Bat tests positive for rabies

The Greenbrier County Health Department announced on Wednesday, Sept. 20, that a bat tested positive for rabies in the Friars Hill Road area of Renick in Greenbrier County. The Health Department advises, "Please avoid contact with wild animals, and ensure that your pets are vaccinated for rabies."

In July of this year, there were several reports of animals testing positive for rabies in other areas of Greenbrier County.

Mayor Beverly White recognized by Municipal League

By Sarah Richardson

At this week's Lewisburg City Council meeting, Mayor Beverly White was recognized by Travis Blosser, Executive Director of the West Virginia Municipal League. Blosser attended the meeting to present Mayor White with a certificate of recognition, a medallion, and several crystal awards. Mayor White was inducted into the West Virginia Municipal League Hall of Fame for 20 years of government service, and was awarded the Lydia Main Breaking Boundaries Award, which recognizes the dedication, hard work, and accomplishments of women in government, and was also inducted as an honoree at the Governor's Civil Rights Day for advancing civil rights in the state through advocacy.

"Our desire was, in some way publicly, honor the outstanding work of women who advance municipal government throughout our state. Our conversations led us to the Lydia Main Breaking Boundaries Award, which is named for the ground-breaking former mayor of Mason-town, West Virginia," explained Blosser. He listed Mayor White's "extensive resume of service" that includes working with students, including in dropout prevention, as well as her support of the performing arts, economic development, seniors, healthcare, municipal leadership, and ministry.

The West Virginia Municipal League is a statewide, nonprofit, nonpartisan association of cities, towns and villages established in 1968 to assist local governments and advance the interests of the citizens who reside within.

Caring Acres Farms' April Polzin-Holmes and Carl Holmes host Greenbrier Chamber of Commerce Business After Hours events

By Jeffrey Kanode, RealWV

A breathtaking landscape - vintage Greenbrier Valley heights of blue and valleys of green!

With a warm welcome ready - owners April Polzin-Holmes and Carl Holmes practice hospitality as a virtue, as they await visitors to Caring Acres Farms.

Located on Muddy Creek Mountain, just a short drive from the heart of Lewisburg, Caring Acres recently hosted the Greater Greenbrier Chamber of Commerce's Business After Hours. A Taste of Eggscellence Food Truck and Catering provided complimentary dinner, and FreshFlours offered quiche, with Amy's Market sharing desserts. Mountain Folk Coffee was on hand to take care of coffee lovers and Hawk Knob presented a variety of their hard ciders for people to sample.

"This marked my inaugural visit to Caring

Acres Farm, and I'm already looking forward to returning," said Greater Greenbrier Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Sarah Ream Driggers. "The evening was a delightful blend of networking, camaraderie, and showing support for local businesses. April and Carl made the experience even more enjoyable."

Monroe County Sheriff Jeff Jones arrested in connection with alleged cover-up

By Matthew Young, RealWV

After a months-long investigation into the alleged cover up of a deputy's inappropriate relationship with a 17-year-old high school student, Monroe County Sheriff Jeff Jones, on Friday, Sept. 15, was arrested by the West Virginia State Police.

In June, the Monroe County Commission adopted a resolution granting them the authority to remove Jones from office due to the investigation, as well as several other documented instances of alleged misconduct. Shortly after the resolution's adoption, however, the commission voted unanimously to delay Jones' removal until after the state police investigation had concluded.

In their resolution, the county commission alleged that both Jones, and Deputy James Hylton, conducted an "insufficient investigation" after being made aware of the situation involving Deputy E. Blankenship and the 17-year-old student. Blankenship was accused of soliciting nude photographs from the minor. Despite Blankenship confirming the validity of the accusation, Jones chose to neither terminate the deputy's employment, nor take any further legal action.

Jones was charged with deceiving the Civil Service Commission, and failure to report known or suspected child abuse or neglect as a mandatory reporter. He was arraigned shortly after his arrest on Friday by the Monroe County Magistrate, and released on a $1,000 personal bond.

Due to the lateness of the State Police's announcement of Jones' arrest, none of the parties involved were immediately reachable for comment. RealWV will provide updates of this ongoing situation, as well as any steps taken by the Monroe County Commission as additional information is made available.

Caring Acres Farm

“finer things” more accessible and affordable for all. Polzin-Holmes grew up far away from the verdant mountain pastures she now calls home. She spent her childhood and adolescence in Detroit and surrounding suburbs. She grew up poor. “I never had steak growing up. We couldn’t afford it,” she said. The scarcity of her formative years helps inspire the vision Polzin-Holmes brings to Caring Farms. It isn’t just a business. It’s a mission. “We want to help provide the best quality beef for everyone,” she explained. For that reason, Polzin-Holmes said, Caring Acres Farm strives to keep its prices low. They also provide beef to many civic groups for community events, in addition to many local businesses and restaurants.

“We provide all the beef for Lewisburg’s Thunderbird Taco and The Wild Bean, as well as Amy’s Market. She uses our beef for her menu and you can also purchase all of our retail cuts in her freezer,” Polzin-Holmes noted. “The Hub in Lewisburg also uses our beef, as does Route 60 American Grill and Bar in White Sulphur Springs. Sprouting Farms in Talcott also has our beef available. HandMade WV Market in Marlinton also uses and sells our beef.”

Polzin-Holmes also makes cheeseburger flavored dog treats to support the Greenbrier County Humane Society. Amy’s Market sells them.

Along with the late Don King, Carl Holmes has farmed the acreage now known as Caring Acres Farms since 2003. Holmes, a fourth-generation farmer, grew up in Renick and farmed for many years there. He met April in 2018, at church. April was visiting her daughter who lived in White Sulphur Springs. April and Carl fell in love, got married, and around four years ago, they established Caring Acres Farms. Pointing to cow fields, Carl laughingly said, “I raise them, she sells them.”

April Polzin-Holmes said CAF also stands for Carl (C.), April (A.) and Forever, Family, and Friends (F). She stresses that she and Carl want their farm to be accessible. “When we see a need, we want to fill it. We look for opportunities to help organizations, individuals, and families. “We open up our farm to anyone who might need it.”

The needs of children especially animate Polzin-Holmes. She has particular tenderness for the youngest and most vulnerable, perhaps because she taught special needs children, in Florida. Even in West Virginia, many children have never experienced the joy of romping around on a farm, Polzin-Holmes explained, and she wants parents and guardians to know those children are welcome to come explore Caring Acres. “I love children, so if schools, families can come, we love that,” she noted.

With husband Carl, April Polzin-Holmes sees small business ownership as a resource to help the community, and she’s passionate about it. “Why be in business if you can’t support your community? The community supports you, or you wouldn’t stay in business,” she reflected.

Just minutes from a thriving downtown, and near several other communities in a countryside dotted with countless homes and unincorporated villages, Caring Acres Farm offers mountain vistas and small-town hospitality equally beautiful, and precious to encounter.

Mounting evidence finds youth incarceration ineffective

By Nadia Ramlagan for WVNS

A wealth of research shows youth incarceration doesn’t increase public safety or work for youth well-being, according to a recent report from the Sentencing Project.

Despite the evidence, West Virginia has been slow to implement juvenile-justice reforms and reduce the number of kids behind bars.

In recent years, West Virginia had the highest rate of incarcerated youths in the nation - with 329 youths in state custody in 2017.

Senior Fellow at the Sentencing Project and report author Richard Mendel said effective alternatives to incarceration are catching on in some states.

He pointed to Credible Messengers, a program that provides intensive mentoring to youths at high risk of offending.

“The mentors work intensively with young people,” said Mendel. “They’re typically available 24/7, providing support and encouragement and crisis intervention for the young people.”

According to state data, out of more than 300 probation officers in West Virginia, 20 work in county school systems.

Recently, the state’s juvenile-justice subcommittee recommended more than $300,000 in funding toward community-based programs and services for juveniles and their families.

Mendel said alternatives to traditional court processing include restorative justice conferencing, which focuses on repairing the harm caused by an offense.

During conferencing, the crime victim and the young person meet along with important people in their lives, discuss the harm caused by the events, and craft a plan for the youths to make it right to pay back the victim.

“To date, most restorative-justice programs have focused on minor offenses,” said Mendel. “But some jurisdictions have started employing restorative justice as an alternative to court processing for youth.”

Nearly a decade ago, West Virginia passed a statute eliminating life-without-parole sentences for juveniles, and requiring juvenile offenders be eligible for parole after serving no more than 15 years.

Boot drives, hot dogs and spaghetti dinners - how West Virginia's volunteer fire departments get funding

West Virginia's volunteer fire departments don't rely strictly on the state for money. They can charge insurance companies for their services, and 23 counties in the state - including Wayne - have special taxes in place to fund theirs. And then there are the classic boot drives, hot dog sales and spaghetti dinners.

But when it comes to state funds, since 2005 that's been through a 0.55% tax on property insurance premiums.

For the past 15 years, lawmakers have pushed to raise it to an even 1%. Republican or Democrat majorities didn't matter - the tax raise died every single time.

Sen. Vince Deeds, R-Greenbrier, said every time raising the tax came up "the insurance companies would get nervous" and lobby hard against it.

The bill actually gained a little bit of traction in the 2023 regular session, with a slight modification. Instead of fully funding volunteer fire with the tax, the difference in the increase would be split between fire and EMS.

In the House of Delegates, lawmakers ripped out the tax increase in favor of funding it with lottery money. When it got sent back to the Senate, lawmakers in that chamber cut the lottery proposal and put the tax back in before volleying it back to the house.

Deeds, who co-chairs the Joint Committee on Volunteer Fire Departments and Emergency Medical Services, said the latest effort "died on the vine" during the last days of the session.

"[Firefighters] were understandably mad and upset," he said. "We let them down."

Randy James, president of the state fire chief's association, told lawmakers in April he was "burned up" and "very disappointed" with how that turned out.

"I don't even know why I keep coming up here to Charleston," he said. "I have people ask me why all the time, because y'all aren't listening."

When Justice called lawmakers into a special session in August, one of the bills on the list shifted money in the state coffers to give volunteer fire departments $12 million out of the general revenue fund. When they did that, they created a permanent line item in the budget - a specific place to park the money.

But since it's general revenue money, that means the amount has to be voted on every year, along with the rest of the budget. The actual money isn't guaranteed to be there year after year.

If the premium tax was raised - in April, a legislative lawyer ballparked that it could cost about $20 extra dollars a year for the average West Virginia household - lawmakers wouldn't need to dedicate money each year. It would come automatically.

Deeds said he is confident - barring lean times like the mid-2010s - that $12 million will be budgeted every year during regular sessions.

"I don't think anyone would want to cut the fire department funding," he said.

In town and in the hollers, volunteer fire department coverage is "iffy"

Deeds, a former West Virginia State Trooper with family in EMS and the fire service, said rural departments like East Lynn would be the first to shut their doors, due to budget constraints and recruitment. He said in his hometown of Renick, the department there got so lean when a lighting strike caught fire to a church, Lewisburg had to respond from 30 minutes away.

But even in town, more often than not the fire service is volunteer. They might have an ambulance — the EMTs working those are paid — but the firefighters are all volunteers.

Back in Wayne County, the Huntington suburbs of Ceredo and Kenova sit along the Ohio River. Crammed in right next to each other — a rail bridge divides the two towns — the two have separate fire departments.

With Interstate 64, the Ohio River with bass boats and coal barges and the Huntington Regional Airport nearby, the two towns are a far cry from sparsely populated East Lynn 30 miles south.

Here, the calls are always coming, generally for the ambulance, which comes out for overdoses, cardiac arrests and "lift assists" — scanner jargon for someone on the floor that can't get up.

Chief Rob Robson of the Ceredo Fire Department said he joined in 1998 when he was 16 years old. Sitting on the bumper of a fire truck that predates his time at the department, Robson said he's seen the changes in the fire service.

"Back in the day, it used to be if you weren't at the station and there was a call, you might as well not even show up," he said. "There would be four or five pickup trucks lined up with the tailgates down and people talking and when the call came in, they were out immediately."

Times have changed. Robson said he thinks the high cost of living — with folks working two or three jobs to raise a family — means less time to volunteer at the department.

The lack of manpower means Ceredo and Kenova constantly back one another up; When one is called out, the other responds unless told not to. The chief said staffing isn't at crisis levels, but getting coverage during the day is "iffy."

But the calls don't stop. The night prior, Robson said his department put out an apartment fire, a car fire, responded to a false alarm and worked a fatal crash.

Unlike East Lynn, which can't afford an ambulance and has to rely on the town of Wayne's, Ceredo had two rigs. The keyword is "had" — one burnt up a few months ago so now they're just down to one.

"I get concerned sometimes because I'll hear a medical call come in, then wonder if we can respond to another one that comes in," Robson said.

He says funding isn't everything — the people are the most important part of the equation. But the two are connected in fundamental ways. When the money starts rolling from the state, he would like to use some of it to give his EMTs raises. But it's a risky move, considering he doesn't know if the money will actually be there the following year.

"I can't give someone a raise one year then tell them they have to take a pay cut the next," he said.

Dear Recycle Lady,

A Look Back

Dear Recycle Lady,

I'm new to the area and need clarification on how to separate items for recycling. Are cereal and other uncoated boxes considered paper or cardboard or neither? Can aluminum foil be included with tin and aluminum cans? Thank you for your help.

Need Information

Dear Need Information,

Welcome to Greenbrier County and thanks for being an interested recycler. Cereal boxes, toothpaste boxes, and cardboard containers of all kinds are considered to be cardboard and can be recycled with cardboard. Just be sure they are clean and do not have food or oil stains. Boxes that are made to contain food, liquids, or semi-liquids are coated with wax to prevent leakage, thus are not recyclable. Unfortunately, aluminum foil is no longer recyclable. The company that purchases our aluminum cans will not take aluminum foil as most of it has become so thin that it disintegrates during processing. Aluminum cans are not recycled with tin cans, now more commonly called steel cans, as steel cans and aluminum cans are recycled differently. Steel requires a much higher heat for processing than is required for processing aluminum cans.

Dear Recycle Lady,

What is Chemical recycling?

No Chemical Knowledge

Dear No Chemical Knowledge,

According to the article, "Chemical Recycling Plants Incinerate Plastic and Create Hazardous Waste," chemical recycling is a process promoted by the plastics industry as a means of reducing plastic waste. Chemical recycling facilities burn very large amounts of plastic waste into a small amount of building blocks for new plastic or for fuel. The process also generates very large amounts of hazardous wastes. Instead of being a solution to plastic waste, Chemical Recycling is a health risk that will worsen the plastic waste problem. Plastic Environment groups are advocating for bans on the process and encouraging the production of less plastic as the way to reduce the amount plastic waste. For more information go to www.pirg.org/articles/chemical-recycling-what-it-is-and-what-it-definitely-is-not.

Dear Recycle Lady,

Why can I put #1 plastic water bottles in a #1 plastics bin, but not #1 plastic clamshells?

Nonbeliever

Dear Nonbeliever,

Most recycling centers across the country, including our local Recycling Center, accept only #1 plastic bottles and jugs. We accept #1 plastic bottles such as water bottles, and pop bottles, but not #1 plastics such as clamshells, cherry tomato containers, and plastic containers for baked goods. These two types of #1 plastics are chemically different, thus they melt at different temperatures. Plastics such as the #1 plastic clamshells are created using a method called thermoforming. This #1 plastic packaging is created by stretching a heated sheet of plastic over a mold of the desired shape. The result is plastic packaging that is lightweight, protects food, and can be made into blister packs for medical packaging. Currently, companies are looking for ways to recycle thermoform packaging as it would help reduce the amount of plastic waste.

Good News: Last Saturday, Sept. 16, was International Coastal Cleanup Day. Over 17 million volunteers worldwide collected more than 350 million pounds of trash off ocean beaches. (fto.com)

By William "Skip" Deegans

The above photo shows a group of West Virginia African American World War I draftees. When the United States entered the war, southern Democrats opposed the conscription of African Americans. They feared that soldiers who fought for democracy in Europe would return home feeling entitled to civil rights in their own country.

Believing in the cause, African Americans wanted to serve in the United States military. In dire need of soldiers, the opposition by southern politicians fell by the wayside as African Americans were allowed to be drafted. While some 200,000 African Americans were deployed to Europe, most of them had support jobs or served in labor battalions. Thirteen percent of all active duty soldiers in the war were African American, but only seven tenths of one percent were officers.

To accommodate the drafted African Americans, separate barracks and facilities were built on military bases in what Duke Professor Adriane Lentz-Smith describes as the "Jim Crow Army." Among the first African Americans to volunteer to go to Europe were draftees from West Virginia who were sent to Fort Lee in Virginia and shipped out two weeks after arriving on the base. The U. S. Army's 93rd

Division was the sole African American unit, and its 369th Infantry Regiment was assigned by General John Pershing to the French and warned not to treat them the same as white troops. The French ignored the advice and embraced the soldiers. Serving alongside the French, the 369th resisted German forces on the front lines for 191 days. They never surrendered any Allied territory, and none of their soldiers were captured. For their gallantry, 171 officers and men received either the Croix de Guerre or the Legion of Merit from the French government.

Returning home from the war, African American soldiers were disillusioned when they were not treated as equal, and racial violence spread through the south during the summer of 1919. Called the "Red Summer," there were several instances of African American men lynched in their military uniforms. The unrest exploded in 1921 during the Tulsa, Oklahoma race massacre when 35 blocks of the African Community were destroyed.

AG Morrissey announces settlement with ResCare

West Virginia Attorney General Patrick Morrissey said his office has reached a settlement agreement with ResCare Inc. for $576,111.43 following an investigation initiated by the Attorney General's Office's Medicaid Fraud Control Unit.

The investigation determined that ResCare submitted claims for payment to the West Virginia Medicaid program that were either unsupported by medical documentation, disallowed, in excess of the amount supported by medical documentation, or the medical documentation maintained by ResCare failed to meet the state's minimum documentation requirements.

The settlement includes full restitution of $279,923.98 in Medicaid claims identified by the MFCU as being fraudulent, as well as additional recoveries totaling $296,187.45 which will be used to pay for the MFCU's operating expenses.

"This is an important victory for West Virginians," Attorney General Morrissey said. "Health care providers need to know they must maintain accurate records and only bill for services they actually rendered. They must work within the parameters established by the West Virginia Medicaid Program."

As part of the settlement, ResCare is implementing an electronic records management system for its West Virginia locations that it believes will minimize the company's risk of submitting claims to the West Virginia Medicaid Program without medical documentation that complies with the state's requirements.

In announcing these actions, Attorney General Morrissey praised the work of the Medicaid Fraud Control Unit staff members who handled the case, including Investigator Casey Fledderman, Fraud Analyst Heather Watson and Deputy Director Michael Myers.

Anyone who suspects potential Medicaid fraud, or the neglect, abuse, or financial exploitation of incapacitated adults should report information to the Attorney General's Medicaid Fraud Control Unit tip line at 888-372-8398 or via the Attorney General's website at www.ago.wv.gov.

The West Virginia Medicaid Fraud Control Unit - which joined the Attorney General's Office in 2019 - receives 75% of its funding from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services under a grant award totaling $2,204,588 for federal fiscal year 2022. The remaining 25%, totaling $734,860, is funded by the State of West Virginia.

Attorney General Morrissey announces tentative settlement in Google Antitrust case

West Virginia Attorney General Patrick Morrissey on Thursday announced a bipartisan group of 52 attorneys general has reached a tentative agreement with Google arising out of the company's anticompetitive conduct involving the Google Play Store.

The case focuses on the company's Play Store and alleges that Google harmed consumers by using its monopoly power in the Android app market to inflate prices for paid apps and in-app purchases. The agreement in principle will be finalized over the next 30 days and submitted to the court for approval, at which point the details will be made public.

"Vigorous competition protects consumers and helps the economy thrive," Attorney General Morrissey said. "Our nation's antitrust laws play a vital role in helping to foster innovation and ensure that consumers pay a fair price. Likewise, our nation loses when one company can use unlawful means to monopolize a particular market. We must feverishly oppose such tactics."

"No company is too big to play by the rules."

The lawsuit centers on Google's alleged exclusionary conduct, which substantially shuts out competing app distribution channels.

The attorneys general allege Google unlawfully requires app developers that offer their app through the Google Play Store to use Google Billing as a middleman. Such an arrangement forces app consumers to pay Google's commission - up to 30% - on in-app purchases of digital content the consumers create through apps that are distributed via the Google Play Store.

The attorneys general allege Google broke its early promise to app developers and device manufacturers that it would keep Android "open source," allowing developers to create compatible apps and distribute them without unnecessary restrictions.

The lawsuit also alleges Google sought to enhance or protect its monopoly position by buying off its potential competition, requiring contracts that foreclose competition and imposing technical barriers to strongly discourage or effectively prevent third-party app developers to achieve success outside of the Google Play Store.

Attorney General Morrissey joined the lawsuit with a bipartisan group of attorneys general from all 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

Henning Church of God Ladies hold September meeting

The Ladies of the Henning Church of God held their regular monthly meeting Tuesday, Sept. 12 in the church fellowship hall. Carole Spencer presided, and Donna Scott led in prayer.

Joan Vance presented the devotion, "Lessons from a Bear." The first lesson is to enjoy the outdoors. Go outside to experience God's creation, see the uniqueness of flowers and plants. Breathe in the fresh air. The second lesson is to love your honey. Whoever your honey is such as spouse, friend, family member, and church family, make sure to show love daily. The third lesson is give bear hugs. Actually, give a hug or show love by sending a card or making a phone call. The fourth lesson is to take time to hibernate. Everyone needs to rest daily we need to follow God's example and obey the sabbath. We also need to rest in body and spirit. The fifth lesson is to stay wild. Keep busy, be happy, enjoy life and find things to laugh at. The sixth lesson is to protect your cubs. Keep those near you safe like a mother bear sends her cubs up a tree. God is our help in times of trouble. The seventh lesson is to leave your print on the world. Have a positive outlook on life and leave a positive print on the world. The eighth lesson is: don't let anything stand in your way. Go around or over in whatever you are doing as long as God leads you.

Kim Brookman, missionary education leader, shared about our financial donation to the Children's Home Society in Rupert. The facility is going to use the money to take the children clothes shopping. We also donated towels and wash clothes. She also showed a video of missionaries Mark and Kathy Fulton in Haiti and the hospital they help run. She told us about Tim and Jenn Adams who work with Global Strategy in the Church of God ministries and Canadian ministries located in Southeast Asia. They are based in Thailand and help with the ministries in ten countries in Southeast Asia. They have four children, and both came from faith-filled families. Tim concentrates on teaching and Jenn is involved in administration.

Jamie Harvey gave the treasurer's report and Pauline Perkins read last month's minutes.

Carole thanked members for their hard work on the yard sale. It was a huge success thanks to all of our customers and contributors. The group will be serving the Maxwellton Ruritans on September 28. The group discussed how to honor our Pastor and family during October because it is Pastor Appreciation Month. The group discussed making apple sauce cakes and loafs as a future project. It will be decided the next meeting.

National Wildlife Federation certifies new wildlife habitat farm in Cornstalk

Local resident makes a difference to protect wildlife

The National Wildlife Federation (NWF), America's largest wildlife conservation and education organization, is pleased that David and Kathy Hunter in Cornstalk, WV have successfully created a Certified Wildlife Habitat through its Garden for Wildlife movement.

NWF celebrates this effort to create a garden that supports birds, butterflies, bees, frogs and other local wildlife. Every Certified Wildlife Habitat garden provides natural sources of food, water, cover and places to raise young and is maintained in a sustainable way that incorporates native plants, conserves water and doesn't rely on pesticides.

Started in 1973, the Garden for Wildlife movement is the oldest and largest native plant/habitat program, recognizing over 289,000 Certified Wildlife Habitat gardens across the United States to date, encompassing an estimated 4 million acres that support wildlife locally. Backyards, urban gardens, school grounds, businesses, places of worship, campuses, parks, farms, zoos, and community landscapes can all be recognized as wildlife habitats through the program. "We are excited about this new Certified Wildlife Habitat, as it provides native plants and essential habitat elements. Research shows certified properties have the potential to support twice as much wildlife compared to non-certified properties." Said, Mary Phillips, Head of Garden for Wildlife/Certified Wildlife Habitat.

"Anyone, anywhere can restore wildlife habitat right in their own yards and communities," said NWF Naturalist David Mizejewski. "Whether you garden in a suburban yard, an urban area or a rural plot of land, you can make a difference for local wildlife. Creating a Certified Wildlife Habitat garden is fun, easy and makes a real difference for neighborhood wildlife. It's the perfect grassroots way to think globally and act locally and help birds, butterflies, bees and other wildlife," he added. "We enjoy watching wildlife and wanted to do our part to help. With all of the expansion going on and forests being cut down it is eliminating the habitat for wildlife to survive."

Habitat description:

The farm is densely populated with various oak, walnut, beech, apple, pine and hickory trees as a source of food. Other sources include Joe Pye weed, staghorn, blackberry, raspberry, currents, honeysuckle, daisy, alfalfa, ragweed, milkweed, goldenrod, ironweed, smartweeds, fleabanes and skunk cabbage to name a few.. It also provides cover (places to hide, nest and raise young) and to escape from predators: rock piles and walls, dense shrub thickets, ground cover of moss, leaves and dead tree fall, mature and small trees for nesting, trees with cavities, dens in the ground and wildlife ponds. Water is supplied by a creek that runs through the property and watering containers.

Many of NWF's state affiliate organizations are partners in the Garden for Wildlife movement. Habitats in partnering states have national and state certification.

Participants who have their wildlife habitat garden certified receive a personalized certificate with a unique habitat number, a one-year membership to NWF with a subscription to National Wildlife magazine, a subscription to the Garden for Wildlife e-newsletter, a 10 percent discount to National Wildlife catalog, the exclusive right to post a Certified Wildlife Habitat yard sign and $5 off native plants at www.gardenforwildlife.com.

For more information on NWF's Garden for Wildlife™ movement and how to qualify to have a garden space recognized as a Certified Wildlife Habitat, visit www.nwf.org/garden. Greenbrier East High School to host Spartan Classic Marching Band Competition

High School marching bands from all over West Virginia will converge on Greenbrier East High School on Saturday, Oct. 7, to participate in the Spartan Classic Marching Band Competition. This competition is one of many in the Governor's Cup Marching Band Series presented by the West Virginia Department of the Arts, Culture and History.

Greenbrier East High School will perform in exhibition only, as they are sponsoring the event. They will present "The Greenbrier Ghost," the true story of Zona Heaster Shue, who was murdered in 1897, and whose mother claimed Zona's spirit revealed the true cause of her death. This is the only known case in which testimony from a ghost helped to convict a murderer.

Slated to perform at the event are North Marion High School, James Monroe High School, Scott High School, Woodrow Wilson High School, Liberty High School, Hurricane High School, Shady Spring High School, Cabell Midland High School, Greenbrier West High School, Summers County High School, and Eastern Greenbrier Middle School.

Gates will open at 10 a.m. Gate admission is $10 for adults and $5 for students. Concessions will be available, as well as a basket raffle fundraiser and air grams.

The 2023 Governor's Cup Series helps promote the Department's educational Save The Music Foundation Program, which provides free musical instruments to middle schools throughout West Virginia and allows the Department to distribute prize money to high school bands.

Bands collect points by competing in at least four local competitions along with the West Virginia Marching Band Invitational Championship and Governor's Cup Series final, held on Oct. 21, to be eligible to win the overall Governor's Cup and more prize money. The Governor's Cup final will award $5,000 to the grand champion, $3,000 to the 1st runner-up, $1,500 to the 2nd runner-up, $1,000 to the 3rd runner-up, and $500 to the 4th runner-up.

COGNITIVE DECLINE RISK AWARENESS & HEARING HEALTH DECISIONS

A 25-year study shows hearing aid use can reduce the progression of cognitive decline in older adults.

Using your hearing, just like exercising a muscle, makes it stronger and more effective. Reduced hearing stimulation due to untreated hearing loss can lead to atrophy of functional brain pathways. WV State Historic Preservation Survey and Planning Grants available

Applications are now being accepted for FY 2024 historic preservation survey and planning grants through the State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) of the West Virginia Department of Arts, Culture and History (WV-DACH). Approximately $100,000 will be awarded from funding appropriated by the United States Congress for preservation efforts through the National Park Service Historic Preservation Fund. Grant funds are awarded on a matching basis. Deadline for receipt of applications is Oct. 31, 2023.

A complete program description, including funding priorities and selection criteria, and access to the GoApply on-line grant application portal, are available at <https://wv-culture.org/agencies/state-historic-preservation-office-shpo/grants/> or contact Christy Moore, grants coordinator for the SHPO, at 304-558-0240 or Christina.J.Moore@wv.gov.

State or local government agencies, not-for-profit organizations, for-profit organizations or firms, and educational institutions and Certified Local Governments (CLG) are eligible to apply. Eligible projects include architectural and archaeological surveys, preparation of National Register of Historic Places nominations, heritage education programs relating to preservation activities (i.e. hands-on window or masonry workshops), pre-development activities and comprehensive planning documents projects. Funded projects must be completed by Aug. 31, 2024.

A competitive process is used to determine the recipients. An outside grant panel reviews and makes recommendations to the West Virginia Archives and History Commission. The recommendations of the Commission are submitted to the Governor's Office, who has final decision on awarding of grants. The projects are selected based on how they best meet the established priorities and criteria stated in the grant information. All grant monies must be administered in accordance with federal and state requirements.

The announcement of grantees is planned for April 2024, contingent upon receipt of an allocation by the National Park Service.

The West Virginia Department of Arts, Culture and History brings together the state's past, present and future through programs and services in the areas of archives and history, the arts, historic preservation, and museums. CAMC's 'Living Donor Chain' celebrated

WVPA Staff Report

The first successful kidney transplant surgery in West Virginia was completed on Sept. 29, 1987. With nearly 1,700 transplants performed in the 36 years that have followed, what was once a major procedure is now on the precipice of becoming same-day surgery.

"Thirty-five years ago, the surgery was very different," said Dr. Santosh Nagaraju, kidney transplant surgeon at Charleston Area Medical Center (CAMC). Nagaraju spoke at Charleston's CAMC General Hospital on Monday, as part of a panel celebrating the recent achievements of CAMC's "Living Donor Chain" program.

"Everything is done microscopically, so the patient has a very small incision," Nagaraju explained. "The recovery is very much better compared to what it was. In the past, it used to be a very big incision that sometimes involved cutting out a rib or going through the belly. Recovery time would be three or four weeks. Now we've come to a point where we're thinking about sending people home the same day or the next morning."

Sharing in Nagaraju's enthusiasm regarding the nearly four-decades of medical advancements was fellow CAMC transplant surgeon, Dr. Shakir Hussein, who noted that the procedure has been "pinned down" and refined to a "more set sequence."

"Every now and then we get a surprise and we have to deal with it," Hussein added. "But for the most part, we know exactly what we have based on the CAT scans and the ultrasounds. We go in with a plan and a roadmap of what we're going to do. It's more standard than what it was 30-years-ago."

Joining the doctors as part of the panel were CAMC Kidney Transplant Center Administrator Alice Jones, and Lead Transplant/Living Donor Coordinator Susan Hanna. Also participating were kidney donor Johanna Holt, and her husband, William Wallace. Although Wallace is the recent recipient of a donated kidney, it was not his wife's that he received. Through CAMC's Living Donor Chain program, Wallace received a kidney donated by John Jacobs, a man whom Wallace had not met until the day of the surgery.

To begin the discussion, Jones reiterated to those in attendance that, in 1987, "West Virginia had its first kidney transplant. It was from a living donor; a mother donated to her daughter. Now, 30 years and 1,685 transplants later, we're making history again in West Virginia - we had our first paired-exchange through the chain (program)."

Holt donated her kidney on Aug. 24. In total, the successful transplant required that six different people - including both Holt and Wallace - undergo kidney surgery. Two days later, Wallace received a healthy kidney donated by Jacobs.

"Going into this, I knew that I was not a match for his blood type," Holt said. "Ultimately, I wanted to do a paired donation - I knew that would hopefully be our end result. So, you put yourself on the paired donation list, and then you just wait."

Holt's kidney was donated to and saved the life of Alice Henson. Although Henson's daughter, Jessica, was not a donor-match for her mother, Jessica was a match for Katesa Jacobs. Katesa's husband, John Jacobs, while not a suitable match for his wife, was able to provide the life-saving organ to Wallace, thus completing the Living Donor Chain.

Wallace began kidney dialysis treatments in Oct. 2022. Some 10 months later, the couple would receive a phone call from Hanna that would change their lives.

"Susan called and asked if that (Living Donor Chain program) was something we were still interested in," Holt said. "I started doing the testing the next day, and then we were in surgery two weeks later."

Hanna, Jones, and both surgeons referred to Holt as a "superhero." This was a sentiment shared by Wallace, who referred to his wife as being simply "amazing."

Kidney donations can be made from both living and deceased donors. However, according to a 2014 study conducted by Nephro-Urology Monthly at the request of the National Institute of Health, donations made by living donors statistically result in more favorable long-term results.

Hanna, who is tasked with connecting the dots to potentially pair viable transfer candidates, explained that, "A living donor is obviously the best option as far as quality of the kidney. If somebody has a living donor, that patient is taken off the waiting list to allow somebody who may not have a living donor the option of a deceased donor."

Holt believes that everyone should have the option of a living donor.

"I was super happy that we were going to get a kidney for him (Wallace), and I felt blessed that I was going to be able to help somebody else," Holt said. "As much as you're concerned for your loved one, there's just as much concern for that other family."

"I lost my mother a year ago, and I lost my brother a couple of weeks before this happened," Holt added. "I also felt like I was able to donate to somebody else's mother so they didn't have to go through the loss that I did. I feel like that's another dynamic of this journey for us."

For those wishing to learn more about CAMC's Living Donor Chain program, or for additional information about becoming a donor, contact Susan Hanna at 304-308-7823, or visit camc.org.

FirstEnergy named top utility for economic development by Site Selection Magazine 5th year in a row

Job creation and third-party capital investment are key measurements

For the fifth year in a row, FirstEnergy Corp. has been named by Site Selection magazine as one of the nation's leading utilities in promoting economic development, helping to attract more than 12,000 new jobs and $7.3 billion in third-party corporate facility investment in its six-state service area in 2022.

Twenty Site Selection award winners were chosen from a field of more than 3,300 electric companies and cooperatives across the country. They were recognized for complementing reliable power delivery to their customers with a hands-on approach to encouraging business development in their operational areas.

FirstEnergy's economic development team positively influenced 86 major projects in 2022, representing more than 12,000 new jobs for its service area. The projects included an energy storage system factory in West Virginia that will employ at least 750 people, a distribution center in Pennsylvania that will employ 3,500 people, a data center in Maryland and a chicken cooking facility and solar panel manufacturing plant both in northeast Ohio. The number of jobs that FirstEnergy helped to attract in 2022 is the largest among the companies recognized in Site Selection's East North Central region.

"This is our 19th recognition by Site Selection in the past 21 years, which is a testament to our company's commitment to economic development projects that benefit the customers we serve," said Patrick Kelly, director of economic development for FirstEnergy. "We are proud to receive this honor once again, but even more important to us is the positive impacts these facilities bring to our local communities."

FirstEnergy's economic development team regularly provides the following services for companies looking to locate or expand in its footprint:

- Permitting and regulations expertise
- Information on available sites and buildings
- Demographic, workforce and business establishments data
- Introductions to local, regional and state officials
- Information about local and state economic development incentives

"A major focus in 2022 was our work on our 'State of the Customer' initiative to help FirstEnergy better understand the unique requirements of our various commercial and industrial customers," said Kelly. "Through research, segmentation and customer surveys last year, we have gained insight on how we can continue to provide top-notch service to our commercial and industrial customers for many years to come."

Along with expertise in business development relationships and programs, FirstEnergy is investing in transmission system enhancements and grid modernization to provide world-class infrastructure capable of powering energy-intensive industries now and in the future. The company's West Virginia utilities are also in the process of developing five utility-scale solar facilities that are intended to support economic development in the state, as a growing number of companies require that a portion of the electricity they purchase be generated by renewable sources.

FirstEnergy is dedicated to integrity, safety, reliability and operational excellence. Its 10 electric distribution companies form one of the nation's largest investor-owned electric 3 systems, serving customers in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, West Virginia, Maryland and New York. The company's transmission subsidiaries operate approximately 24,000 miles of transmission lines that connect the Midwest and Mid-Atlantic regions. Frankford Autumnfest upcoming

Plans for the Frankford Autumnfest are wrapping up! The festival will be held on Saturday, Sept. 30 in the quaint, beautiful, small town of Frankford. We are finalizing details with this family-friendly community event!

The day will start off with the annual Pancake Breakfast at the Frankford Presbyterian Church from 7 a.m. until the parade starts at 11 a.m. You must try the buckwheat pancakes!

The Grand Parade is always a big hit and averages 50 to 60 entrants each year, including floats, horses, bands, civic groups, antique cars, and much more. Line up and registration begins at 8 a.m. until 10 a.m. Categories that will be judged are bands, EMS/Fire departments (judged separately), royalty (any queens or kings from the area, only those escorted via classic car/ATV, etc will be eligible for judging), classic cars, ATVs/off road vehicles, walkers, tractors, floats and parade favorites, equine. Judging will be at 10 a.m., no entry after 10 a.m. will be judged, but is more than welcome to join in, and the parade will begin promptly at 11 a.m. Note a small change this year - only one entry per group, company, or organization will be eligible for judging.

The art tent will be open with various art activities for all ages, such as spin art, body art and more. An annual favorite, the Youth Marketplace, will be back this year. This is an opportunity for children under the age of 18 who have art, crafts, jewelry, produce, etc. to display their goods and offer them for sale. We will also have face painting, games for the kids and inflatables. Plenty to keep everyone of all ages engaged for the afternoon.

The fifth-grade students are working on Heritage projects about the local area. Hours of hard work and creativity go into these projects. You will want to take time to check these out as they will be on display for the festival.

Of course, no festival is complete without food, and we will have food galore. Some of the goodies planned so far are nachos, burgers, hot dogs, walking tacos, biscuits, cinnamon rolls and lots of baked goodies. For the early birds, we will also have breakfast biscuits available. We have several arts and craft vendors scheduled as well. We have not heard from a Scentsy, Tupperware, Pampered Chef, Avon or the like representatives yet, though, so if this is you or you know someone who sells such items, please let them know about us and invite them to come. We also extend an invitation to school bands, choirs, etc. to join us. We would love for them to perform, but if nothing else they are welcome to just join in on the fun or possibly use the event as a fundraiser.

K9 demonstrations for search and rescue, as well introductions to the traditional squirrel hunting and squirrel hunting with dogs, will be onsite. If you have a particular fondness for other types of hunting and are interested in introducing the youth to your favorite sport, please consider coming as well. There will also be an introduction to archery demonstration held in the gym. Many of the local schools are offering archery instruction with the physical education programs and Frankford Elementary is excited to be participating in this endeavor. We would love to have someone come to set up to introduce the youth to fishing as well. If you have a love for fishing, are interested in perhaps teaching others how to fall in love with the sport, how to tie flies, discuss what bait to use for various fish species, etc., feel free to contact Kim as soon as possible at 304-646-2874. We would love to introduce our youth (and adults) to the outdoors and some of the sports that they may be missing out on or not familiar with at all, or maybe to even learn the "talk" about the "one that got away."

We are pleased to announce the return of the Health Fair. Many vendors and providers have reserved slots for the health fair that will be held in the cafeteria. An addition to this year are some of the mobile clinics from local clinics such as Robert C Byrd and the Maxwellton Health Center. You won't want to miss this opportunity to see all the services that can be available to you without having to visit the actual clinic. The health fair will run from 12 noon until 3 p.m.

Last year's new addition, the Car Show, will return this year. Last year's hurricane remnant weather significantly affected this and we are hopeful for much better weather this year and a large turnout for this. Of course, we want you to show off your pride and joy in the parade, but we are extending an invitation to participate in the car show which will begin promptly following the parade. The event will take place on the school grounds, "in the circle." There will be drawings for prizes to the first 15 registrants. There is a $15 registration fee. For more information, contact Crystal at 304-667-8173. In addition to the car show, we are hopeful that a few of the antique tractors from the parade will be on display on the grounds afterwards.

The day's live musical entertainment will kick off at noon with The Thomas Taylor Band, followed by Ben Hersman and The Sons of the Mountains at 1 p.m. Following them at 2 p.m. will be The Eades Mountain Boys, and Autumnfest veterans Mud Hole Control will wrap up the live music at 3 p.m.

No Frankford Autumnfest would be complete without the decorated pumpkin contest, pasta art, and the largest sunflower contests. Entries are due by 1 p.m. by Shelby's Pond and judging will take place at 1:30 p.m. You will want to make sure you take time to look at these fantastic creations! A child's imagination is a cherished thing and they put them to the test making their pasta and pumpkin creations. Lots of hard work and imagination are put into these displays.

Speaking of Shelby's Pond, you must take a moment to visit the Garden of Remembrance! This is a newer addition to the school grounds, beside Shelby's Pond. There have been memorial markers placed for the three students from Frankford Elementary School who were tragically lost two years ago.

The annual Frankford Ruritan Club Dinner will be in the school cafeteria from 3:30 until 6:30 p.m. The menu this year is spaghetti and is being offered by donation. The proceeds from this event help to fund scholarships for high school seniors from the Frankford area.

The committee is still accepting registrations for food vendors, arts and crafts, parade and demonstrations, so there are likely to be other things added that are not mentioned here that you will not want to miss. Feel free to contact Kim at 304-646-2874 for general festival information, or Justin at 304-667-0917 for food concessions. If you are interested in attending as a vendor, please contact Kim or Justin accordingly and arrive at the school no later than 10 a.m. to avoid possible injury with parade spectators.

All vendors setting up for the festival should be set up and their vehicles parked by 10:30 a.m. to alleviate traffic issues with the parade and possible injury to parade spectators. Spots are as large as you need and are on a first come, first served basis. We do ask that you bring your own canopies, chairs, etc. Pre-registration is not necessary. If you want to wait until that day to be certain of weather, etc., just show up by 10 a.m. and someone will direct you where to go. Reservations and bookings for the 2024 Autumnfest are also taking place now!

We would like to thank The Hollowell Foundation, The Mary B Nickell Family, The WV Department of Arts, Culture and History, Radio Greenbrier, Car Wash Consultants, White Sulphur Springs EMS and SJ Neathawk Lumber for their generous support and sponsorships to help make this event possible.

The committee would like to remind motorists of the following safety concerns. US Route 219 from the old car wash just north of Frankford to the US Route 219 and Anthony Creek Road intersection will be affected by the parade. The parade will take place at 11 a.m. Detours will be set up as usual. Please be aware of persons walking near or across the roadways throughout the day.

Some seating is provided, however feel free to bring your own chair and surely with all of these events, you will have no problem being occupied for the day! We hope to see everyone there!

We ask that you do not call the school as they are busy with everyday operations, questions can be directed to Kim at 304-646-2874.

(All events are subject to change without prior notice.)

ARC grant will allow WVSOM to help individuals in recovery stay employed

The West Virginia School of Osteopathic Medicine (WVSOM) will receive $500,000 from the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) to make it easier for individuals in Greenbrier County with substance use disorder to attain and maintain employment.

Through ARC's Investments Supporting Partnerships In Recovery Ecosystems (INSPIRE) Initiative, WVSOM's Center for Rural and Community Health (CRCH) will receive $250,000 per year for two years to implement a project called Connecting the DOTS: Developing Opportunities for Transportation Ecosystems. The project will address barriers in Greenbrier County's recovery ecosystem, including access to reliable transportation, available childcare and supportive mentoring, and provide targeted training involving local employers and workers in recovery.

The grant will allow WVSOM's CRCH to partner with Mountain Transit Authority, a public transportation service that operates in five counties in southeastern West Virginia, to develop, implement and coordinate a transportation service and expanded bus routes for people in recovery to travel for workforce-related needs.

Additionally, the school will partner with the Rupert, WV-based Meadow River Valley Early Childhood Learning Center, also known as the Marvel Center, to implement a workforce mentoring program for those in recovery. Experts will work with local businesses to offer targeted workforce training for hiring and supporting individuals in recovery. WVSOM expects to serve 40 workers and five businesses through the program.

The project will assist adults 18 and older who are in recovery and unemployed or underemployed.

Drema Hill, Ph.D., WVSOM's vice president for community engagement and chief operations officer, said the grant will help WVSOM's CRCH make a difference in the lives of individuals in recovery.

"This award will have a direct and powerful impact on individuals living with substance use disorder who seek recovery services as they prepare to return to the workforce," Hill said. "Transportation, childcare and supportive services are the greatest barriers to successful employment, and this funding will help to alleviate those barriers. We are proud to partner with the Appalachian Regional Commission to positively impact the

New USDA study on consumer kitchen behavior underscores importance of Food Safety Education Month

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) is releasing during Food Safety Education Month the results from the final year of a five-year study that observed how consumers prepared meals. The study was produced by USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS) as part of their efforts to highlight the importance of safe food handling practices.

"These studies are important for USDA to understand consumer behaviors in the kitchen and it is timely to be releasing the latest findings during Food Safety Education Month," said USDA Under Secretary for Food Safety Dr. Emilio Esteban. "The results allow us to shape food safety communications and help consumers safely prepare food."

The study observed food safety behaviors, including participants' thermometer use for ground pork sausage, handwashing, and cleaning and sanitizing of food preparation surfaces.

Handwashing: As seen in the previous four years of the study, thorough handwashing remains a concern. The most recent data shows that 87% of participants self-reported they washed their hands before starting to cook in the test kitchen. However, only 44% of participants were observed doing so before meal preparation. Additionally, handwashing was not attempted 83% of the time when it should have been done (e.g., touching raw sausage and unwashed cantaloupe, cracking eggs, contaminated equipment or surfaces). Throughout the study, 96% of handwashing attempts did not contain all necessary steps.

Thermometer Use: In the study, 50% of participants used a food thermometer to check the doneness of the sausage patties. However, 50% of those participants did not check all the patties with a food thermometer. It is important to check all pieces of food being cooked to ensure all have reached a safe internal temperature. Thickness and size of a food item can cause it to cook to different temperatures.

Cross-Contamination: The study used a harmless tracer bacteria, which was injected into the pork sausage, to simulate the spread of foodborne illness-causing bacteria during meal preparation. Among the surfaces tested, the kitchen sink was most often contaminated, with 34% of participants contaminating the sink during meal preparation. The next highest was the cantaloupe, with 26% of participants introducing contamination when cutting the cantaloupe during meal preparation. Contamination on fruits and vegetables, and other ready-to-eat foods, is especially concerning because these foods are consumed raw, without a final step like cooking, which kill bacteria.

For more food safety information, call the USDA Meat and Poultry Hotline at 1-888-MPHotline (1-888-674-6854), email MPHHotline@usda.gov or chat live at ask.usda.gov from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Eastern Time, Monday through Friday.

USDA touches the lives of all Americans each day in so many positive ways. In the Biden-Harris Administration, USDA is transforming America's food system with a greater focus on more resilient local and regional food production, fairer markets for all producers, ensuring access to safe, healthy and nutritious food in all communities, building new markets and streams of income for farmers and producers using climate-smart food and forestry practices, making historic investments in infrastructure and clean energy capabilities in rural America, and committing to equity across the Department by removing systemic barriers and building a workforce more representative of America.
