This Week in WV History

Oct. 7, 1747: Pioneer Ebenezer Zane, the founder of Wheeling, was born on the South Branch of the Potomac River near present Moorefield in Hardy County.

The following events happened on these dates in West Virginia history. To read more, go to e-WV: The West Virginia Encyclopedia at www.wvencyclopedia.org.

Oct. 4, 1890: A traveling circus arrived in Alderson. While in town, the show’s lioness gave birth to cubs. Susan Bebout, wife of a local blacksmith, raised one of the rapidly growing cubs in her backyard. Its regular escape led the town to pass an ordinance requiring all lions to be kept on leashes.

Oct. 4, 1934: Sam Huff was born at Edna, near Morgantown. Huff was part of a fearsome defense that led West Virginia University to a 38-7 record between 1952 and 1955, including three consecutive wins over rival Penn State.

Oct. 4, 1967: Basketball player Vicky Bullett was born in Martinsburg. While starring at the University of Maryland, she helped lead the U.S. women’s basketball team to a gold medal in the 1988 Olympics.

Oct. 6, 1928: Traditional musician William “Frank” George was born in Bluefield. The multi-instrumentalist and his wife, Jane George, were leaders in the old-time folk and music revival of the 1960s and 1970s.

Oct. 7, 1763: England’s King George III issued a proclamation banning all settlement west of the Alleghenies. In present-day West Virginia, the line ran along the divide between eastern rivers and the Ohio watershed, leaving only the Eastern Panhandle and a fraction of Monroe County open to settlement.

Oct. 7, 1900: Poet Roy Lee Harmon was born in Boone County. He founded the West Virginia Poetry Society and served as the state’s poet laureate for 38 years.

Oct. 7, 1947: Musician Mike Morningstar was born in Parkersburg. He has performed across West Virginia in small bands and as a solo act since the 1960s. His heartfelt songs about our state have earned him the nickname of “West Virginia’s Troubadour.”

Oct. 7, 1957: Musician Michael W. Smith was born in Kenova, Wayne County. One of the top-selling artists in gospel music history, he has recorded 37 albums (selling 18 million), had 35 number-one songs and written over a dozen books.

Oct. 8, 1764: Harman Blennerhassett was born in England. He and his wife Margaret settled on an island near Parkersburg in 1798 and built an elaborate mansion.

Oct. 8, 1993: The Rev. Bernard Coffindaffer died unexpectedly of a heart attack. Starting in 1984, Coffindaffer began erecting clusters of crosses in West Virginia and other states. He was buried in Nicholas County, just across the highway from a set of his crosses.

Oct. 8, 1909: Harry Brawley was born in Charleston. As a history teacher, he pioneered the use of radio in classrooms and later broadcast shows for schools. He was also instrumental in founding what is now West Virginia Public Broadcasting.

Oct. 9, 1918: Lucinda Rose died. During World War I, the Doddridge County native and Clarksburg resident was dispatched overseas as a nurse with the Red Cross. She contracted influenza on the transport and died after reaching England. She is the only West Virginia woman to lose her life overseas during the war.

In 1805, they joined the Aaron Burr Conspiracy, leading to Harman’s arrest on treason charges. Although released after Burr’s acquittal, Blennerhassett died in poverty in 1831.

Oct. 9, 1877: The Episcopal Church created the Diocese of West Virginia. The initial convention of the new diocese met at St. John’s Episcopal in Charleston, with 14 clergy and 16 lay delegates.

Oct. 9, 2014: Following court rulings and announcements by the governor and the attorney general, same-sex marriage was effectively legalized in West Virginia.

Oct. 10, 1774: Shawnee warriors led by Cornstalk were defeated by Virginia militia at the Battle of Point Pleasant. It was the only major engagement of Dunmore’s

Gov. Morrisey launches statewide home energy rebate programs to lower utility costs for WV families

Governor Patrick Morrisey recently announced the statewide launch of West Virginia’s Home Energy Rebate programs, expanding access to home efficiency upgrades designed to lower utility costs and help West Virginia families keep more of their hard-earned money. West Virginia has been allocated $88 million through the federal programs.

“Affordability is one of the biggest challenges facing West Virginia families, and lowering monthly energy bills is one way we can help families keep more of their hard-earned money,” said Governor Morrisey. “We want to hold down energy costs, create good-paying jobs, and make sure West Virginians have every opportunity to get ahead.”

West Virginia was the first state to launch under new federal guidance and received more than 300 applications from homeowners during the pilot phase. Qualifying low-income households can receive eligible improvements with no out-of-pocket cost within program limits, while options are available for moderate-income households as well.

The impact is already being seen by participating homeowners. Judy Fry, the first West Virginia homeowner to receive upgrades through the program, attended the ceremony and saw her first electric bill following the improvements drop by 33.5 percent, saving her $102 in one month.

“That’s real money that stays in a family’s pocket and can go toward groceries, gas, prescriptions, or whatever else that family needs,” Governor Morrisey said. “As we take these programs statewide, we expect thousands of West Virginia households to benefit from lower energy costs.”

The programs are expected to serve approximately 10,000 West Virginia homes and generate between $3 million and $4.5 million in annual savings for participating households.

Eligibility is based primarily on household income, with rebate amounts varying by income level and the type of home energy improvements being completed.

Low-income households
Higher levels of assistance, including eligible improvements with no out-of-pocket cost within program limits.

Moderate-income households
Rebates may cover a portion of eligible project costs.

Households above moderate income
Some rebates may still be available depending on the project and projected energy savings.

West Virginians can use the Office of Energy’s online eligibility information and tools to determine their income category and learn what assistance may be available.

Check your eligibility and view full program details

The statewide launch will also create demand for skilled workers, with approximately 350 contractors expected to be needed to carry out rebate-related work. Nearly $1.9 million in program funding is dedicated to workforce development, including $1.6 million for training residential energy contractors. More than 100 participants are currently enrolled in the West Virginia Energy Efficiency Contractor program, and the Office of Energy has a $1.2 million application pending to establish an energy internship program with major employers across the state.

The workforce effort comes as West Virginia continues to see significant economic growth. Since October 2025, the state has announced approximately $96 billion in private-sector investment representing more than 19,000 projected jobs.

Carnegie Hall Presents Jason Carter and Michael Cleveland

Lewisburg, West Virginia - Carnegie Hall is honored to welcome bluegrass powerhouses Jason Carter and Michael Cleveland to its Mainstage on Friday, October 2 at 7 p.m., for an evening that promises to be one of the most exhilarating acoustic performances of the season. Guests are invited to come early for the free Club Carnegie from 6 – 6:45 p.m. in the Board Room located adjacent to the Hamilton Auditorium. A cash bar and snacks are available.

Widely regarded as two of the most decorated fiddlers in International Bluegrass Music Association history, Carter and Cleveland bring to Lewisburg a rare musical partnership defined by extraordinary technique, deep emotional resonance, and a shared devotion to the traditions that shaped them.

Their story begins more than three decades ago, when the two first met as teenagers - young musicians already turning heads with their fire, precision, and unmistakable artistic voices. Over the years, their paths crossed repeatedly on festival stages, in studio sessions, and through collaborations with artists such as Del McCoury. What emerged from those encounters is a twin-fiddle blend so intuitive and tightly woven that it is often compared to the seamlessness of sibling vocal harmony. Their interplay - equal parts daring improvisation and reverent craftsmanship - has become a hallmark of their sound and a defining force in contemporary bluegrass.

That connection takes center stage in their recent duo project, Carter & Cleveland, which shows the full breadth of their musical chemistry. Audiences can expect a rich tapestry of bluegrass standards, alt-country gems, and lush twin-fiddle arrangements, all anchored by Carter’s warm baritone and Cleveland’s virtuosic command. The program reflects not only their technical mastery but also their shared belief in bluegrass as a living, evolving art form - one capable of honoring its roots while embracing new colors, textures, and stories.

With a combined 18 IBMA Fiddle Player of the Year awards and multiple GRAMMY wins and nominations, Carter and Cleveland stand among the most celebrated instrumentalists of their generation. Their partnership has been hailed as a landmark collaboration in modern bluegrass, offering audiences a thrilling, heartfelt celebration of tradition, innovation, and lifelong musical kinship. Carnegie Hall is proud to present these two extraordinary artists in a performance that promises both breathtaking virtuosity and the unmistakable joy of musicians who have spent a lifetime inspiring one another.

Artist on Display: Carly Thaw — Back in Appalachia

By Zachery Miller

Carly Thaw grew up in the hills of West Virginia, but she spent nearly 12 years away, living among other landscapes. Montana. Washington State. Vancouver, British Columbia. Different places, different mountains, but wherever she landed, West Virginia kept showing up as a point of comparison.

She never really stopped measuring the world against it.

“All I could do was compare where I was living back to West Virginia because that was my context,” Thaw says.

Distance, it turns out, brought home into focus. She spent that decade away thinking more deeply about the landscape of Appalachia than she ever had while living in it. Now, a year back, she says her eyes and her mind are “tuned up” to see it differently.

This perspective gave Back in Appalachia its title. The exhibition, on display at Carnegie Hall’s Old Stone Room Gallery through October, is a culmination of the past several years of Thaw’s art. It includes older work, some of it made while she lived outside the state, and newer pieces she finished this summer. Even the older work, she says, was about West Virginia and how it differed from wherever she was living. Throughout the collection, she explores patterns in nature and the layering of intricate patterns in nature.

Together, the work reads less like a homecoming and more like a deeper, second look at something already intimately familiar. Looking closely is where Thaw’s art begins.

She is a long-distance trail runner, and she spends a lot of time seeing the same things over and over again, though they never look quite the same. The rhododendron bush on one trail doesn’t look exactly like the one on another.

“You start to see the personalities of the individual landscapes,” she says.

Early on, she enjoyed painting landscapes from life and from reference photos she had taken. When she wanted to dig deeper, she started focusing on the individual components that make up a landscape,

“The deeper I looked, the more intricate it got. If you start looking at an individual species of plant or animal, or some type of geology or rocks that are in a certain place, then you start to learn about the micro-patterns and the chemical and structural patterns that happen with the growth of these things.”

Today she paints the full landscape, or the full being, while thinking about those microstructures and how she might represent them.

“I think I’ve always just been curious about how things work and how things are made,” she says.

That curiosity led her to studying field guides and researching her subjects as she drew them. What began as a question of how to draw a bird grew into a scientific interest. “My interest in the science of it and my art-making are definitely connected,” she says.

Thaw has created graphics and illustrations for science nonprofits, field guides, and science communication organizations. Her website describes her studio work as informed by the science and mathematics underlying ecology and Earth’s living systems, with intricate mark-making drawn from patterns in nature.

She sees the two sides of her work as closer than they might appear. “I really see art as a means of communication—visual communication,” she says. The difference is how directly the message is delivered. When she works with an organization, the goal is to make a specific point clearly. In her studio work, including the pieces at Carnegie Hall, the communication is more abstract.

“Translating a sensory experience into something that you’re looking at on a page is kind of indirect. That’s why I’ve been experimenting a lot with how I’m using color and lines and overlapping patterns inspired by the scientific, structural part, but making it try to communicate something more visceral—making the colors vibrate or making the pattern super dense so that it gives you a sensory experience when you’re looking at it.”

Thaw sees things with a certain depth, and this helps to shape how she portrays Appalachia’s landscape in her work.

“One of the things I think I carried with me out of West Virginia was this kind of intense energy that the mountains have—mountain ranges, the geological features are so enormous that it’s just a certain feeling. Appalachia has a really particular one because the hills are so ancient. I feel like if you’ve talked to anybody that’s from this area, they would have a similar sensation... that sort of visceral feeling is what I’m trying to capture.”

Preservation of natural spaces is her North Star, but what she hopes to do with her studio work is simple: get people to look a little closer, and feel something. According to Thaw, “there’s interesting nature and cool little tiny worlds in your own backyard.” You don’t need a science background, or a deep love for nature to accept the invitation. You only have to slow down enough to notice.

Back in Appalachia by Carly Thaw is on display at Carnegie Hall’s Old Stone Room Gallery through the end of October. To learn more about Carly Thaw and see more of her work, visit CarlyThaw.com.
