Parade of Lights held in Fairlea

By Sarah Richardson

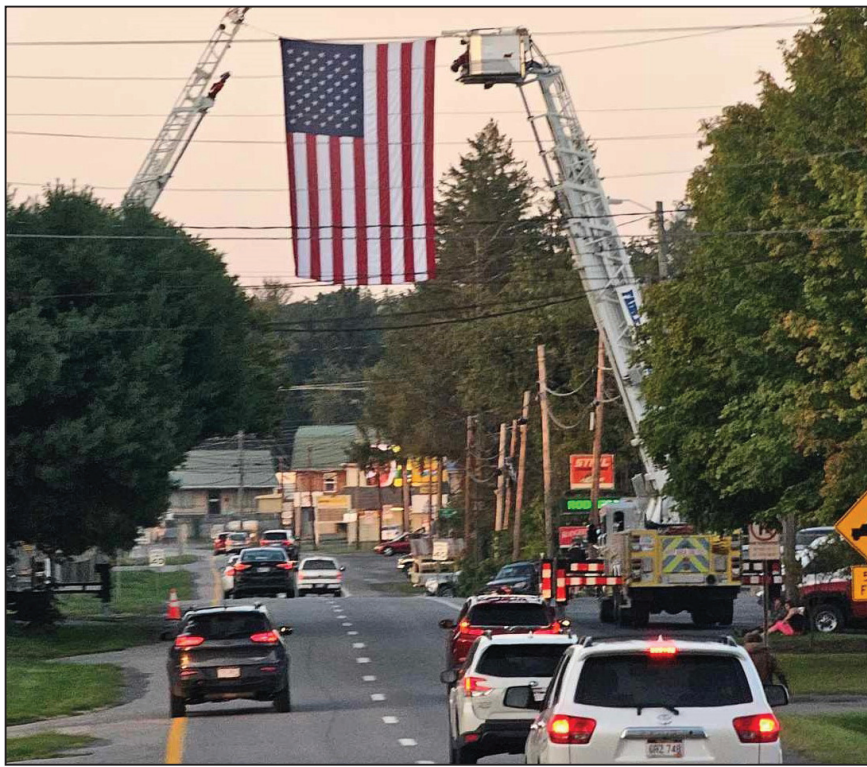

The eighth annual Parade of Lights was held on Monday, Sept. 11, in Fairlea, the 22nd anniversary of the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks. Local first responders lined up on the midway at the West Virginia State Fairgrounds before taking off at dusk on their parade route. A slew of fire trucks, ambulances, police cars, and other EMS vehicles drove from Fairlea to the Lowes in Lewisburg and back. The Greenbrier County Fire and Emergency Responder's Association hosts the event each year to honor those who lost their lives in the 9/11 attacks, as well as emergency responders across the Greenbrier Valley.

Before the candlelit vigil after the parade, Rev. James Hylton, a recently retired fire and rescue employee, spoke to the crowd about those who are still suffering both mentally and physically from the 9/11 events, and reported that the death toll from 9/11 continues to rise.

"I want you to remember why we're here tonight," said Rev. Hylton. "We are here for everyone who passed away 22 years ago today from 9/11. This terrible, terrible incident rocked America, and is still rocking us today. It will continue to rock us after we're gone. A lot of people say, 'How's that?' and it's because people are still suffering. And one of the things we've got to look at is they need our prayers."

The vigil closed with the playing of Amazing Grace and Taps.

The American flag hangs proudly in Fairlea over 219 for the parade.

Ronceverte City Council discusses Farmer's Market, Accelerate WV program

By Dakota Baker

The Ronceverte City Council gathered for their regularly scheduled meeting on Monday, Sept. 9. This meeting was a reschedule of the original meeting scheduled on Monday, Sept. 4, due to the Labor Day holiday.

The meeting began with a comment period, with a concerned citizen bringing to the city's attention a recent influx of the homeless population in town. She reports seeing groups of people on Mullican's and CSX property. Due to it being private property, this limits the scope of what the city police are able to do without permission from the property owners. She said she wants to reach out and provide connections with local churches and other outreach services to assist them. Mayor Deena Pack responded, "The city is aware and we're working on trying to come up with solutions." The citizen also recommended getting the local churches involved to help get supplies for the homeless.

In other news, Council announced that there is a proposal in the works for a farmers market to start operating in Ronceverte on Friday evenings. Council approved this proposal, pending all permits are obtained. If all goes to plan the Farmers Market should begin in May next year.

It was also reported that the new splash pad was open for 86 days before being closed for the year. A member of the water department estimated that roughly 5,000 kids enjoyed the splash pad this year. The splash pad

"The giant flea market is one of the most popular events on grounds," State Fair CEO Kelly Collins stated. "Whether you are looking for a unique shopping experience or just cleaning and need to get rid of stuff, this event has something for everyone."

Greenbrier County Commission proclaims 'Constitution Week,' approves $1.5M for WSS water project

By Matthew Young, RealWV

The Greenbrier County Commission, on Tuesday, signed a "proclamation for [a] Constitution Week declaration," prepared by the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR).

Representatives of the DAR were on-hand for Commission President Tammy Tincher's reading of the proclamation.

"Whereas, Sept. 17, 2023 marks the 236th anniversary of the drafting of the Constitution of the United States of America, by the Constitutional Convention. [...] It is fitting and proper to accord official recognition to this magnificent document, and its memorable anniversary."

"The Greenbrier County Commission authorizes," Tincher continued, "By virtue of the authority vested in the State of West Virginia and the County of Greenbrier, we do hereby proclaim the week of Sept. 17 through 23, 2023 as 'Constitution Week,' and ask our citizens to affirm the ideals of the framers of the Constitution in 1787 by vigilantly protecting the freedoms guaranteed to us through this guardian of our liberties, remembering that lost rights may never be regained."

Next, the commission approved a $1.5 million funding commitment for the Ridges Appurtenant Replacement TIF (Tax Increment Financing) Project in White Sulphur Springs.

Providing an overview of the project was Region 4's Cassandra Lawson, who said, "This project will replace five out-stations that serve the area known as 'The Ridges.' It's really a project that's critical in nature, because if any of those pumps go out, it could interrupt service to that area."

Gov. Justice announces record $7B annual tourism impact for 2022

West Virginia traveler spending up 17% from pre-pandemic levels, far outpacing national level

Gov. Jim Justice joined more than 300 tourism-industry members to announce West Virginia’s best tourism year ever, with the industry’s economic impact exceeding $7 billion last year. That number represents a 17% increase in visitor spending compared to pre-pandemic levels, far higher than the United States’ overall 1% post-pandemic tourism recovery.

West Virginia saw more visitors last year, and those visitors spent more money than they had in previous years. Tourism Economics, an Oxford Economics company that measures tourism spending and economic impact, found that visitors to the state had direct spending of $5.3 billion last year, an all-time high. Tourism Economics provides impact studies for 30 destinations and is the official research provider of U.S. Travel, which promotes American tourism around the world.

West Virginia’s tourism industry has seen dramatic growth since Gov. Justice took office in 2017. Visitor spending has grown more than 30% - or more than $1 billion a year - since 2016, despite a global pandemic.

Traveler spending in West Virginia contributes significantly to the state’s economy. Food and beverage spending topped $1.4 billion in 2022. Lodging spending surpassed $800 million for the first time ever, led by a 275% increase in short-term rental revenue since 2019.

Visitor spending generated $887 million in tax revenues last year, with $520 million going directly to our state and local governments. Tourism-generated tax dollars contributed approximately $715 per household to maintaining government services.

These record-breaking tourism numbers were presented at the annual Governor’s Conference on Tourism being held at Canaan Valley Resort State Park. In remarks at the conference, Gov. Justice recognized the more than 300 industry officials on site and the important role they’ve played in growing the tourism economy.

“You’ve done an unbelievable job taking our state’s tourism industry to the next level, and I could not be more proud,” Gov. Justice said. “All we needed to do was show the world what we already knew we had in West Virginia, and now with these numbers today, it’s truly amazing to see what we have achieved. Tourism’s been one of my top priorities as Governor from the very beginning of my time in office, and it’s wonderful to see our investment pay off in a major way.”

The tourism industry supports more than 53,000 West Virginia jobs, one out of every 16 in the state. Those jobs account for nearly $2 billion in annual income.

“Gov. Justice’s commitment to tourism has paid off in a huge way,” Chelsea Ruby, Secretary of the West Virginia Department of Tourism, said. “We’re proud of the growth we’ve been able to achieve and the impact it has on our state’s economy. But most of all, we’re thrilled that more people than ever are discovering what West Virginia has to offer. We have the best tourism destination in the country, and these numbers show that the rest of the world is receiving that message.”

WV Legislative Interims: Committee on Regional Jail and Correctional Facility Authority discusses bail and release efforts

WV Press Staff Report

The West Virginia Legislative Oversight Committee on Regional Jail and Correctional Facility Authority (LOCRCJFA), on Monday, had the opportunity to question a panel of criminal justice professionals regarding the conditions and circumstances of bail and release in the state.

Joining the panel were Kanawha County Circuit Judge Maryclaire Akers, Logan County Magistrate Joseph Mendez, Tyler County Prosecuting Attorney Luke Furbie, Kanawha County Public Defender Ronni Sheets, and Tommy Weatherholtz of Weatherholtz Bail Bonding.

Del. Tom Fast, R-Fayette, was the first to question the panelists, beginning with Weatherholtz.

After confirming the bail bonds process - whereby the bond company charges the released person a fee to act as a guarantor for future court appearances - Fast asked, “Is there anything broken with that system?”

“Are we ending up putting non-violent defendants, or alleged offenders I’ll say because this is pre-trial, are we putting a bunch of those people in jail,” Fast continued his question. “Is this system keeping people out of jail, or are the bails being set so high that they can’t even afford you?”

In response, Weatherholtz said, “Yes and no.”

“There are a lot of good magistrates and good judges,” Weatherholtz continued. “There are certain magistrates and judges that I see across the state that are predominantly setting cash-only bonds for non-violent offenders, and I see a lot of property-only bonds for out-of-state residents. They’re forced to use West Virginia property to get out – that’s the only way they can get out.”

“I’m not bashing the judicial system – the magistrates or the judges, but I do believe there are some bad calls being made,” Weatherholtz noted, adding, “I’m not going to say that it’s (the system) working well.”

“We have one magistrate in one county we were tracking, 29 bonds in a row were cash-only,” Weatherholtz continued. “The majority of them were non-violent traffic citations.” Fast directed his next question to Magistrate Mendez, asking, “Do you see a breakdown in our system the way it is right now? Are we putting a lot of non-violent people - just CARRY Legislative Interims from Page 2 stacking them up in jail prior to trial?”

While clarifying that he can only speak for himself, Mendez said that most non-violent offenders are released on personal recognizance (PR), meaning there is no bail requirement. However, repeat-offenders and other similar circumstances will impact a magistrate’s decision.

Sen. Jack David Woodrum, R-Summers, posed the next question to Tyler County Prosecutor Luke Furbie.

“Is there a better way of doing what we’re doing right now?” Woodrum asked.

Furbie, who also serves as president of the Prosecuting Attorneys Association, said, “We would like to see more emphasis on electronic monitoring, court supervision. We think these things are effective. When folks have someone to report in to, it tends to encourage them to show up for court.”

Woodrum then turned his attention to Public Defender Ronni Sheets, asking if she believes that inconsistencies with bail practices from one county to the next creates a problem.

“I do think that the amount of time someone spends incarcerated pre-trial should not depend on where they live geographically in West Virginia,” Sheets said.

Committee Chair Del. David Kelly, R-Tyler, then questioned Kanawha County Circuit Judge Maryclaire Akers, asking her if every circuit makes use of bail bonding services.

“No,” Akers replied. “Historically, Kanawha County - which I can speak about - did not allow bail bondsmen for a long time. There was actually an administrative order that was entered by all seven judges at the time saying that they would not be allowed. Then the state law took effect, and now it is up to each judge if they want bail bondsmen or not.”

Kelly then asked Akers if she allows defendants to utilize bail bonds services, to which she replied, “I do not.”

“In my court and in my cases, I have not found it to be effective,” Akers said. “I’ve not found it to be something that is necessary. There’s not a time when I would say that I would never [allow] it, but it is not typically the practice in my courtroom.”

“When I am considering bail or a bond position, I will listen to both sides - the state and the defense - about why a particular defendant should be admitted to bond,” Akers continued. “There is no absolute rule. Each judge should look at each case on a case-by-case basis.”

LOCRCJFA will meet again during next month’s Interim Legislative Session, scheduled for Oct. 15 – 17.

WVDOH accepts bids to permanently fix Hinton sinkhole, other projects

A project that will fix a massive sinkhole once and for all on WV 20 in Hinton is among 31 projects included in a bed letting conducted by the West Virginia Division of Highways (WVDOH) on Tuesday, Sept. 12.

The project will be funded by bonds sold through Gov. Jim Justice’s $2.8 billion Roads to Prosperity program.

In June 2022, a large sinkhole opened along WV 20 near the Hinton Police Department after an old underground drainage structure collapsed. WVDOH work crews put in a temporary drainage structure and filled the hole, but heavy rains washed out the temporary repair in November 2022.

WVDOH crews then put in a temporary bridge to span the hole until more repairs could be made. In January 2023, crews filled the hole with enough rock and dirt to fill an Olympic size swimming pool until permanent repairs can be made.

Once the project is awarded, contractors will bore a new hole under WV 20 and install a new drainage pipe to carry Brier Branch under the road.

“This will be a permanent rerouting of the stream and a closure of the old drainage structure,” said Joe Pack, P.E., WVDOH Chief Engineer of Operations. “It’s a permanent fix.”

Once the work is complete the temporary bridge will be removed and WV 20 repaved.

Now You See It - Now You Don't

By Karen Cohen

I have friends who just moved to an area on the Greenbrier River which is “populated.” That means they can see their neighbors’ houses from theirs and vice versa. Wondering what plantings they can introduce into their yard which will quickly turn into privacy fencing, I started to research some that are easy to grow. With over 200 species, I have direct experience with just a handful of viburnums. We planted three bushes three years ago and already they have taken off. Presently each one stands five feet tall and about the same in width. The Prague Viburnum grows well in zones 5-8. It has an open branch style which is easily seen through and matures to about 8 feet in height with a 10 foot spread.

Only slightly fragrant, it is multi-stemmed and produces cream colored small flowers in clusters in the spring which turn into berries in early fall. Its leaves drop late fall and grow back the following spring. We cut out a few of the under branches in the late fall to encourage healthy new growth in the spring but that will also reduce the amount of blooms that grow on old growth wood. We used this viburnum to replace a small hemlock tree that we had planted in the front of our house. That evergreen grew so quickly that it soon towered at 12 feet tall and partially blocked the view of our driveway, so we opted to remove it before it got bigger than our house and replace it with some “airy” deciduous bushes.

Another lovely viburnum is the Leatherleaf viburnum. Not being a fan of the latin names, I will skip those! This bush has a creamy flat type of clustery flowers also in the spring and grows just fine in the shade. It has a large green fuzzy leaf on long branches. I plan to trim some lower branches in the winter to take some bottom weight off the 6 foot bush. We discovered this summer that a large hornet nest was tucked deep inside the 7 foot wide bush. We never saw until a bear pulled it all apart one night as we slept, just the nest, not the whole bush.

My favorite viburnum, the Eastern Snowball bush, came from a root that I dug out of my parents’ yard in New Jersey many years ago. It stands about nine feet tall and every year in the spring puts out an abundance of huge white, fluffy, round clusters of flowers, all about four inches in diameter. It is called a “showy bloomer” and that it is! I have given it zero care over the decade and insects and deer do not chew on it. I have thinned out the bottom branches a bit to give it good air circulation and I watered it weekly the first year it went into the ground. Sun loving, it is winter hardy in zones 6-9. It has been covered in real snow and made it into the spring just fine. The deciduous branches when laden with blossoms do begin to droop from the weight. That’s when I cut off a bunch and take them into the house for a spectacular, long lasting flower bouquet on the table. Remember that pruning this bush is done ONLY in the spring when the blooms turn brown. This will encourage new blooms and a compact shape. If you prune it in the fall, you will be taking off new growth for the following year.

All of these aforementioned bushes give your yard some spring flowers for cutting and viewing!

Another fast growing easy to care for bush is boxwood. You can have fun shaping these into round or square hedges or even sculpt into animals! If you heard they smell like used cat litter, I can testify that they do indeed. I suggest NOT putting them outside under house windows and don’t line your porch or front outside stairs with them either. Otherwise, I don’t smell ours at all unless I am clipping them which I do every year. I like to keep our boxwoods at a low, squat shape at around 3-4 feet in height. Give them room to grow widthwise when you put them in the ground; they like to grow both up and across. Ours are all four feet in diameter. I keep the bottoms “open” for air to circulate. I prefer to see the ground around them just in case of hiding snakes. Oops, did you just gasp?

A pest to the boxwood that I have dealt with annually, is a tiny yellow-orange flying insect known as the boxwood leafminer. It hatches in swarms and they feed off the tender new leaf growth in the spring. I keep a watchful eye on my boxwoods. When I see a swarm rising up from the bush, I spray them and the leaves with soapy water. It works to coat the leaves that can eventually be destroyed by the larvae and it seems to weigh down the flying adult’s wings, too. I keep spraying liberally and several times a day for the next few days until hatching is over. This has proved to work and none of the ends of the branches’ leaves turn brown if they are caught in time. Note: if you see zig zag white lines in any plants’ leaves, it is probably from leaf miners. Their larvae molt four times in a three week period so keep a lookout for them.

Lastly, I will mention bamboo for a fast growing privacy fence. For some folks, it is a curse word! Plant this at your own discretion. You must keep an eye on this plant or it will walk right into your neighbor’s yard and take over yours, too. With over 1400 species of bamboo, it is the fastest growing plant on this planet. It is considered renewable and can replace lumber which is slower in regrowth. Initially it takes five years for bamboo to break ground when planted and then it can soar to 90 feet in one year. In the USA, laws are put in place to require landowners to keep running stands of bamboo contained to their property line only to keep neighbors happy.

When I toured Indonesia, I was surprised to see three story buildings using bamboo rather than lumber as studs and floor joists! It is strong, renewable, and inexpensive to grow. Gardeners love to use bamboo for stakes in the garden, too, and the leaves are great to add to your compost pile because they are high in silica. So there’s some choices for getting your own live privacy fence. Plant it now in very early fall so the roots get settled in. Water once a week until frosty climates are predicted. You can opt to cover your new bushes in the deep winter with burlap but we have not done that yet and they have all survived. You can create privacy that is beautiful and practical!

In Summersville, a new state park brings cautious optimism for a growing tourism industry

While details are scarce, tourism officials have big plans for West Virginia’s newest state park. Business owners hope it brings more visitors while acknowledging that some residents have concerns about overcrowding.

By P.R. Lockhart for Mountain State Spotlight

Travelers headed south on Route 19 toward the New River Gorge are greeted with views of lush green trees, glimpses of a crystal clear lake and, as of last month, a new sight: a sign welcoming them to Summersville Lake State Park.

The park, which was announced by the Justice administration at the last minute shortly before August’s three-day special legislative session and officially designated days after, is technically already open to the public. But much of West Virginia’s 36th state park remains a work in progress, dotted with workers, humming equipment, and the occasional burst of visitors. Construction signs line the area, outnumbering trail markings in many parts.

Beyond a name and a few tidbits about where the park will be located, the state hasn’t said much. At this point, Summersville Mayor Robert Shafer said he doesn’t have many concrete details to work with but is hopeful that the 177-acre park will be a boon to his small city of 3,400.

“I think this is going to be complementary to all of our other campgrounds,” he said. “People are going to stay with them and play in the state park.”

The park, he said, fits in perfectly with his own plans for local tourism, an industry that has become an important part of the Summersville economy in recent years.

The mayor’s hope is shared by Gov. Jim Justice, whose administration has invested heavily in state parks since 2017, elevated the Department of Tourism to a cabinet-level position and promoted the state as a destination for out-of-state visitors. State leaders argue that the strategy has paid off, with Justice recently announcing that tourism brought more than $7 billion into West Virginia’s economy in 2022, the best year for the state ever.

Justice has also said that the park will be developed through a “public-private partnership,” the same types of proposals that caused controversy earlier this year in the Eastern Panhandle. This mention has been enough for some environmental and conservation groups to keep a close eye on what will happen next.

“We want full transparency,” said Mike Jones, the public lands campaign coordinator for the West Virginia Rivers Coalition. “We want to know the plans for acquiring lands, we want to know what they plan to do after they are acquired. And specifically for Summersville Lake, we’ll be looking to make sure that the scenic and water quality values in Pirate’s Cove and the waterfall are protected.”

The effort has also had help from the Legislature. In 2022, West Virginia lawmakers passed a law allowing the state to pursue private developments within nearly all state parks. State officials have already said that they plan to use private development in Summersville Lake, but haven’t offered additional details.

While the law allowing for private development is still fairly new, it has already faced criticism. Earlier this year, residents in Morgan County pushed back on private development plans at Cacapon Resort State Park, arguing that the proposals would create an amusement park-like atmosphere. The state eventually abandoned the effort.

Now, as the new state park begins to go up on the north shore of Summersville Lake, how that law might come into play remains an open question. In the meantime, another community is beginning to consider what the changes will mean for them, and if the park will deliver the economic boost they are hoping for.

Summersville businesses hope they’ll benefit from increased tourism

The summer tourist season brings a lot of traffic to Summersville as visitors to the nearby national park drive through the area.

But in a city well known as a speed trap, getting people to stop and go to local businesses can be difficult.

Shortly before Labor Day, David Ridgeway was getting ready for a busy holiday weekend at the Summersville Lake Retreat & Lighthouse, a 57-acre, 70-site year-round campground that he bought with his wife in 2020. When he’s talking to campers, Ridgeway keeps a list at the ready.

“I gauge them on their activity level. ‘Do you like to hike? Bike? Do you want to drive? You want to be in a plane?’” he said. “‘What do you want to do?’ Because I can get you to something you want to do. It’s all right here.”

Ridgeway, a former bank lending officer who moved to West Virginia shortly before the pandemic, is the new president of the Summersville Convention & Visitors Bureau. He said he wants to find ways to boost tourism and support local businesses.

He expects that things will only get busier when the new state park is fully up and running. And he hopes that the park will help keep people in the area year-round, allowing local businesses to make money beyond the summer months and keep people employed.

“Hiring people has been the challenge,” he said. “The restaurants here are having a hard time keeping staff and waitresses and waiters.”

While the plans for the park continue to take shape, Ridgeway said he is working with local and state leaders to help develop plans for a visitor’s center at the park’s entrance on Route 19, giving visitors a better idea of what the area has to offer.

While he is hopeful that the new state park will benefit the local community, Ridgeway does acknowledge that the growing tourism economy has brought up some concerns.

“The local people are afraid of it becoming Pigeon Forge,” he said, referring to the popular resort town in Tennessee. “And business owners like us, we’re sort of OK with that, if it’s not too commercialized.”

The state’s first new park in 30 years is bringing cautious optimism — and plenty of questions

So far, state officials have largely been quiet about their exact plans for the new park, but have said they want to expand areas for rock climbing, hiking, biking

The West Virginia Division of Natural Resources, the agency responsible for overseeing and managing the state’s parks, did not answer questions about when a public hearing might be held or the exact types of development it is considering.

The new state park could be a boon to a ‘small city with big city opportunity’

Shafer, the Summersville mayor, said local economic development can be complicated.

“We don’t have some of the highway, byway systems that these big companies look for,” he said. “We’ve got a tiny regional airport, but it is limited in capacity.”

Instead, he’s focused more on helping small and medium-sized businesses that can boost the economy without disturbing the community too much.

And direct spending from out-of-state visitors, which brought more than $5.3 billion into the state in 2022, is a big part of his plan for the “small city with big city opportunity” that he’s led for more than a decade.

He hopes that the park will allow the city to work closely with the state. Shafer also said the park fits into his plans for tourism in Summersville — which include a new sports complex and increased access to hiking and biking trails.

But as the town becomes busier, the mayor is balancing business owners who want to grow with longtime residents who are worried that too much tourism could permanently alter their community.

“I constantly tell my constituents, ‘if you want to be a community of yesterday, you will not be here tomorrow,’” he said.

As a Summersville native, Kirkwood Winery owner Frank Dix sees both sides of the issue.

On days off, he sometimes goes out on the lake, often called “the little Bahamas of the East,” with friends and relaxes in the quiet.

“It’s beautiful,” he said. “We can drop anchor in 20 feet of water and I can look down and see my anchor.”

If more people start visiting the lake as tourism expands, he said his friends worry that those moments might not happen as often. But Dix, who along with his wife Elizabeth purchased the decades-old Kirkwood Winery and Isaiah Morgan Distillery in 2017, said that he is cautiously optimistic about what plans the state will develop for the park.

“I completely understand why people are attracted to Summersville Lake and its beauty. And I can see it being a premier place nationwide,” he said. “Do we want that? That’s the question.”

WVSOM to implement ‘WISH’ program for Greenbrier County women

The West Virginia School of Osteopathic Medicine (WVSOM) will once again build upon community engagement - this time focusing on programming that educates, supports and encourages women 35 and older and their families to live a healthy lifestyle.

The school’s Center for Rural and Community Health (CRCH) was selected as one of the winners of Quality Insights’ 50th anniversary grant program, created to support promising and innovative initiatives to improve health and health care quality. Quality Insights is a West Virginia-based company whose mission is to use data and community solutions to improve health.

Through the $21,361 grant, the CRCH will implement the “Women Interested in Staying Healthy” (WISH) project in Greenbrier County. The program will provide structured events based on nutrition, exercise and health education.

The idea for the WISH project came from attention gained through a Woman’s World magazine article that featured Drema Hill, Ph.D., WVSOM’s vice president for community engagement and chief operations officer, about her 144-pound weight loss journey over six years. Hill’s recognition in the national magazine prompted a need to raise awareness about how incremental lifestyle changes can result in lasting health improvement.

“It’s amazing to me to see the person I used to be,” Hill said. “There is still more work to do before I reach my ultimate goal, but being able to go from taking 13 medications a day to only three has changed my life. It shows how dramatically your life can improve by incorporating healthy lifestyle changes.”

Each two-hour, biweekly session will be facilitated by Cheryl Workman, community ambassador and project lead, and will include a nutritional session with a cooking demonstration by a local dietician, a session devoted to low-impact exercise by a local exercise physiologist and an education session on topics that promote healthy lifestyle change through nutrition and exercise by a local functional medicine physician.

Sven T. Berg, M.D., CEO of Quality Insights, said the organization is pleased to support WVSOM in launching its WISH project.

“We are particularly impressed by the initiative’s focus on fostering a sustainable network for peer support and developing an infrastructure that can have a ripple effect on family health,” he said. “We eagerly anticipate the positive health outcomes and sustainable changes WISH is poised to deliver to women in West Virginia.”

Greenbrier County women 35 years and older who participate in the program will have health information collected, including BMI and a self-assessment questionnaire. Women younger than 35 are welcome to participate, but health information will not be tracked.

“WVSOM students will have the opportunity to analyze the data and apply their findings to research to be presented statewide,” Workman said. “We are so excited to have a student scholarly activity as part of our project.”

The program will empower women to take control of their health by creating a comprehensive, long-term improvement in participants’ body mass index scores and healthy behaviors.

Those interested in participating can contact Cheryl Workman at cworkman1@osteo.wvsom.edu or 304-647-6330 by Sept. 25. The first of 20 meetings will take place from 5 to 7 p.m., Sept. 28, at the Clingman Center for Community Engagement in Lewisburg, and the program will continue through August 2024.

West Virginia Lions seek students to travel abroad

Each year the Lions Clubs of West Virginia provide the opportunity for several students to travel abroad. Briefly, this year, six travel grants of $1,600 will be awarded to students in grades 10-12 or a recent graduate, toward a four to six-week cultural exchange to countries such as Austria, Switzerland, France, Germany, Finland, Japan, Italy, Peru or Australia during the summer of 2024. Destination countries are not limited to those listed above. Application deadline is Nov. 10, 2023.

The Lions of West Virginia rely heavily on the guidance counselors in each high school to get the word out about this program. Students may contact their high school guidance counselors for more information, an application and contest rules. The Youth Exchange Scholarship Application and Scholarship Contest Rules forms are also currently available on our West Virginia Lions website: WVLions.org/re-sources then scroll down to Youth Exchange. If you have any questions about the contest or about the Youth Exchange Program contact Lion Lorrie Krautwurst at 301-467-9868 or Lion Henry Krautwurst at 301-467-1032.

Progressive CEOS September meeting

Lynn Humphreys (left), Betty Jo McNeel, Sally Holliday, and Elsie Dunkle attended the September Progressive CEOS meeting.

Progressive CEOS (Community Educational Outreach Service) held their September 12th meeting at the WVU Extension Office in Fairlea. President Patty Gray opened the meeting with references to the miracle of seeds and the resulting abundance of the gardening season. Lynn Humphreys presented an important informative program on keeping personal, financial, and legal documents in a safe place and letting family members know their location. No one wants to consider end of life affairs, but it is a conversation you and your loved ones must have. A binder or file containing the information will be helpful when it comes time to manage last wishes. Some of the categories are real estate deeds, vehicle titles, taxes, burial service preferences, pets and their care, insurance policies and banking information. Preparing this now will be a good start, but remember to update the information as needed. The Health Motivator topic was Pumpkin—More than Dessert. October and November health motivator lessons will be given by Lynn Humphreys and Betty Jo McNeel. Five members signed up to attend Leadership Day at the Clingman Center in Lewisburg on September 27th. Planning for the 2024 year will be at the WVU Extension Office on October 19 at 10:00 a.m. If you are interested in joining one of the CEOS Clubs in Greenbrier County, contact Mary at the Extension Office by calling 304-647-7408.

Wellness Retreat coming to Lewisburg

Beautiful spaces like this one at Carnegie Hall will be the venue for some of the workshop sessions at the LILA Wellness Retreat.

Early fall is a perfect time for new beginnings. People tend to become more introspective and look for ways to improve their well-being over the coming months. But sometimes a little help is needed to get on the right path. The perfect answer to this need is coming to Lewisburg from Thursday, Sept. 28, to Sunday, Oct. 1 in the form of a weekend wellness retreat for women featuring yoga, meditation, outdoor experiences and more.

The beautiful website, mylilalife.com, says, “Paint your world with colors of laughter. Fill your days with endless beauty, creating a life of divine play and possibility.” What could be more beautiful than four September days in the Greenbrier Valley with time between sessions to explore. Go to the website to register and select your workshops.

Organized by Tracy Peyton and Haley Tamea, they invite you to join them for a rejuvenating and empowering weekend retreat designed exclusively for women, saying, “Immerse yourself in tranquility through invigorating yoga, soothing meditation sessions, guided breath work, hiking and cooking programs, all led by experienced instructors. Indulge in delectable chef-prepared farm to table style meals that will tantalize your taste buds and nourish your soul. Engage in intimate small group classes where you can connect with like-minded individuals and explore new horizons. Elevate your experience with optional services such as blissful massages to unwind and rejuvenate, and life coaching to ignite personal growth.” Adding, “This retreat promises a sanctuary of self-discovery, wellness, and connection in a serene setting. Register now to embark on a transformative journey with us!” The workshops will take place in several venues throughout Lewisburg, introducing the participants to this area if they have not been here before. Leading them is a gallery of accomplished individuals including Robyn DeGraff and Melissa Terese McLaughlin to guide you through inner journeys for peace and clarity; Chefs Everett O’Flaherty and Hilary Stalnaker to delight your senses with farm-to-table meals; Mia Hamza offering transformative sessions to deepen your practice alongside Sparrow Huffman; and more. The workshops are at all levels of experience so the novice at meditation through the yoga master will each benefit. The registration fee includes all meals and general sessions as well as one workshop per workshop session. Tracy Peyton said, “The Greenbrier Valley has so much to offer but the one area that could be improved upon is wellness, especially for women. Haley and I are excited to help meet this need.”

Gwen's Kitchen at the Clingman Center of Montwell Commons will be the location for some of the workshops which involve food preparation such as a Goddess Bowl or Juicing.

First annual Tiny Art Show a hit

Artists: Margaret Golden (left), Drema Bragg, Emma Edens, Shelby Oreolt, Sharon Johnson, and Doreen Alderman

The Rupert Public Library held its first annual Tiny Art Show during the month of August. There were a total of 20 entries on four-inch canvasses. This was a fun project for all those involved. During the month we asked patrons if they wanted to pick their favorite painting. We held a Tiny Art Show reception on Friday, Sept. 1 to announce the People’s Choice. The People’s Choice award went to Shelby Oreolt with her painting titled “Wildflowers.” All the other artists received a blue ribbon for participating. Picking our favorite was truly hard. They were all beautiful. Those artists entering their art were: Doreen Alderman, Kayla Berry, Drema Bragg, Linda Connolly, Emma Edens, Margaret Golden, Sharon Johnson, Jane Jones, Marilyn Kelley, Karen McClung, Dee Miller, Shelby Oreolt, Susan Pishner, Robwyn Wingler.

Constitution Week

“It is very important to water distribution in that area,” Lawson continued. “In addition to the $1.5 million that is requested of the TIF, the West Virginia Infrastructure, Jobs, and Development Council will also be providing half-a-million dollars. They like to be the last one in, so they will not actually formally commit until after the commission approves the project as being ‘technically feasible,’ and has approved the proposed funding scenario.”

At the conclusion of Lawson’s overview, Tincher noted that, “This is an urgent matter for us to move forward with the funding for this project. It meets all the requirements for the TIF funds to be spent on a project of this nature.”

“This is also funding that is coming from our previous TIF,” Tincher added. “It is not coming from our renewal. This would not only be good for the City of White Sulphur, but for the greater good of the entire White Sulphur District in making sure that their water is accessible to them.”

After their unanimous approval, Commissioner Lowell Rose said, “This is a necessary project that falls exactly in line with the reason we originally approved the TIF funding – infrastructure improvements.”

The commission then considered approving a reduced building permit fee for the Greenbrier Valley Airport’s hangar door-installation project. Airport Director Martha Livesay explained both the project, and the request.

“We are working on re-doing some failed hangar doors,” Livesay said. “We have three hangars that we rent. They generate quite a bit of revenue, and we’re losing that revenue because we cannot use them.”

According to Livesay, the door issue has been an ongoing and costly concern. For the first phase of the project, the Greenbrier Valley Airport paid out $1.2 million for renovations and permit fees. Renovations included clean-up, as well as foundation and utility installation. Phase two of the project has an estimated cost of $1 million.

“The second portion is actually hanging the doors,” Livesay said. “The majority of the cost consists of materials. $811,000 in materials, and $180,900 in labor.”

“Since the inspections are based on the progress of the labor, and the labor is much reduced from the cost of the materials, I’m asking that you would base the cost of the permit on the labor and not the materials,” Livesay added. “It is significantly less.”

The commission unanimously approved the airport’s request, with Tincher noting her status as a sitting member of the Greenbrier Valley Airport Authority for transparency. Matt Wyatt, airport director of operations, then provided an update as to the status of the recently-begun runway expansion project.

“Starting on the 17th, [...] the runway will be closed for the paving project,” Wyatt said. “They are resurfacing the entire runway. That’s just the first phase of the project. The second phase will come up next year.”

“We also have a new snow removal equipment building going up now,” Wyatt added. “The concrete for that’s been poured, and they’re working on the outer edges of it now. It should be completed by early-to-mid-November. The hangar door project is due to be completed around the same time.”

The next regular meeting of the Greenbrier County Commission is scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 26 at 10 a.m.

Family Refuge Center awarded grant from The Starbuck’s Foundation

The Neighborhood Grant recognizes community impact the organization has in Greenbrier, Mercer, Monroe, and Pocahontas Counties

As part of The Starbucks Foundation’s Neighborhood Grants program, Family Refuge Center was selected to receive a $1,000 grant. This grant award is thanks to a local nomination from an anonymous Starbucks partner, who recognized the work of Family Refuge Center, mission is to end physical, sexual, and emotional abuse in families. As well as encouraging and promoting healthy family life based on mutual respect for all family members. Through this unique program, The Starbucks Foundation invites Starbucks partners to nominate a local organization in their community. Since 2019, more than 10,000 grants have been awarded to local organizations, amounting to more than $15 million.

Family Refuge Center is a comprehensive domestic violence and sexual assault facility which operates from five locations in three counties. Services include a 24-hour hot line, temporary shelter, empowerment counseling, legal advocacy and court accompaniment, assistance and advocacy with community resources, information, and referrals, prevention education, support groups, adult basic education and vocational planning, children’s advocacy, groups and activities, summer day camp, as well as parent education and support.

The Starbucks Foundation’s Neighborhood Grants programs support grassroots, community-led nonprofit organizations through catalytic investments in the form of grants. Neighborhood Grants also help build sustained local impact and inspire increased partner (employee) engagement with nonprofit organizations that work in their communities.

“Our partners (employees) know their communities best and have shared great insights about the organizations helping to uplift others in their neighborhoods, from supporting youth and families to fighting hunger and promoting environmental stewardship,” said Alicia Vermaele, executive director of The Starbucks Foundation. “Through our latest round of Neighborhood Grants, we’re proud to support local organization nominated by Starbucks partners who make our communities stronger.”

Accelerating Forest Farming with regional collaboration

The Yew Mountain Center announces its participation in a partnership, led by Virginia Tech, alongside nine other organizations spanning the Appalachian region. This innovative project aims to expand and accelerate value-added, agricultural clusters within Appalachian communities, promoting sustainable forest farming practices with support from the ARISE award granted by the Appalachian Regional Commission.

ARC Federal Co-Chair Gayle Manchin expressed her enthusiasm, stating, “I strongly believe that the key to transforming Appalachia’s economic vitality can be found in vision and collaboration across state lines. I’m encouraged by the way our newest ARISE grantees have come together to forge plans that will greatly increase workforce development and business ventures in ways that will positively affect the entire region.”

The project, titled “Accelerating Forest Farming in Central Appalachia,” focuses on enhancing the economic viability, social well-being, and resource sustainability of individual and collective forest farming business ventures across Central Appalachia. Additionally, it seeks to ensure the long-term viability of value-added and sustainable Non-Timber Forest Products (NTFP) supply chains.

John Munsell, Project Director for the planning grant, Virginia Tech Associate Professor, and Forest Management Extension Specialist, emphasized, “Appalachia is a global icon in understory woodland product trade. From tree barks and gourmet food to the world’s largest spectrum of salable medicinal botanicals, the region is rich in marketable raw material derived from its biodiverse forests. However, these products and associated producer communities have long been undervalued and underserved. Forest farming is an agroforestry practice involving the intentional production and stewardship of understory woodland crops such as mushrooms, plants, and sap that ensures product quality, reduces market volatility, enhances local enterprise, and increases sustainable commerce, all of which can improve the recognition and reward that Appalachian producers and their communities deserve.”

The Yew Mountain Center is honored to be a part of this collaboration with partners from across the region, expanding opportunities for cultivating Non-Timber Forest Products in Appalachian forests. Erica Marks, Director of The Yew Mountain Center, states, “Our sought-after native botanicals thrive in healthy forests just as our communities are enriched when we manage this resource for sustainable income potential and for conservation.”

This award offers an opportunity to strengthen relationships between institutions of higher learning, community development, research advancement, and sustainable farming and agroforestry in Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Ohio, Kentucky, and North Carolina, with the shared vision of fostering an emerging forest farming industry for the Appalachian region. Entities in each location have already been partnering and implementing practices to bolster the forest farming economy and will now can expand upon this existing work.

The Yew Mountain Center hosts the West Virginia Forest Farming Initiative and operates a forest farm on its 500-acre botanical sanctuary near Hillsboro, WV. It is a destination for learning about cultivating non-timber forest products and offers funding and technical support for beginning forest farmers. In addition to forest farming projects, the nonprofit organization offers a wide range of place-based educational and cultural programs for people of all ages.

STEPPIN’ OUT

It’s time to turn out the lights - this party’s about to get started

By John C. Dean, Contributing Writer

Imagine not knowing what a star looks like or never having seen the Milky Way Galaxy. Think about that for a moment. And then consider the following statistics:

In the U.S., 99 percent of residents can only catch a glimpse of the dim glow of the stars in the night. Hundreds of cities across America emanate beacons of light upward and outward from skyscrapers, office buildings, commercial development, airports and residences, just to mention a few.

According to a study by The New World Atlas of Artificial Night Sky Brightness, just 17 percent of residents worldwide can view a naturally occurring dark sky because of light pollution. In North America and Europe, 80 percent of the population and 33 percent of the world’s citizens cannot see the Milky Way.

Watoga and Droop Mountain Battlefield State Parks as well as Calvin Price State Forest are now part of an exclusive club of dark sky parks in the U.S. All activities and educational programs are managed by Watoga.

Receiving such a coveted designation in 2021 from the International Dark Sky Association (IDA) was an arduous three-year process for members of the Watoga State Park Foundation, which compiled 100-plus page application, including replacement of all noncom-pliant light fixtures with fully shielded, low intensity lighting. Other dark sky park requirements resulted in the limited use of lighted signage and flood lights, utilizing timers and developing a continuing education program.

Watoga State Park, Droop Mountain Battlefield, and Cal Price State Forest are all certified International Dark Sky Parks and are the only parks in West Virginia with this designation. Pocahontas County lies in the darkest sky shed in the mid-Atlantic states.

The Second Annual Dark Sky Party is one part of the Foundation’s commitments to the public education requirement by the IDA regarding the importance of protecting the night skies for this generation and for future ones, as well. Other programs and activities stressing the importance and impact of light pollution are held at other locations, including Watoga, throughout the year.

“Light pollution affects humans and animals as well as plant life,” said Louanne Fatora, vice-president of the Watoga State Park Foundation. “Even the wondrous synchronous fireflies that exist at Watoga are a protected species and having dark skies is vital for their continued survival.”

How can the public help protect the dark skies and reduce light pollution?

“Do not install security lights,” said J. Perez, local astronomer and astrophotographer. “Instead, have them activated with motion detectors and have a cover that directs the light to the ground. Light directed to space is useless and causes light pollution.”

Now, it’s time to turn out the lights!

The Watoga State Park Second Annual Dark Sky Party at Droop Mountain Battlefield State Park Tower is set for Friday, Sept. 22, at 7:30 p.m. Rain date is Sunday, Sept. 24.

Multiple tabletop scopes will be available for use from the Watoga State Park Foundation.

Red bulb flashlights may be borrowed from the Watoga Foundation. If you bring your own flashlight, stop by the Foundation booth for red cellophane to cover the lens.

Children are welcome to attend, and there will be a table with artwork to entertain the youngsters.

Please feel free to bring your favorite chair or blanket and relax and enjoy “the show.”

No pets, please, not even on a leash.

This event is sponsored by The Watoga State Park Foundation and Dramas, Fairs and Festivals.
