100+ Women Who Care donates large sum to NRV CARES

Angelica Ramos
Contributing writer

MONTGOMERY COUNTY- Local organization 100+ Women who Care donated $11,100 this weekend to NRV CARES, a non-profit organization who centers on protecting children and caring for families.

Every quarter, 100+ Women Who Care donates to an organization of their choice. The organization can use it for whatever they need to continue to thrive and support their community. 100+ Women Who Care NRV is located out of Blacksburg and is an organization of women in the community who care a great deal about supporting and uplifting their community. These women strive to have an impact on the good and the care they see in their community. They chose NRV CARES this quarter. NRV CARES stands for New River Valley Child Advocacy, Resources, Education, and Services. NRV CARES is based in Christiansburg and is a private non-profit who supports families by providing education, support and parenting classes. NRV CARES also is dedicated to protecting children as they are an affiliate of Prevent Child Abuse Virginia and the National CASA Association. They also provide education for the community on the existence of child abuse, the effects of trauma and how to help support families and children in need through difficult times as a community. They do this in multiple ways like offering Stewards of Children Training, which is a workshop on child sexual abuse, and by working with other community organizations like Christiansburg fire Department on Pinwheels for Prevention which residents can see blue pinwheels all around town during the month of April to bring awareness toward child abuse. NRV CARES supports all of Montgomery County by providing these resources as well as workshops for families and children. For NRV CARES, this donation means a great deal to them as it helps ensure they can continue to provide education and support for their community.

Forbes lists Radford geospatial intelligence online certificate program among 2024's best

Forbes.com recently selected Radford University's online geospatial intelligence (GEOINT) certificate among the top GIS programs in the United States.

In rankings released this summer, Forbes placed Radford University No. 3 on its list of Best GIS Certificates Online of 2024.

"Radford University offers a geospatial intelligence (GEOINT) certificate aligned with national standards and the core competencies set by the U.S. Geospatial Intelligence Foundation," Forbes explained in a news release. "The program caters to working professionals and has no prerequisites beyond a high school diploma."

Offered through the university's Vinod Chachra IMPACT Lab in collaboration with the Department of Geospatial Science, the GEOINT curriculum is aligned with top industry certifications and provides extensive hands-on experience in geographic information systems (GIS), remote sensing, spatial analysis and GEOINT analysis.

The program prepares students for industry-aligned certification exams, certificates and other

New marker honors Revolutionary War patriots

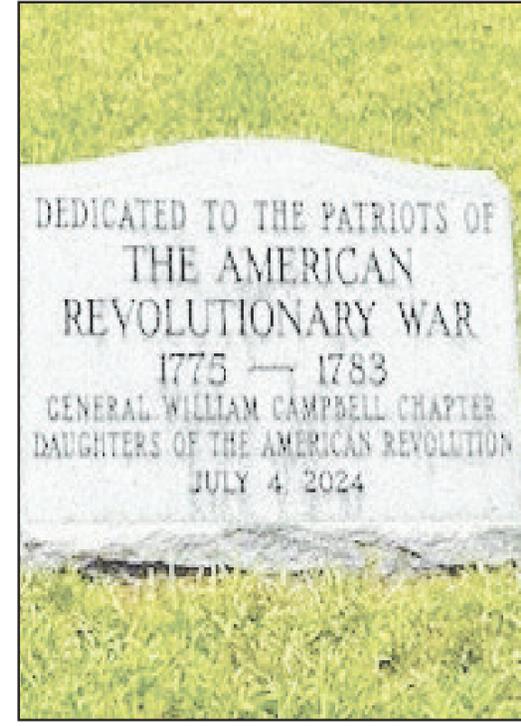

RADFORD - On Wednesday, Aug. 7, 2024, the General William Campbell Chapter of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution placed a granite marker in Radford's Bisset Park honoring patriots of the Revolutionary War.

This project was made possible with the assistance and support of Darryl Mullins of Mullins Funeral Home; Gary Harris, Commander of VFW Post 776; and Greg Holbrook director of the City of Radford Department of Parks and Recreation.

The inscription on the marker reads: "Dedicated to the Patriots of the American Revolutionary War, 1775-1783, General William Campbell Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, July 4, 2024."

Chapter members present for the installation were Rebecca Harris and Carolyn Kirk. An official dedication of the marker will be held at a later date.

Cube Fest 2024 presents immersive indigenous experiences

Virginia Tech's premier immersive music festival, Cube Fest, presents the latest innovations in sound and musical composition in one of the world's leading spatial audio environments — the Moss Arts Center Cube.

Cube Fest 2024: Immersive Indigenous Experiences is a series of concerts featuring Indigenous artists forging new creative paths with technology and tradition. Impossible to re-create at home on a stereo system or with headphones, soundscapes delivered through the Cube's world-leading audio system, complete with over 140 loudspeakers, are unforgettable.

The festival runs from Friday, Aug. 23, through Sunday, Aug. 25 with events taking place in the Cube and Perform Studio, both in the Moss Arts Center. Many of the events are free for the public, and all events are free for Virginia Tech students.

Cube Fest 2024 is sponsored by the Moss Arts Center; the Institute for Creativity, Arts, and Technology; the Virginia Tech Student Engineers' Council; and the Center for Humanities.

Cube Fest 2024 schedule:

"Listening Lounge"

Christopher Poovey, Zouning Lao, and Steve Ashby

Friday, Aug. 23; Saturday, Aug. 24; and Sunday, Aug. 25, 3 p.m.

Perform Studio

Free

Christopher Poovey is a composer, media artist, and creative coder who creates music and software that produce rich and colorful sound and encourage interactive structures. His work, "Inside a Mirage of Vertu," uses automated processes for spatialization, like ambisonic granulation, which generate 3D gestures and soundscapes.

Born in Guangdong, China, Zouning Liao's music draws inspiration from her fascination with nature and technology. Her recording captures the sounds of late summer, featuring a rich cricket orchestra and the songs of birds indigenous to Bloomington, Indiana.

A musician, composer, and sound artist, Steve Ashby's work focuses on sound found in the natural and digital worlds to discover places of intersection. His "A not so distant past" captures the sonic unfolding of time represented in the visual, while simultaneously giving voice to the visual stimulus.

"Echoes of the Ancestors"

Bill Crouse

Friday, Aug. 23, 5 and 7 p.m.

Cube

$10, free for Virginia Tech students

"Echoes of the Ancestors" combines audio and live traditional dancing by Allegany River Seneca dancers, sharing oral traditions of the Seneca people through movement, sound, music, and light. The piece will move from creation through seasons and a traditional women's dance. Bill Crouse is a self-taught painter and sculptor who specializes in Native art forms.

"Sounds in Motion"

DA Mekonnen, Shawn Greenlee, Arvcuken Noqisi, and Aline R S S de Souza
Friday, Aug. 23, 9 p.m.

Cube

$10, free for Virginia Tech students

DA Mekonnen's new experimental jazz project, dragonchild, brings the performance of "BLACK: Constellation X" in this immersive, multimedia spatial sound performance. Conceived and transmitted by Mekonnen, four one-sided LPs will be played simultaneously to create an immersive swarm. Mekonnen was the cofounder and long-time director of Debo Band and spent nine years with Silkroad Ensemble, under the direction of both Yo-Yo Ma and Rhiannon Giddens.

Shawn Greenlee is a composer, sound artist, and professor at Rhode Island School of Design, where he leads the Studio for Research in Sound and Technology. In this work, two 20-voice, erratic synthesizers operate as a roving "chorus" under the player's direction. As audio flows, the guiding action is like closing/opening gates in a lock on a waterway. The results are timbral and spatial churns, swells, floods and drains, motion in repetition, expansion, and contraction.

In "Enhake Konawv," a performance of technology in tradition, Arvcuken Noqisi uses seed beads and handmade beadwork as instrumentation in combination with a granular synthesis Max patch as well as a microscope camera with Isadora to examine the beads. The work examines the relationship between a non-Indigenous audience and the artist. A citizen of the Muscogee Nation, Noqisi is currently an undergraduate student at the Ohio State University.

A student in Virginia Tech's interdisciplinary ASPECT Ph.D. program and an instructor in the Department of Religion and Culture, Aline R S S de Souza's work refers to the artist-scholar's experience living in Brazil and her specific story of migration from family, which includes facing a variety of forms of violence.

"LIQUID / REAL"

Amelia Winger-Bearskin

Saturday, Aug. 24, 7 p.m.

Cube

$10, free for Virginia Tech students

"LIQUID / REAL" merges the ethereal realms of sound and the essential element of water to create a meditative, immersive art experience. Together with video projections summoning images of water, the piece intricately weaves live vocals, guitar harmonies, and transformative effects to transport audiences into vivid aquatic landscapes and speculative sonic worlds. The piece is conceived and performed by Winger-Bearskin, a multifaceted artist who is also a singer, AI researcher, and opera performer, and features live accompaniment by Eamon O'Connor, electric guitar.

An artist and academic at University College London, Angela McArthur's work explores the practice and theorization of aesthetics in spatial sound and ocean environments. "Pankopat" is a sound work focused on a community of elderly Nepalese women in Woolwich, southeast London.

Weilu Ge is a composer and media artist based in Cambridge, Massachusetts, who works with various media forms, from concert music and installation to video and innovative technology. "Tell" is a spatial soundscape composition that explores stories and music expressions of the Qiang people, an Indigenous group since ancient times living in the mountains in Central China. The original field recording part was collected during a field trip visiting a historical Qiang village in Sichuan, China.

A Chilean music technologist, composer, and improviser, Matias Vilaplana Stark is a current Ph.D. candidate in the composition and computer technologies program at the University of Virginia. "Funeral for a Whale" developed from a curiosity about the funeral practices of whales and other marine mammals, some of whom carry their deceased relative's body for days as a manifestation of their mourning.

A composer and audio researcher, Eric Lyon is a professor of practice in the School of Performing Arts at Virginia Tech and is a faculty fellow at the Institute for Creativity, Arts, and Technology. "A Sudden Light" was commissioned by Annie Stevens, Virginia Tech associate professor of percussion, as part of her project, "The Memory Palace," a concert of music and dance created for the Cube in 2024. This composition pursues the idea of music as a "memory palace," working with performed percussion sounds that reappear in transfigured forms.

"home: gokq"

Casey Koyczan and Andy Rudolph

Sunday, Aug. 25, 7 p.m.

Cube

$10, free for Virginia Tech students

"home: gokq" is an immersive audio and video performance demonstrating the artist's culture and its continued advancement through technology and experimentation, revealing a sense of life in Canada's Arctic. Casey Koyczan is a Dene interdisciplinary artist who uses various mediums to communicate how culture and technology can grow together to develop a better understanding of people, including where they come from and what they will be. Andy Rudolph is a freelance sound designer whose work spans nearly all facets of audio creation.

Indigenous Social: A Spatialized Mixtape
Sunday, Aug. 25, 9 p.m.

Cube

$10, free for Virginia Tech students

The Indigenous Social is an hour of cuts by popular Indigenous recording artists, hand-picked by Alicia Aldaz, Melissa Faircloth, Victoria Ferguson, and Eddie Polanco, and spatialized to a fully surround experience by Eric Lyon.

Ticketed performances are $10 for general admission and free for Virginia Tech students. Tickets can be purchased online; at the Moss Arts Center's box office, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday; or by calling 540-231-5300 during box office hours.

The performances will be held in the Moss Arts Center, located within the Cube at 190 Alumni Mall. Convenient parking is available in the North End Parking Garage on Turner Street and in downtown Blacksburg. Find more parking details online.

Delegate highlights General Assembly's support for education

This week and last have been “back to school” weeks for students in the 42nd House District, and I know teachers, parents, and students alike are excited for what this new school year will bring. We are working hard in the Virginia General Assembly each year to help improve educational outcomes, increase teacher pay, and ensure that our students are prepared for whatever life brings after their K-12 experience.

As mentioned in a past article, the General Assembly's budget actions in the 2024 legislative session will ensure that our teachers and support staff will be paid nearly $3,500 per year more than the national average. That's due to our insistence on a 3% salary increase over the next biennium, across the board. This investment is a necessary investment in those who help prepare our children for the future, and it should help teacher and support staff retention efforts now and into the future. $250 million has been set aside to fund loans for local school construction, and an additional $528 million will be spent over the biennium for early childhood education and childcare to help fund programs that will soon lose federal support. Also of consequence is $196 million in additional funding for at-risk students to ensure that all students receive the same excellent educational experience that they deserve. In addition to spending on priority educational programs, Governor Youngkin announced via Executive Order 33 that Virginia will now lead the way in providing a cell phone-free education to our students. While a great tool to ensure our kids can always reach their parents, cell phones have become a huge distraction in our classrooms and markedly inhibit learning. This new policy will help prevent our teachers from having to be the “cell phone police” and will ensure our students are doing what they go to school to do: learn.

Delegate Jason Ballard

Virginia General Assembly

On a separate note, I had the great pleasure of sitting down with Mr. George Conley this past week to discuss his candidacy for re-election to the Narrows Town Council. George has been an effective advocate for the citizens of Narrows, and I can always count on him to keep me in the loop on the needs of Narrows residents. Since first being elected in 2020, he has put the needs of Narrows above his own. In fact, he has not accepted any payment for his service on town council, instead putting that money toward the Narrows Christmas light initiative. George has been active in town personnel decisions, as well spearheading important infrastructure upgrades for Narrows residents. He is a public servant who is forward-facing to future needs, while also being responsive to the issues currently in front of him. It is for these reasons that I wholeheartedly endorse George Conley for re-election to Narrows Town Council this November 5th, and I look forward to continuing our work together on behalf of Narrows residents.

As the delegate representing the 42nd House District in the Virginia General Assembly, your concerns are my greatest priority. If ever I may be of assistance to you and your family, please do not hesitate to reach out to me at DeljBallard@House.Virginia.Gov. You can also follow me on Twitter @JasonBallardVA or like my Facebook page, Jason Ballard for Delegate, to keep up to date with what I am doing in Richmond and in our community on your behalf.

Strategies to protect your goals from consistent inflation

If you're like most investors, you've noticed the impact of higher inflation in recent years – whether at the gas pump or the grocery store. American investors are experiencing the effects of prolonged inflation for the first time since the early 1980s. As a result, many are concerned about how inflation levels will impact their ability to reach their long-term financial goals. While it may not be possible to avoid the effects of inflation altogether, there are several strategies investors can utilize to mitigate the impact of inflation on their financial plan. Here are three investment considerations that may help address inflation concerns and better prepare your goals for long-term success.

1 – Keep your money invested

When the inflation rate soared in 2022, stock and bond markets declined. Some investors responded by pulling money out of the market. This can be counterproductive as investors too often miss much of a market's recovery gain before they put their money back to work. For example, the U.S. stock market (as measured by the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, an unmanaged index of stocks often used as a benchmark of market performance), declined 25% between January and October 2022. But by the end of 2023, the S&P 500 regained nearly all of the ground lost in the bear market.1 It is normal for markets to go through ups and downs. Investors that stay the course and keep their money invested commonly see their investments make up gains that were lost in a sudden downturn. While it may be tempting to remove yourself from the market during volatile periods, it could be helpful to stay invested at a level that reflects your risk tolerance.

Josh Smith, CRPC

Financial Advisor, Ameriprise Financial Services, LLC

2 – If time is on your side, take advantage of stocks

Over time, stocks have historically outpaced inflation, an important consideration as you try to build wealth to achieve your ultimate financial goals with more confidence. This doesn't mean that year-in, year-out, stocks will keep you ahead of inflation. 2022 is a good example of a year when stocks declined as inflation rose. But if you have time to let your money work for you, stocks have historically outpaced the rise in living costs. According to data collected since 1871, stocks have grown faster than inflation for holding periods of 20 years or more.2 Investors who can ride the highs and lows of markets are often better suited to keep up, if not pass, the rate of inflation.

3 – For short-term money, seek higher yields

You may have money set aside for short-term needs, such as your emergency fund or to cover upcoming expenses. In these times of elevated inflation, you'll want to find ways to earn more competitive yields on your short-term savings. Search out options such as money market funds, CDs, short-term U.S. Treasury securities and other savings vehicles that offer yields that may keep pace with inflation. Utilizing these tools may allow you to stay more liquid with your investments while hedging against the impacts of inflation.

Whether an economic cycle brings conventional or elevated inflation it should be considered as a factor of your long-term financial plan. A financial advisor can help develop a comprehensive strategy that addresses the inflation environment today and over the long term.

professional credentials. The GEOINT curriculum comprises competency-based, self-paced courses that equip learners for the geospatial intelligence field. Students in the program develop knowledge directly related to the core competencies of the Geospatial Technology Competency Model developed by the U.S. Department of Labor and the U.S. Geospatial Intelligence Foundation.

“We are excited about this recognition from Forbes as it speaks to the quality and convenience of our outstanding geospatial intelligence certificate,” said Matt Dunleavy, executive director of the Vinod Chachra IMPACT Lab. “With this increased visibility, we hope to serve professionals working in GIS fields with our online and self-paced training.”

Forbes ranked 17 accredited colleges and universities that offer online GIS certificates in the U.S. by gathering 12 data points in such categories as credibility, affordability, student outcomes and student experience. More information on the ranking methodology can be found at Forbes.com.

“This recognition highlights the hard work of the faculty to create engaging, self-paced educational material that effectively trains learners to leverage geospatial technology to make better data-driven decisions,” said Andrew Foy, professor of geospatial science.

Radford's geospatial intelligence certificate program focuses on geospatial problem-solving skills, data fusion, geospatial technologies and their applications to disaster response, emergency management, infrastructure and resource management, military and policy operations, big data analysis and cybersecurity.

Students completing the certificate program can use geospatial analysis techniques, skills and tools to derive meaningful information from geospatial data, solve geospatial intelligence problems in multiple situations and communicate their findings in a professional manner to both professional and public audiences.

In addition to the geospatial intelligence certificate, Radford's IMPACT Lab offers a certificate in cybersecurity and a credential in data science, as well as training for K-12 teachers.

RADFORD SPORTS

Former Highlander chasing Olympic dream

Marty Gordon

NRVsports@ourvalley.org

Nick Mayhugh graduated from Radford University after a stellar career on the soccer field including time spent on the U.S. National Paralympic Soccer team that played on the international stage.

After soccer was cancelled in the Tokyo Olympic games in Tokyo, he turned to the track in hopes of making his Olympic dream come true.

In Tokyo, he won the 100m T37 and 200m T37, setting world record times in both. He also won gold in the 4x100m medley.

Mayhugh, of Charlotte, North Carolina, had an incredibly successful showing at the Paralympic Trials four years ago setting a new world record for the 100-meter event, a new American record for the 200 meter event, becoming a national champion in both events as well as being ranked first in the world for both events.

"I have always wanted to represent my country on the Olympic stage and Team USA gave me an opportunity to do that in track," Mayhugh said. "After soccer was cut from the games, Team USA recruited me to run track and I have dedicated everything mentally, physically, and emotionally to track and field. I wanted to challenge myself and see how far I can go. To see if I really can do it, and here I am, proving myself right and a lot of people wrong."

He calls it an overwhelming feeling, a sigh of relief in a sense.

"To know that I'm that much closer to what I've worked for every day for the last two years. It feels good to see all the hard work me and my team have put in, pay off, but the jobs not done."

For Mayhugh, soccer was a lifesaver. He had always noticed something with the left side of his body, thus he worked even harder to use just his right side especially on the soccer field.

"I never wanted to be looked at different or treated different because my norm was different. I remember being in my room and spending hours trying to teach myself how to tie my shoes with both hands, teaching myself to walk without a limp and even getting dressed without falling over. Going into middle school, I made a decision to not tell anybody and to keep it to myself," Mayhugh said.

He initially had told his parents and medical personnel, but no one really believed something was wrong because he was so active.

The problem made him work even harder.

"I used to leave practices crying because I couldn't use my left foot as well as I could my right, I couldn't really feel it," he said. "I think my self-awareness played a huge part of why I am in the position I am in today. I spent countless hours after practice working extra, or at home with my brother working on my left foot and doing cone drills to make myself better technically."

He continued to work hard at the game he loved, and nothing was going to stop him from playing at a higher level. But in 2010 as a ninth grader, he suffered a grand mal seizure.

"I'll never forget the first words my doctor spoke, I interrupted her and asked when I could play soccer again and she said she didn't think I would ever be able to play soccer again. She initially thought I had a brain tumor. I remember seeing the life get sucked out of my mom when she heard those words, but I knew that couldn't be true. It had to of been something else," Mayhugh said.

The family got a second opinion, but it still wasn't the message they wanted to hear.

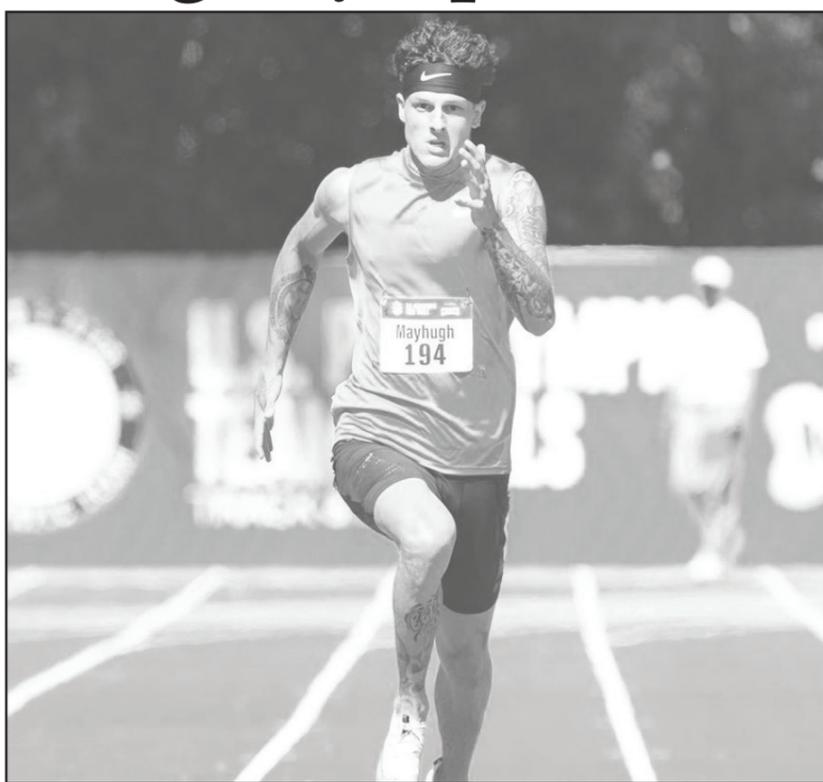

Mayhugh was told he a very unique situation that medical personnel had not seen before. An MRI showed a grey circle on the right side of his brain called a "dead spot."

Doctors said it was the result of a stroke in utero (before birth) or shortly after birth. Then all the dots sort of started to connect.

"The dead spot was just an inactive part of my brain and it made sense as to why I couldn't really feel my left side, my arm, fingers, my leg and my foot, everything, all the nerves and pathways were inactive. I had finally had an answer for everything, and my parents finally believed me and understood why I complained and said everything I did growing up. It was like a huge weight was lifted off my shoulders, a big sigh of relief because they finally believed me," he said.

Doctors told him he would never play soccer ever again, but he was determined to continue the game he loved. He took the field on a youth team of the D.C United Soccer Academy, and soccer seemed to be the only way he could prove to the world he was not different. After some coaxing of the coaching staff at Radford University, he walked on the men's team.

"The game itself taught me structure," Mayhaugh said. "If I didn't play soccer,

FILE PHOTO

Former Radford University soccer player Nick Mayhugh is set to participate in this week's Paralympic Olympics in Paris.

I really don't know what I would be doing today. It's what I was meant to do, I thoroughly believe that, and I will continue to play for as long as my body will let me."

Because of his medical condition, he was invited to the U.S. Paralympic team camp for players with neurological conditions.

Representing his country, according to Mayhugh, in international play was an indescribable feeling.

"I think it's something every kid growing up playing their respected sport dreams of. To be given the opportunity to actually fulfill my dream of wearing the crest and play the sport I love is something few athletes get the chance to do, I will never take it for granted," he said.

Unfortunately, soccer was taken out of the Tokyo Summer Games in 2020.

The success at the global level just keeps coming for Mayhugh as he also collected many accolades while playing for the U.S. Paralympic soccer team. In 25 national team games played he scored 34 goals and notched 31 assists while playing in 1,384 minutes. In 2019, he was named the U.S. Soccer Player of the Year with a Disability. He led the charge on offense for the fourth ranked national team, its highest-ever world ranking, the midfielder netted 19 goals in 11 games at the IFPCF World Cup and the 2019 Para Pan American Games.

Mayhugh continues to overcome many obstacles.

"My mentality. I've never let my diagnosis, or my disability define me. I've always had the mentality that no matter what I do, I will be successful. I am very picky of who I allow to be around me, and my family and support system are a crucial part to my career, without them I wouldn't be here. My mom, dad and especially my brother have been my biggest fans throughout my entire life and they're the reason I do what I do, they're my motivation to do everything I set out to do. Aside from them it's a personal vendetta I have with myself, I want to push myself to be the best athlete and person I can be. And until I do that, I will strive for what's next, what else can I do, how far can I really go? And no matter what it is, I know I'll be successful. It's just the way I'm wired."

Now he runs for the United States, Radford University and himself.

Christiansburg native plants his flag in a growing sport

Virginia Tech alumnus Kyle Bailey has built a successful career as the host of a radio sports show in Charlotte and recently broadcast USA Football's top international event for flag football – a low-contact sport rapidly gaining in popularity and set to debut in the Olympics in 2028.

It may come as a surprise to many that the host of Charlotte's top-rated afternoon sports radio show actually got his master's degree in geography and geographic information science.

But Bailey '09, '14, M.S. '15 knew better than to leave anything to chance given the uncertainty in the world of sports journalism.

"That was my backup plan," Bailey said of his degree in geography. "If this whole broadcasting thing didn't work out, I wanted to have something a little bit more solid to fall back on."

This three-time Virginia Tech graduate and Christiansburg native certainly has mapped out a successful career for himself thus far. He not only hosts his own sports radio show in the Queen City – "The Kyle Bailey Show" airs weekdays from 3-6 p.m. – but he also hosts the pregame shows for the NFL's Carolina Panthers and NBA's Charlotte Hornets and various other specialty programming, such as NFL Draft and PGA Tour specials.

More recently, Bailey dove into the streaming realm, broadcasting a sport rapidly gaining worldwide popularity and attention.

Bailey was chosen to be the play-by-play voice for USA Football's top international flag football event. Working for HomeTeam Live, a company that specializes in broadcast-quality streaming of amateur sports, the Christiansburg native spent a week in Los Angeles in mid-July broadcasting USA Football's "Week at The One," a series of elite flag football competitions held at Dignity Health Sports Park, home of the five-time Major League Soccer Cup winners LA Galaxy.

Bailey had connections with USA Football, and organizers reached out to him to gauge his interest in helping them revamp the broadcasting of the event. A few months ago, they offered him a contract.

"I said, 'Yeah, absolutely.' It all happened quickly," Bailey said. "I've been primarily a radio host, a talk show host, for the last several years, but I'd done enough play-by-play that I had some stuff to pass along. It's really where my passion is, and so they heard it, and they said, 'Oh yeah, that sounds great. Let's do it.'"

Wes Bryant, a former football player at Wake Forest, served as the color analyst. The event featured the Junior International Cup in which boys and girls ages 15 and under and ages 17 and under competed against teams from Canada, Japan, Mexico, and Panama. It also featured the Select Bowl in which various select teams composed of athletes trying to make the U.S. National Team competed. The week then concluded with The One Flag Championship in which invited club teams consisting of both youth and adults from across more than 10 divisions competed for a national championship.

"I loved every bit of it. It was awesome," Bailey said. "I could never live in Southern California, but that was a wonderful event. It was first class, top to bottom."

"We [he and Bryant]

went into it thinking, 'OK, these kids are playing for something significant. Let's give them a significant sounding broadcast.' And that's what we did, and the parents were thrilled with it. The CEO came up to us on the second day and was raving about how much everybody seemed to love what we were doing. So we were proud of the work we did, for sure."

The opportunity offered Bailey a chance to promote a sport gaining in popularity. According to the International Federation of American Football, which governs the sport globally, 20 million people are playing flag football across more than 100 countries. Last fall, the International Olympic Committee approved the addition of flag football as an Olympic sport starting with the 2028 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles.

In addition, according to USA Football, the number of boys and girls ages 6-17 playing the sport increased 38 percent from 2014-23, reaching a peak of more than 1.6 million this past year. Much of that growth is being driven by women. Eleven U.S. states sanction high school girls' varsity flag football with several others exploring the possibility through pilot programs. Also, 25 colleges at the NAIA level sponsor women's flag football.

Of note, Jada Vick, the daughter of former Virginia Tech football and NFL superstar Michael Vick, received a scholarship to play flag football at Reinhardt University, 60 miles north of Atlanta. She will be a sophomore this fall.

"For boys, flag's still big for them, but they're always going to treat flag football like a summer sport, and that's OK," Bailey said. "But for the women, there's no tackle football infrastructure for women, and honestly a lot of women don't want to play tackle football. Some do, but a lot of them don't, so flag football offers them an incredible opportunity."

"The U.S. national team is incredible. I've got two daughters and a son, and I would love for my girls to participate in this. I think it would be amazing."

Bailey hopes to be asked to broadcast The Flag Football World Championships held in Lahti, Finland, in late August, though it again would mean being away from his three children — all under the age of 4 — and wife, Camille '16, a Virginia Tech alumna whom Bailey met in 2014 during his second year of graduate school while giving her and her father a campus tour.

But the event would be another achievement in a career that kicked off at Clear Channel — now iHeart — in Richmond after graduation before he returned to the New River Valley and launched an afternoon radio sports show that became popular in Southwest Virginia. While doing that, he finished a second undergraduate degree in geospatial and environmental analysis from the College of Natural Resources and Environment to go with his communications degree from the College of Liberal Arts and Human Sciences, and he earned his master's degree in geography.

Bailey left Blacksburg in 2016 to host a morning sports show in Charleston, South Carolina, and do play-by-play for The Citadel men's basketball games — a job that led to a move to Charlotte, one of the fastest-growing cities in the nation and one with a growing sports scene.

"Kyle is an example of a broadcaster from Virginia Tech who has worked hard to refine his craft and make a name for himself in a big market," said Bill Roth, the radio play-by-play voice for Virginia Tech football and someone who oversees the sports media and analytics program within the School of Communication at the university. "It's exciting to drive along Interstate 77, turn on WFNZ and say, 'Hey, that's a Hokie hosting one of Charlotte's top sports radio shows.'"

With a long-term contract and a thriving sports show in a city looking to be one of the best sports destinations in the Southeast, Bailey won't need his backup plan any time soon.

"I can accomplish everything that I want to accomplish in radio right here in Charlotte," he said. "I don't need to go anywhere."

"This is one of the few cities where the cranes never get put away. There are always new high rises, new buildings, new apartments. All the banks are here, and businesses are moving here. This city, even though the NFL and the NBA teams are bad, has committed to being a sports city. I think it's only a matter of time before we get a Major League Baseball team in Charlotte, and they just tried to steal the Western and Southern Open [a prominent tennis tournament] from Cincinnati."

"They're doubling and tripling down on getting as many sporting events here in Charlotte as possible, so I've got no reason to go anywhere else."

Hokies position preview: Strong returning receiver unit

As the 2024 football season rapidly approaches, the Hokies will undoubtedly have lots of eyes on one of their most intriguing positions: wide receiver.

Highlighted by the return of familiar faces like Ali Jennings, Jaylin Lane, Stephen Gosnell and Da'Quan Felton, Tech's wide receiver room has its sights set on success. Every week of Fall Camp, the position preview series, presented by Farm Bureau Insurance, will break down the Virginia Tech football roster. In this position preview, let's look at the Hokies' wide receiver room that aims to capitalize with returning production under assistant head coach and wide receivers coach Fontel Mines.

One of the more intriguing storylines from the "Bad Boyz" is the return of Ali Jennings. Jennings, who suffered a season-ending ankle injury against Purdue last season, looks to return to the Hokies offense with a sharpness and speed that has given him success in the past. The Hokies saw exactly what the Richmond, Virginia native could give to the offense in the home opener against Old Dominion, as Jennings corralled five passes for two touchdowns and 72 yards en route to a 36-17 victory.

Jennings boasts a skillset that has tons of potential for the upcoming season. Tech is looking for production akin to his two years spent at Old Dominion, where the receiver earned All-Sun Belt First Team recognition with 54 receptions for 959 yards and nine touchdowns in 2022. The 6-foot-2, 205-pound wideout registered 1,066 yards the season prior, the third most in program history. If Jennings can mirror his 17.2 yards per catch achieved in 2023, his presence will be a mainstay on offense.

Workhorses such as Da'Quan Felton and Jaylin Lane also look to make their impact felt once again this season alongside Stephen Gosnell and the rest of the corps. Felton, Lane and Gosnell all return as graduate students for the 2024 season, allowing the trio's veteran presence to shine through on offense.

A Portsmouth, Virginia native, Felton found his home on the long ball last season. The 6-foot-5, 216-pound receiver caught passes of 70, 62, and 54 yards against Boston College, Syracuse and Pittsburgh respectively in 2023, showcasing his ability to stretch the field vertically. The wideout's massive size and strength recently earned him recognition on Bruce Feldman's "Freaks List," which recognizes athletes for their physical qualities. Felton's 667 receiving yards ranked first amongst the offense, with his most impressive performance being a two-touchdown and 133-yard affair against Virginia. In second was Lane, a Clover, South Carolina native who amassed six touchdowns over 12 games last season. The 5-foot-10 Lane posted a 102-yard game against conference foe Wake Forest last year, his strongest performance among his 538 receiving yards on the season. With the absence of Jennings last season, Lane stepped into a more involved role and will likely play a similar role in 2024. Gosnell tallied 22 catches for 348 yards and three scores in 2023. His work ethic and consistency have drawn praise from the coaching staff throughout the summer.

Another receiver to watch is sophomore Ayden Greene. Greene, a Knoxville, Tennessee native, played in 12 games during the 2023 season and found his season high in receiving against Rutgers. The three-star recruit was recently named a Spring Practice Standout by 247Sports, and he's continued his strong performance in preseason camp. However, Greene will have to compete with other receivers in the room for a larger role.

The wide receiver room has generated plenty of preseason buzz, not only for its potential this season but also for those who Mines and staff have brought to the program. In a strong recruiting effort, Tech added freshmen Keylen "Brodie" Adams and Chanz Wiggins, playmakers that look to contribute to an already explosive air game this fall.

Adams is a massive signing for Mines and the Hokies. The 6-foot-2, 180-pound receiver amassed 4,400 receiving yards and 66 touchdowns over a four-year career at Green Run High School, setting a new school and Virginia state record. The Virginia Beach, Virginia native was a three-time VHSL All-State Receiver and was an integral part in Green Run's 31 game win streak over Beach District teams. His impressive output in high school landed him as the third-best overall Virginia recruit by On3 and Rivals and fourth-best by ESPN. Adams picked Virginia Tech over names like Michigan, Ohio State and Alabama, and has star potential with his speed and agility.

Wiggins brings a special combination of size and speed to the offense. The 6-foot-3 receiver recorded 47 receptions for 815 yards along with 15 touchdowns in his senior season at King George High School. Wiggins flew through Virginia-Class 4 football, earning him VHSL All-Battlefield District First Team recognition at both wide receiver and defensive back. Named Most Valuable Team Player at King George in 2023, he helped lead the Foxes to their 35-3 record from 2021 to 2023. Wiggins' four-star ranking from ESPN landed him as the fifth overall recruit from Virginia by Rivals.

Redshirt sophomore Xayvion Turner-Bradshaw, redshirt freshmen Takey Heath who have both quietly put on impressive camp performances should provide plenty of depth along with redshirt freshman Chance Fitzgerald. Bradshaw gained experience in 10 games last season, while Heath appeared in three, following an impressive high school career. The 5-foot-10 Heath recorded 42 receptions for 912 yards and ten touchdowns his senior year, garnering VHSL Class 5 All-State honors and a Highland Springs team MVP. 247Sports placed Heath as a three-star recruit and the #27 highest-ranked recruit coming out of Virginia.

A combination of veteran experience and youthful presence looks to propel this year's wide receiver core to a season of dominance.
