissue but more disruption of the blood-brain barrier.

In some clinical cases, both ablation and blood-brain barrier disruption would be ideal, but in others, blood-brain barrier disruption may be more important than destroying cells. For example, if a neurosurgeon removed the visible tumor mass, the sinusoidal waveform could potentially be used to disrupt the blood-brain barrier around the site, allowing drugs to enter the brain and eliminate the last of the cancer cells. B-SWE could result in minimal damage to the healthy brain tissue.

Research indicates that the conventional square waveforms show good blood-brain barrier disruption, but this study finds even better blood-brain barrier disruption with B-SWE. This could allow more cancer-fighting drugs to access the brain.

"We thought we had that problem solved, but this shows you that with some forward thinking, there's always potentially better solutions," said Rossmeisl, who also serves as associate head of the Department of Small Animal Clinical Sciences.

During the study, the researchers hit a snag: In addition to more blood-brain barrier disruption, they found that the sinusoidal wave also caused more neuromuscular contractions. These muscle contractions run the risk of damaging the organ. However, by tweaking the dose of B-SWE, they were able to reduce the contractions while providing a level of blood-brain barrier disruption similar to that of a higher dose.

The next step in this research is to study the effects of B-SWE using an animal model of brain cancer to see how the sinusoidal waveform stands up against the conventional H-FIRE technique.

The project was spearheaded by first author Sabrina Campelo while she completed her Ph.D. at the Virginia Tech-Wake Forest University School of Biomedical Engineering and Sciences. Campelo is now a postdoctoral fellow at the Wallace H. Coulter Department of Biomedical Engineering at Georgia Tech and Emory University.

Pry optimistic about upcoming season

Marty Gordon
NRVsports@ourvalley.org

Virginia Tech coach Brent Pry is excited and optimistic about the upcoming football season.

Virginia Tech football took the podium on Tuesday morning for ACC Football Kickoff 2024. Pry was joined by Quarterback Kyron Drones, defensive lineman Antwaun Powell-Ryland, and cornerback Dorian Strong.

The Hokies are coming off a 7-6 season which included a Military Bowl victory over Tulane in December.

Pry made it clear when he stepped to the podium the culture has definitely changed in Blacksburg, especially with the large number of players returning this season.

“Yeah, I think that’s valuable for anybody. You want that,” he said. “I think it goes into bringing the right people into your program. Guys that want to be at Tech for the right reasons. I think it goes back to being a strong brotherhood. These guys love playing together. They believe in each other. They believe in team first. They enjoy Virginia Tech. I say it all the time. I meet with each and every player at the end of the spring. And the last question I ask them is, ‘Do you like it here?’ And to a man all but four or five, the response was, Coach, I don’t just like it here, I love it here. And [we’re] thankful for our collectives, for the Hokie Way and for Triumph. We don’t go outbid anybody for anybody. But we’re going to be competitive and aggressive in that space. Our guys deserve that.”

The expectations because of that returning nucleus are high, and the former Tech graduate assistant admitted that standard is one of the reasons he returned.

“I want those expectations. I understand those standards. People talk about how you handle the expectations. Well, we all know that has nothing to do with the team that we can be when we go to Nashville. But at the same time, we all came to Virginia Tech because of those expectations. This is a place where you should expect to compete for the playoffs and expect to compete for a championship. That’s who Tech is.”

Pry is on the radar of the Dodd Trophy committee, making the preseason watch list for the 2024 season.

Pry also talked about the experience of running out of the tunnel at Lane Stadium to the booming “Enter Sandman.”

“I love running out of that tunnel. Even when I watch the highlight video of it, I get chills. It’s special. I think for all of us, you love the competition, you love playing in front of big crowds, the excitement of the entrance.”

“Our fans are some of the best in the country. They pack the place. They’re jumping to that tune. We come out of the locker room and Johnny Cash’s ‘God Will Cut You Down’ is slow playing as you take that walk. By the time you hit that tunnel, man, it’s the best.”

He joked that he just tries to make sure he doesn’t stumble coming out.

After EA Sports released its top 25 toughest places to play, various media outlets offered their perspectives on the most challenging stadiums in college football.

The Athletic’s Bruce Feldman, with his 30 years of experience covering the sport, curated his own top 10 list. Notably, he ranked Virginia Tech’s Lane Stadium/Worsham Field at No. 5, placing it between Ohio State’s Ohio Stadium and Florida’s Ben Hill Griffin Stadium as one of the NCAA’s premier battlegrounds.

The Athletic lauded Lane Stadium for its ‘unique’ atmosphere, drawing a comparison to the environment of No. 1 ranked LSU’s Tiger Stadium.

“It only takes the first two seconds of ‘Enter Sandman’ to play, and I get goosebumps,” Feldman commented. “It happens every time, even more than a decade later.”

The article highlighted how Lane Stadium transforms into an electrifying fortress, with “Enter Sandman” mirroring the Hokies’ aggressive defensive style and their respected special teams.

Under Pry, the Hokies maintained a 4-2 home record in 2023, with The Athletic noting that Lane Stadium is poised to become ‘an opponent’s worst nightmare’ under his leadership.

Tech’s home opener will take place on Saturday, Sept. 7, versus Marshall after kicking off the 2024 campaign on the road in Nashville against Vanderbilt.

Looking ahead to another familiar nonconference foe, the Scarlet Knights will make their way to southwest Virginia on Saturday, Sept. 21, after hosting the Hokies in New Jersey last year. Rutgers is led by head coach Greg Schiano, who received a contract extension this past offseason. Following a victory in the Pinstripe Virginia Tech head coach Brent Pry is excited about the upcoming season. He expressed that optimism as he spoke to the media during this week’s ACC kickoff session.

Bowl, the program’s offensive prowess is powered by running back Kyle Monangai and dual-threat quarterback Gavin Wimsatt. The duo accounted for 16 touchdowns on the ground in 2023 and will provide a good early test for the new-look defensive line operating under defensive coordinator Chris Marve.

One of the biggest areas of improvement for Pry and has team is simply re-establishing recruitment in the state of Virginia.

“To me that’s home turf. It’s too easy to get to Blacksburg from the DMV. There’s too many relationships that we have on our staff with coaches and programs in the DMV. There’s too many great programs to not return to the DMV each and every year. We treat it like home turf,” he said.

“We’ve made some good strides there. We’re invested there, like we are in the Commonwealth. Just makes too much sense for us.”

High expectations for the Hokies

From the sidelines
Marty Gordon

No pressure on the Hokies as they come into this football season with a lot of fanfare. Over 80 percent of the production is back on both sides of the ball. Failure is not an option.

This week, the media placed Virginia Tech in the middle of the pack.

Clemson is favored to win the 2023 Atlantic Coast Conference football title for the eighth time in the last nine years, according to a preseason poll of 176 media voters.

The Tigers went 11-3 last year, posting their 12th consecutive double-digit win season while winning the 2022 ACC Football Championship Game.

The 2023 ACC Preseason Poll was conducted via a vote of a media panel, including those who were credentialed for last week’s ACC Football Kickoff in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Clemson was predicted as the 2023 ACC champion on 103 ballots. Coming off a 10-3 season and a win in the Cheez-It Bowl, Florida State racked up 67 first-place votes. North Carolina (5) and NC State (1) also earned first-place votes.

Clemson paced all teams with 2,370 points, while Florida State held the second slot with 2,304 points. North Carolina was third with 1,981 points, and NC State nabbed fourth with 1,662 points.

The next three teams were tightly bunched, with Miami in fifth with 1,553 points and Duke and Pitt tied for sixth with 1,511 points apiece.

Louisville (1,344) was eighth in the preseason prognostications, while Wake Forest (1,181) took ninth. The 10 through 14 spots were held by Syracuse (826), Virginia Tech (678), Georgia Tech (633), Boston College (561) and Virginia (365).

The 2023 ACC schedule features a new scheduling model, which eliminates divisions. The 2023 ACC Football Championship Game will be played Dec. 2 at Bank of America Stadium in Charlotte, North Carolina, and will feature the top two teams based on winning percentage.

reseason Poll

1. Clemson (103), 2370
2. Florida State (67), 2304
3. North Carolina (5), 1981
4. NC State (1), 1662
5. Miami, 1553
- T6. Duke, 1511
- T6. Pitt, 1511
8. Louisville, 1344
9. Wake Forest, 1181
10. Syracuse, 826
11. Virginia Tech, 678
12. Georgia Tech, 633
13. Boston College, 561
14. Virginia, 365

My prediction is simple, the Hokies will live up to the hype and take advantage of a favorable schedule. A 11-1 record is not out of the question, but this would include wins over Rutgers and a better than average Clemson squad. The good thing is that latter is at home, thus leaning the advantage to the Hokies.

A loss at Miami could be in the cards and out-of-conference Rutgers could be a slight problem.

So that means, an ACC championship game against Florida State in November. But we all know, the unexpected can happen. This year, the Hokies have depth, and that will be a biggie.

My predicted finish of the 2024 ACC:

1. Virginia Tech
2. FSU
3. N.C. State
- C4. lemson
5. SMU
6. Pitt
7. Miami
8. Syracuse
9. Ga. Tech
10. UNC
11. Boston College
12. Wake Forest
13. Duke
14. Louisville
15. UVA
16. Stanford
17. Cal

We will wait for the dust to clear come November. Now, just count down the days until opening weekend.

Former Blue Demon signs with Yankees

sat and waited to hear his name in the current Major League Baseball draft. He would have to wait a little bit longer, but he received a phone call afterwards from the New York Yankees they were interested in him as a free agent.

Kirtner (6-0, 180) signed the six-year deal earlier in the week and is now at the Yankees training facility in Tampa, Florida.

“I’m feeling excited,” he said in a phone interview.

This past season, Kirtner made 23 appearances as a Hokie, posting a 1-1 mark with a 4.62 earned run average and striking out 36 batters across 25.1 innings.

Kirtner earned three varsity letters playing for Coach Dale Nelson at Christiansburg. As a junior in 2019, posted an 8-1 record with a 1.56 ERA and 91 strikeouts in 58 innings and added a 1.08

WHIP and opponents batted just .152 against him. He attended the WWBA Perfect Game showcase in Jupiter, Florida in fall 2019.

Of course, this week has been a transitional one for a player who didn’t grow up as a Yankees fan.

“I want to become the best player possible, and we will see where it goes,” he said.

Blacksburg middle schooler named national wrestling champ

Marty Gordon
NRVsports@ourvalley.org

Reza Massjouni has been dominant as a middle school wrestler, going undefeated this past season, but the biggest accolade for the Blacksburg youngster came this past week in Iowa where he was crowned national champion for his age group.

He had never competed in this big of a tournament, adding to the accomplishment.

“It was pretty overwhelming,” he said.

Of course, this recent title is nothing new for the 14-year-old. Massjouni is a two-time Freestyle Nationals Champion (2018 and 2024), one-time Greco national champion, a three-time Southeast Regionals Freestyle Champion, three-time Southeast Regionals Greco Champion, six-time Youth Folkstyle State Champion, four-time Freestyle State Champion and a three-time Greco State Champion. He has also won various big national level folkstyle wrestling tournaments such as Super 32, AAU Nationals, Dixie Nationals, and the Ohio Tournament of Champions.

His father and two younger siblings are also wrestlers, and he credits his dad for his extra training.

Massjouni’s next stop is the U.S. Open in April of next year, and a chance to wrestle at the high school level at 126-pounds.

RU announces Hall of Fame class

Radford University Athletics has announced five new members that will be inducted into the Radford Athletics Hall of Fame in October.

The Class of 2024 will include Che' Brown (Women's Soccer), Roz Groce (Women's Basketball), Alex Gregory (Baseball), Nichole Beall (Softball) and Greig Denny (Athletic Director). The five-member class will be the 21st to be inducted into the Radford Athletics Hall of Fame. This year's induction ceremony will once again help kick off Homecoming Weekend festivities and will be held inside the Highlander Hotel on October 4.

Che' Brown Women's Soccer (2010-13)

The most decorated goalkeeper in Radford and Big South history, Che' Brown played a key role leading the Highlander to three regular season championships and a pair of NCAA Tournament trips during her time as a Highlander. Her 304 saves and 33 shutouts rank first in program history and her career mark of 0.69 goals against average is a Big South record that still stands today. Her various awards include Big South Freshman of the Year, three-time Big South Defensive Player of the Year, Big South All-Decade team, Big South Tournament MVP, United Soccer Coaches All-Region selections, and an All-American nod. Brown is also one of just six Highlanders to ever earn first-team all-conference honors four times in her career.

Roz Groce Women's Basketball (1988-92)

A member of the most dominant stretch in women's basketball history at Radford, Roz Groce played a special part in making that history. Groce was a member of the 1989, 1990 and 1992 regular season championship teams as well as the 1990, 1991, 1992 three-peat stretch of tournament championships. In 1991, she was named tournament MVP after hitting a buzzer-beater shot against Campbell in the title match to give Radford its fourth title in program history. That same season she set a single-year program record for Radford in free throws made with 170. Capping her career, she was named to the conference's second team in 1991 and 1992.

Alex Gregory Baseball (2006-09)

A prolific power hitter and all-around incredible player for the Highlanders, the numberspeak for themselves in Alex Gregory's Highlander career. He owns program records for hits (272), home runs (38), on base percentage (.465), and became the first player in program and conference history to ever hit better than .400 in three straight seasons, paving the way to becoming the first player to ever win three Big South batting crowns. Gregory also ranks top-10 in program history for runs, RBI, walks, slugging, total bases, games, at bats, average, and doubles. He is one of just five players in program history to ever hit three home runs in a single game. The 2008 Scholar-Athlete of the Year was also a three-time all-conference member and was named to the Big South's 2000's all-decade team. At the end of his Radford career, he was drafted in the 17th round of the MLB Draft by the New York Mets becoming the 11th player to ever be drafted in program history.

Nichole Beall Softball (2009-12)

One of the best all-around players to ever hit the field for the Highlanders, Nichole Beall is synonymous with Radford's success during the most dominant stretch in program history. She owns program records that still stand today in total bases (459), RBI (158), walks (96), slugging (.686), and home runs (52). Beall also owns top-five program marks for runs, stolen bases, hit by pitches, on base percentage, average, hits, doubles, triples and fielding percentage. Beall was a member of the 2009 and 2010 tournament championship teams while also helping guide the team to regular season championships in 2009, 2010, 2011 and 2012. She is the only Highlander to ever win the Big South Player of the Year award twice and is also the only Highlander to be named Virginia Player of the Year and an NFCA All-American.

Greig Denny Athletic Director (1996-2007)

Greig Denny helmed Radford Athletics for 11 years guiding the Highlanders through a growing college athletics atmosphere with eight regular season championships and seven tournament championships while also overseeing various upgrades to facilities Radford still calls home today. In 2003, Radford would complete construction of Patrick D. Cupp Stadium, one of the largest soccer facilities in southwest Virginia, which plays host to the women's soccer, men's soccer, track and field, cross country, and lacrosse programs. Radford's dedication to academic success continued under Denny as well, seeing 22 Highlanders earn Big South Scholar Athlete of the Year. Beginning in 2016, Radford would start honoring a student athlete per academic year with an award named in their honor that recognizes a senior student-athlete who excels in academics, athletics, and has made significant contributions to the community. Prior to his time as an athletic director, Denny also served as Radford's baseball coach in 1986 and 1987.

The legacy of the Lunch Pail

How a rusted box inspired generations and became the heart of Hokie football Hokie Pride. Ultimate Teamwork. Dominating Defense.

These are just a few of the characteristics that make the famed Lunch Pail what it is, a battered and rusting box that became the identity of Virginia Tech football's defense.

The tradition of the Lunch Pail began in 1995 when legendary Virginia Tech coach Bud Foster was named defensive coordinator. The original lunch pail, which once belonged to a coal miner, was acquired by the mother-in-law of then co-defensive coordinator Rod Sharpless.

The rest is history.

The pail included the defense's mission statement, keys to success and goals. Each week, the hardest working player on the defense earned the privilege of carrying the pail to and from practice during the week and to the sideline on game day.

Over time, Hokie players collected turf from playing fields after road victories and deposited blades of grass in the box. Tech painted on the side the letters W-I-N, which Foster said stood for "What's Important Now."

Foster's triumph in defense cemented the legend of the Lunch Pail. From 1995 to 2013, his team consistently ranked among the top ten nationally in total defense, achieving this feat eleven times.

They led the nation in total defense in 2005 and 2006, and also topped the charts in scoring defense twice and rushing defense once.

Under his leadership, Tech accumulated more sacks and interceptions than any other FBS program, with only Alabama and Ohio State ranking higher in scoring defense during his tenure. In 2006, Foster received the Broyles Award as the top assistant coach in America.

But the lunch pail symbolizes more than just team triumphs. It also represents the blue-collar work ethic and pride of the community at the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

In 2007, following the tragic shooting on campus, the lunch pail took on an even greater meaning. The names of the 32 victims were listed on a laminated card and placed inside the pail with a maroon ribbon. Underneath the victims' names is an inspirational reminder from Nikki Giovanni's Convocation remarks: "We will remember. We will prevail. We are Virginia Tech."

The Hokies have carried on their memory ever since.

"[The shooting] was a horrible tragedy," former defensive end Orion Martin said when he took possession of the lunch pail during preseason camp in '07. "To have those names in there, it makes it even more of an honor to have the lunch pail."

The honor of carrying the iconic Lunch Pail cannot be overstated. Current safeties coach and former defensive back Pierson Prioleau will never forget the moment he laid hands on it in after Virginia Tech's season-opening win against Rutgers in 1997, especially after watching watch a lot of really good players carry it around, guys like J.C. Price, Cornell Brown, Torrian Gray and Myron Newsome.

Only two Hokies have ever received a permanent pail: former star defensive end Darryl Tapp, who carried it for nearly two years during Tech's early ACC days, and former defensive line coach Charley Wiles, one of the longest tenured and most respected of Tech's defensive coaches.

When Foster retired in 2019, Virginia Tech honored him with a banner in Lane Stadium displaying his last name and an outline of the lunch pail. During the post-Foster transition, Virginia Tech phased out the lunch pail tradition out of respect for Foster as Justin Hamilton, a protégé of Foster, established himself as the new coordinator.

But the decision to bring back the Lunch Pail was a no-brainer for head coach Brent Pry as he ushered in a new era of Tech football. And it doesn't come as a surprise. After all, Pry learned how to coach that side of the ball from Foster and his Lunch Pail defense during his time as a graduate assistant with the 1995 Hokies.

Bringing back the Lunch Pail marked a return to Virginia Tech football's roots. The beloved tradition holds a reminder of Hokie Nation's strength and symbolizes an aggressive, rough and tumble defense, one that finished the 2023 season ranked fourth in passing defense.

skyrocket. In February, officials from the Virginia Rail Authority said bringing passenger rail service to the New River Valley could cost a staggering $1 billion.

At the center of that play was a train tunnel that is almost one-mile long. The Merrimac tunnel was built in the early 1930's and has undergone some work in the past 10 years to allow "double-stacked" freight cars. But with the increase in speeds from a planned Amtrak service and the need for new safety measures, the tunnel is facing some major improvements.

Under the National Fire Protection Association standard, this would include construction of three ventilation fan banks that would be installed throughout the tunnel. In addition, work would have to be done to widen the tunnel to accommodate emergency walkways at the track level.

Also, a 15-story and a 20-story shaft would have to be driven to the surface to allow for emergency access.

The state of Virginia had purchased the former Virginia Line, which runs from Salem through the tunnel. Any travel westward would have had to progress through the tunnel and a secondary track would have to be laid down to allow a train to move into Christiansburg.

The initial plan was to have passenger service up and running to the New River Valley by this year. Now, the earliest any type of service could start is 2028.

Officials deeper in western Virginia including those in Bristol are hoping the service can be extended all the way there, but again would require some major work to the infrastructure including the Merrimac tunnel.

The new plan will include moving everything again, thus pushing the project ever further down the road. But it would include eliminating the large amount of money needed to deal with the Merrimac Tunnel. Now, the major cost would be to provide the stop in Christiansburg while upgrading the rail lines from Salem to the NRV.

Additional monies have been approved for infrastructure improvements in Roanoke to accommodate more trains and rights to run passenger service on Norfolk Southern's Main Line to Christiansburg. The funding will also cover costs to build a platform and siding track at the former Cambria station site.

A new agreement between Norfolk Southern and the state would also support the expansion of two Amtrak round trips to Christiansburg and provide for a third, operating between Roanoke and Christiansburg.

When considering the station itself, it could become easier as two former sites still exist in Cambria near the rail line. One is privately owned while a second is being used by Norfolk Southern as a maintenance stop.

There could be a question on what type of amenities would be also be needed, but the Authority hopes to discuss the details over the next few months.

For now, passenger rail to the NRV is still on the drawing board and not any closer as it was six years ago.
