The Rotary Club of Blacksburg recently awarded three scholarships to Caroline Bowman, Tyler Mower, and David Fox as the winners of the club's Fine Arts Awards.

The Fine Arts Awards are given to students who exhibit good personal character and who live the Rotary Club motto of "Service above Self." As part of the awards process, students audition before a committee of Rotarians.

Each student won a $1,000 scholarship, and the Rotary Club will place a children's book in the Montgomery-Floyd Regional Library in each student's honor.

Caroline Bowman is a graduate of Blacksburg High School and was a member of the Madrigal Singers and

RU holds groundbreaking for Artis Center

At a special ceremony on Tuesday, May 25, 2021, Radford University administrators and supporters officially broke ground for the Artis Center for Adaptive Innovation and Creativity.

Named for alumna Nancy Eisenhart Artis of the Class of '73 and her husband, Dr. H. Pat Artis, who donated $6 million to the university to support student scholarships, the Artis Center is a state-of-the-art complex that will serve as a blended teaching and learning space for the arts and health sciences.

"Today, the commitment and generosity of Nancy and Pat Artis takes yet another bold step forward," said Radford University President Brian O. Hemphill during the ceremony.

The Artises founded and owned Performance Associates, Inc., a company based in Pagosa Springs, Colo., that focused on performance and replication for enterprise storage subsystems. As longtime supporters of the university, they also donated $5 million in 2017 to establish the Artis Endowed Scholarship Fund. In appreciation, the Artis College of Science and Technology was named in their honor.

Following the most recent announcement of the naming of the Artis Center, the Artises credited their fathers, Harry P. Artis and Harry W. "Hap" Eisenhart, for investing in them through education.

During Tuesday's event, Nancy Artis said, "Like so many other young men, they set aside their personal dreams, ambitions, and goals of education to answer their nation's call to fight in World War II. Both of these men faced combat in the Pacific as naval aviation machinist mates. Surviving, they returned to lives of service, raised families, and instilled their children with a thirst for education. The only investment either of these men ever made was for the education of their children, the first generations to attend college."

To celebrate the Artis and Eisenhart family legacy of providing access and opportunity for others, the Artises joined President Hemphill, Board of Visitors members, local and state representatives, and dozens of others at the afternoon ceremony in the Covington Center to commemorate the project, the largest capital investment in the history of Radford University.

"In recent years, under President Hemphill's leadership, there have been many achievements and advancements," said Board of Visitors member Mark S. Lawrence. "In turn, the level of support for this university has grown significantly at both local and regional levels. One clear example of that support is the project that we are all gathered here to celebrate today."

The Artis Center at $101 million and 178,000 square feet will support the evolving needs of many academic programs and inspire increased collaboration among students and faculty from across disciplines. Once completed in late 2023, the multi-story building will be the largest academic building on campus. It will replace existing space for the College of Visual and Performing Arts, specifically McGuffey and Porterfield Halls, and create blended student spaces serving the Waldron College of Health and Human Services and the Artis College of Science and Technology.

"The Artis Center for Adaptive Innovation and Creativity will be a game-changer for our faculty, our students and for the disciplines we are so deeply committed to," said Margaret Devaney, dean of the College of Visual and Performing Arts.

With a $1.05 million grant, VT assistant professor Lina Ni is taking a novel approach to eliminating the deadly battle between mosquitoes and humans. Human blood is the perfect temperature for mosquitoes, so Ni is using fruit flies to help limit mosquitoes' ability to detect temperature changes. If she can do that, mosquitoes won't be able to find humans and kill 400,000 of us each year.

VT professor's research aims to blind mosquitoes to the perfect blood temperature for them: 98.6

Though a mosquito's body temperature is a cool 28 degrees Celsius (82.4 Fahrenheit), its highly evolved thermosensory system prefers to drink the blood of organisms with a temperature of 37 degrees Celsius: Fahrenheit 98.6.

The millennia-old waltz between mosquitoes and the creatures possessing their optimal blood — humans — is one with tragic consequences for half of our planet today, each year yielding 200 million malaria cases and 400,000 human deaths.

Virginia Tech School of Neuroscience Assistant Professor Lina Ni hopes to cut in on this dance by researching one of a mosquito's more lab-friendly and less dangerous colleagues, the fruit fly. Her research has recently been awarded a five-year $1.05 million grant from the National Institute of General Medical Sciences, part of the National Institutes of Health.

"If we limit mosquitoes' ability to detect temperature change, we hope that we can better control them," Ni said. "Hopefully then they will not be able to find us so the disease will not be spread."

Like all animals, mosquitoes rely on ambient temperatures to set their body temperatures and "guide the blood-feeding behaviors through which they transmit human diseases," Ni wrote in her grant proposal. "Thus, it is important to identify the temperature-sensing molecules and neurons to help control disease vectors."

Fruit flies, or Drosophila, share some mosquito traits without the ability to transmit disease to humans. They also have "very powerful genetics," allowing them to be genetically manipulated to see if the neurons involved in the temperature-sensing systems can be tweaked, Ni said.

Family pets and cicadas don't always mix

Brood X cicadas have now arrived in large numbers in the East and Midwest, providing backyard pets with a tasty treat. Veterinarian Mark Freeman from the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine at Virginia Tech says pet owners should be extra careful in the next few weeks.

"As a general rule, a pet can eat several cicadas without any complications," said Freeman. "Most dogs find them quite fascinating, and will happily pick them up in their mouths. Once the pet discovers how delightfully crunchy they are, they will also happily eat them. And then eat more and more of them."

"This is where the problems can develop," Freeman said. "Gorging on cicadas can result in varying degrees of GI upset such as vomiting and diarrhea, stomach and intestinal pain, and even the possibility of an obstruction if they ingest too many shells which then can't pass through."

Dr. Freeman warns pet owners that if you see your pet take a cicada in his or her mouth, don't try to take it away from them, as this could cause them to swallow the cicada whole, which presents a choking hazard.

"Either allow them to chew it up, then try to get it out of the mouth, or just allow them to chew it up and swallow it, but keep them away from any more," Freeman said.

"One strong recommendation for dog owners prior to the hatch of the cicadas is to teach the pet the 'leave it' command," Freeman said. "That way, when you're out on a walk with your pet and they come across a number of cicadas, you can more easily keep them from ingesting a large number of them. If you have a young puppy, it would be ideal to keep them on a leash and under control when out on walks to avoid the risk of ingesting large numbers of cicadas."

Freeman said that if your pet gorges on cicadas, he would recommend you see your veterinarian as soon as possible to establish an appropriate treatment plan based on the severity of clinical signs that develop.

"A little vomiting and diarrhea can be managed relatively easily, but severe GI pain or possible obstruction requires a much more aggressive intervention," said Freeman. "For those dogs who only ingest a few cicadas, the risk is very low for any complications or for treatment to be necessary."

Experts from Virginia Tech's department of entomology point out the periodical cicadas will be mostly gone by early July and will not be back for another 17 years. So it's a once in an average pet's lifetime that they will find them.

Dr. Mark Freeman is Clinical Assistant Professor in Community Practice at the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine at Virginia Tech.

Vern Simpson honored by New River Community Action as its Volunteer of the Year

Tristan Mortensen
Contributing writer

The New River Community Action (NRCA) presented Vern Simpson with the Philip Sadler Memorial Community Service Volunteer of the Year Award at the organization's recent Board of Directors meeting.

Simpson was honored for his volunteer service with the Blacksburg Interfaith Food Pantry (BIFP).

Simpson has volunteered at the food pantry for 15 years in various roles. He served as the volunteer director of the pantry for four years following the departure of longtime volunteer director Freda Cromer and currently serves as the volunteer assistant director.

His responsibilities cover the entire spectrum of operations including food acquisition and distribution, client screening, volunteer training, facility maintenance, and compliance with Feed America and NRCA guidelines.

After assuming the role of volunteer director, Simpson began taking steps to encourage community involvement. He divided roles and responsibilities to increase participation by more volunteers, asked volunteers to make suggestions for the operation and improvement of the pantry and implemented many of those suggestions, and helped to grow both the number of people served by the pantry and the support of the community.

During the COVID-19 pandemic, Simpson reorganized operations so clients could continue being served while also protecting the health of the BIFP's volunteers. He developed a drive-through system that has allowed the program to operate without interruption.

NRCA annually awards the Philip Sadler Memorial Community Service Volunteer of the Year Award in memory of Philip M. Sadler, a Pulaski County attorney, community leader, and humanitarian. The award is presented to an outstanding agency volunteer in recognition of exceptional service to the community.

NRCA assists approximately 9,000 residents of the New River Valley each year working in collaboration with local health and human service partner agencies, volunteers, community, and faith-based organizations through a variety of programs that address local conditions of poverty and improve the lives of low-income individuals and families.

Vern Simpson and his wife, Linda, have been volunteers at the Blacksburg Interfaith Food Pantry for 15 years. The New River Community Action recently honored him for his work by presenting him the Philip Sadler award as the organization's Volunteer of the Year.

Health district announces updated mobile vaccination clinic schedules

(CHRISTIANSBURG) -- The Virginia Department of Health's New River Health District, in coordination with the Virginia Department of Emergency Management (VDEM) and other supporting partners, has announced updated dates and locations for an ongoing series of mobile vaccination clinics.

These mobile clinics will offer free COVID-19 vaccines to those ages 18 and up in a series of smaller and more local clinics, primarily in rural and underserved areas where vaccine access can be challenging. They are designed to reach unvaccinated Virginians at times and places that are closer and more convenient.

The mobile vaccination clinics will move from place to place to support local health department efforts in the New River Health District and across the state.

The mobile clinics will offer the one-dose Johnson & Johnson vaccine, thus eliminating the need for a mobile clinic to have to return to a particular area for second-dose shots.

Warm Hearth Village resident Evelyn Long celebrates 70-year Virginia Tech class reunion

Evelyn Long, Class of '51, was one of only 36 women in her class of 1002.

Warm Hearth Village resident Evelyn Long joined the Virginia Tech classes of 1941, 1946, 1951, 1956, 1961, and 1966 recently in celebrating her 70-year class reunion with Zoom sessions.

Hosted online, the reunion celebrated all of VT's Cornerstone Alumni, those who have served as the foundation of the university for more than 50 years.

Long, Class of '51, attended each of the four virtual reunions at the WHV Village Center.

She was the first of her family to attend college. She started out majoring in biology at what is now James Madison University, an all-girls school at the time. Dissatisfied with the program, she transferred to Virginia Tech as one of only 36 women out of 1002 in her graduating class.

Long said being at Tech was a wonderful experience. "Absolutely perfect. I always knew I would go to college. I loved being in school," she said.

Ellen Rorrer, the marketing consultant at the village, worked with Long and Cornerstone Alumni to coordinate the virtual reunions for the residents.

"The village has the privilege of being home to many Virginia Tech alumni, retirees, and Hokie enthusiasts," Rorrer said. "We are so grateful we could bring the virtual Cornerstone Alumni events to residents. It's important to keep them engaged and connected in the greater community; especially when it comes to their Hokie pride."

Warm Hearth Village is a nonprofit senior living community in Blacksburg that provides a full continuum of living options on its campus and in the home.

OPINION

Have I finally become my parents? I sure hope so.

Without a doubt, the most priceless ad campaign running on television right now belongs to Progressive Insurance in which Dr. Rick, a supposed “parents-life coach” coaches home buyers on un-becoming their parents.

The gist of the campaign is that it happens every time: New home owners buy a home and become their parents.

Dr. Rick advises his audience that “the waiter doesn’t need to know your name”; he throws all the pillows off a couch so crowded with them there’s no place to sit (while the pillow lover suffers a conniption); he forcefully tosses into the trash a “No fussin’, no cussin’, no backtalkin’” sign a woman proudly displays; he declares “We’re going to open a PDF” and his audience acts as though he has just told them they had to battle an alligator; he warns in a tone of rather hopeless resolution, “It’s a constant battle”; he says, “Remember, they’re not programs, they’re TV shows” and “You woke up early. No one cares.”

My wife and I got a big laugh recently when as we were walking out of a local restaurant, she realized she had told the waiter our names. At least in that regard, we have become our parents.

I couldn’t be prouder. If there were ever anybody in this life I wanted to become, it would be my parents.

My father’s been dead for more than 30 years, and I still miss him. My mother’s been dead for more than 20 years, and yes, I miss her, too. One of the best and most indelible moments of my life came during the time I was in seminary and was the pastor of a pair of little country churches. She and I sat on the front porch of the parsonage one weekend shortly before she died and she told me how proud she was of what I was doing there. I made my mother proud. I don’t know if there’s anything on this earth more fulfilling than that.

They were kind, loving parents, nothing like what you see so often in TV dramas these days with parents abusing their children whether it’s physically or emotionally or turning the home into a drug den.

What made them special wasn’t money, prestige, or fame. They were just ordinary, everyday people in the classic sense of the term. They got up every morning, went to work, and along the way, managed to take care of their three children and make them feel loved and wanted.

I’ve said this before, but my dad was a hero. During World War II, he fought his way across North Africa and Italy. My mother was a hero, too. She spent more than three years not knowing from day to day whether my dad was alive or dead. I have no idea how she made it. Just a will of iron, I guess.

They got the three of us through college, though to this day, I’m not quite sure how they managed it financially. After we all graduated, they bought a place on a lake. Oh, not one of those fancy-smancy million-dollar places. It was simply a trailer, but when they went, the kids went with them, and there we created some of the fondest memories of our lives.

Again, after we graduated from college, they bought Georgia Bulldog season football tickets. Mom, dad, the wife, and I went to the games, usually accompanied by another couple. Again, great, unforgettable memories.

They raised us right. They took us to church on Sunday. They took us to some friends’ place down in Panacea, Fla., a little fishing hole of a town, nothing fancy, but again, more good times and lifelong memories.

I miss all that. I guess I always will. Sometimes the memories can be a little painful still even after all these years.

But I remind myself how much more painful it would be if I didn’t have them.

I loved my parents with a passion. I respected them. I honored them. And I thank God to this day that he gave them to me.

The author is a man of a certain age who was born and raised in the perfect era for him by parents who, as far as he is concerned, were nothing short of perfect.

Carilion Clinic updates hospital visitation to allow two visitors per day

With the decrease in community spread of COVID-19, Carilion Clinic has updated its hospital visitation restrictions to the green level, which allows two visitors per day for adults during an inpatient stay instead of one visitor as was allowed under the yellow level restrictions.

The change was effective at the following facilities on Wednesday, May 26: Carilion Giles Community Hospital, Carilion New River Valley Medical Center, Carilion Roanoke Community Hospital, Carilion Roanoke Memorial Hospital, and Carilion Tazewell Community Hospital.

Carilion Franklin Memorial Hospital and Carilion Rockbridge Community Hospital will transition to green level visitation restrictions starting Tuesday, June 1.

All hospitals have been at yellow level visitation restrictions since March of this year. Other than the change in the number of visitors allowed, the other restrictions remain in place to keep staff, patients, and visitors safe. Anyone who is sick may not visit patients in Carilion facilities, and all visitors will continue to go through the screening process before entering any facility. While in the facility, visitors will be required to wear a mask or face covering. Shared spaces such as waiting areas and cafeterias remain closed.

This is the first time green-level visitation restrictions have been implemented at Carilion hospitals since the restrictions went into place on March 13, 2020.

“It’s encouraging to see a decrease in community spread across our region, but it continues to be critical that we remain vigilant,” said Charlotte Tyson, vice president of Hospital Operations. “Our top priority is the safety of our patients, staff and visitors. We ask that the community also do their part to stop the spread by getting their COVID-19 vaccine.”

To help reduce the spread and exposure of COVID-19, Carilion Clinic’s visitor guidelines ask anyone who is feeling sick, has tested positive for COVID-19 in the past 21 days, or has been in contact with someone who has tested positive for COVID-19 in the past 14 days not to come to the hospital to visit patients.

VDOT launches towing and recovery incentive program on I-81

RICHMOND, Va. — Virginia’s new Towing and Recovery Incentive Program (81 TRIP) hit the Interstate 81 corridor Monday with the mission of reducing the amount of time drivers sit in crash-related congestion.

“Virginia’s economy takes a hit of up to $1,200 for every minute that drivers spend in traffic,” noted VDOT Commissioner Stephen C. Brich. “Incidents are the number-one cause of congestion on I-81, so we can make a real improvement on that interstate by getting lanes reopened more rapidly.”

81 TRIP is an incentive program that partners VDOT with heavy-duty towing and recovery companies to standardize their response to commercial vehicle crashes. The program facilitates safe and quick clearance with improved towing standards, procedures, and training.

81 TRIP pays a $2,500 to $3,500 incentive to a tow company that is able to open a travel lane within 90 minutes of receiving notice to proceed from law enforcement on the scene.

Crash-related delays enact significant impacts on drivers and the environment. This program helps to reduce lost-time costs, improve reliability, and lessen the risk of secondary crashes that can occur in vehicle queues. These incidents account for 20% for all highway crashes and become increasingly likely until congestion is cleared.

“Interstate 81 has a high percentage of trucks rolling through mountainous terrain, which contributes to the highest incident-related delay among interstates in Virginia,” explained I-81 Program Delivery Director Dave Covington. “We have seen success with towing incentives on interstates in the Richmond area since 2017, so we expect similar positive results on the I-81 corridor.”

Locally-based towing and recovery companies were invited to participate in 81 TRIP. To be eligible, these companies must meet requirements to ensure only well-trained operators with proper heavy-duty equipment are dispatched to large commercial vehicle incidents.

81 TRIP is a part of the I-81 Corridor Improvement Program approved by the Commonwealth Transportation Board in December 2018. The more than $2 billion package of targeted improvements was funded by the Virginia General Assembly and signed into law by Governor Ralph Northam in spring 2019.

Additional information about the I-81 Corridor Improvement Program is available at Improve81.org. The website includes interactive maps and schedules and details about upcoming and current projects that are designed to improve safety, increase reliability, and foster economic growth along the 325-mile corridor.

lected for the Artis Center, called the project “creative and unique” and “one of the most innovative projects in the region.”

“It will be a building that breaks down silos,” Lund said. “It will be a building where artists work with health professionals. It will be a building that the general student population will come to learn in its classrooms. You will see dancers dancing. You will see painters painting. You will see the health clinic healing and working with autistic children. It will be amazing.”

The demolition of Porterfield Hall, both East and West, and McGuffey Hall will begin in June. Construction of the Artis Center is scheduled for substantial completion in December 2023 with move-in beginning during the spring and summer months of 2024.

Expectations are that classes will be held in the new facility beginning with the Fall 2024 semester.

NRCC celebrates graduates at three ceremonies

New River Community College recently held three in-person commencement ceremonies for graduates from the 2019-2020 and 2020-2021 academic years.

The college held the separate ceremonies for graduates within their specific programs to ensure that all aspects of state guidance were followed based on recent capacity guidance from the governor's office regarding college commencement events.

The ceremonies were for the associate degree nursing graduates for spring 2020 and spring 2021 and the practical nursing summer 2020 graduates, for the arts and sciences students for the 2019-2020 and 2020-2021 academic years, and for the business and technologies students for the 2019-2020 and 2020-2021 academic years.

NRCC President Pat Huber addressed graduates at all three ceremonies.

"I look forward to what you, our graduates, will do.

You have shown what you can do. This last year and a half have proven that," Huber said. "So now it is time to go forward with your knowledge and skills and do great things. Surround yourselves with successful friends, colleagues, and mentors and believe in yourselves because we believe in you."

NRCC College Board Chair Steve Harvey of the City of Radford spoke on behalf of the board.

"Graduates, to say your educational journey may have had a few bumps in the road is an understatement," Harvey said. "When everything changed, you rolled with the punches every time, but I hope you are able to see now that the rewards of learning are life-changing. Education gives you the opportunity to design your own future, to grow as leaders in your communities, in business, or in government."

Due to space limitations, only graduates and limited faculty/staff were permitted to attend their designated ceremony in person. All COVID-19 safety protocols were followed by those attending the ceremonies, including physical distancing and face mask requirements for every participant.

The three ceremonies were livestreamed for family, friends, and others to view off-campus. To view the ceremonies online, visit NRCC's graduation webpage at

Resources available to keep children, youth safe on Virginia farms

As the school year winds down, more children and youth may be working on Virginia farms, but while farm work instills values children and adolescents can use their entire life, work on the farm can be hazardous.

From developing a good work ethic to learning responsibility, farm work instills valuable skills in youth that they can use throughout their lives. But farm work can be hazardous.

As the school year winds down, more youth may be working on farms and keeping them safe is important. Children and adolescents are at increased risk for injury if assigned tasks don't match their developmental level and abilities.

To help educate parents and employers about specific farm safety practices associated with youth, the National Children's Center for Rural and Agricultural Health and Safety has created three resource booklets on gardening, operating farm equipment, and working with animals.

"If we can get farm parents and supervisors to use the guidelines to assign work, it will ultimately result in fewer injuries and fatalities for our working youth," said Dr. Marsha Salzwedel, a project scientist with the center.

Developed from the center's Agricultural Youth Work Guidelines, the booklets outline 50 common tasks youth may perform on the farm, such as operating a tractor, milking cows, and hand harvesting. They identify hazards and include information on proper adult supervision, training, child labor regulations, and assessing a young person's ability to perform a specific job safely.

To learn more and to download the booklets, visit cultivatesafety.org/work.

Farm safety also is an important topic for Virginia Farm Bureau, and the organization has a comprehensive farm safety resources website with information for farm families at vafb.com/safety.

Know the Facts

Read Ezra 6:1 through 8:36

Nicole wanted to wear a Christian T-shirt to school, but she was nervous. “What if someone complains? What if I get in trouble with the principal?”

Thankfully, her mom had already researched the issue.

“According to the Equal Access Amendment, if any kid in school has a T-shirt that has any kind of non-school graphics or message on it, you can wear a T-shirt with a Christian message,” Nicole’s mom said. She explained that Nicole had many rights as a Christian student, so she didn’t need to be intimidated.

In the first year of King Cyrus, the king issued a decree concerning the temple of God in Jerusalem: Let the temple be rebuilt as a place to present sacrifices, and let its foundations be laid (Ezra 6:3).

As the Israelites rebuilt the temple, they faced many hassles. However, they knew their legal rights. They knew King Cyrus had approved the rebuilding of the temple, and they had to educate the authorities who challenged them.

Challenge for Today: When unbelievers challenge your faith, don’t just give in. Know the facts and your rights. Don’t be afraid to politely claim them.

Former Appy League leader passes away

Former Appalachian League President Lee Landers died Monday of natural causes at the age of 83.

Appalachian League officials heaped praise upon the former league leader.

“Lee transformed the Appalachian League and really took the league to new heights in his 23 years at the helm,” said current league president Dan Moushon. “Lee was a tremendous leader, a mentor to so many and a friend to everyone he met in his 60 years in professional baseball. He was truly beloved by all.”

Boyd Sports President and Chief Operating Officer Chris Allen described Lee as “one of the old-timers that grew up in baseball. Having had the opportunity to get to know Lee over the years, I was always amazed at the wonderful stories of his career. Most people remember Lee as the Appalachian League President, which he served for over 20 years. What they may not realize is Lee had a career that spanned over 60 years. Lee, first and foremost, was a wonderful person who never met a stranger. He was also an icon in our industry and a true ambassador for professional baseball. RIP old friend.”

“I cannot think of someone who has directly impacted more thriving, young baseball executives than Lee Landers,” said Ryan Keur, the owner and team president of the Burlington Sock Puppets and the Danville Otterbots. “Both personally and professionally, Lee always took the time to check in and genuinely care about your progress and how your entire team was doing. As the King of Baseball, he has molded many people and executives throughout the sport who will carry on with the same level of professionalism, compassion, and sense of community that Lee instilled within us.”

Bristol State Liners General

Manager Mahlon Luttrell called Lee, “The truest gentleman that you would ever meet. Mr. Landers touched the lives of so many people in the sport of baseball. There was not a person that he would not walk up to or sit by that when he left, you felt like a friend. Rest in Peace my friend; our thoughts and prayers to the entire family.”

During the 2017 Baseball Winter Meetings in Orlando, Fla., Landers was named the 2017 King of Baseball, an honor that recognizes a veteran of professional baseball for longtime dedication and service.

Landers’s career in professional baseball began in 1959 in Fresno, Calif., and included stops in Modesto, Twin Falls, Little Rock, Tulsa, New Orleans, and Springfield, Ill., where he was named general manager of the Springfield Cardinals after the 1981 season. During his 12-year tenure with Springfield, he received Executive of the Year honors and the Promotional Award of Excellence, and was a nine-time winner of the Midwest League’s Gold Award for excellence in operations. Landers was named vice president of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1986.

After taking the reins of the Appalachian League in 1996, Landers was honored in 2001 with the Warren Giles Award for outstanding service as a minor league president in 2001, was presented the first annual Bowie Kuhn Award from Baseball Chapel in 2008, and had four of his Appalachian League teams (Bluefield, Burlington, Greeneville, and Pulaski) honored with the Bob Freitas Award for the Short Season classification. Landers also served on Minor League Baseball’s Game Operations and Umpire Development committees. He was inducted into the Springfield Sports Hall of Fame in 1994 and the Appalachian League Hall of Fame in 2019.

Hokie Gavin Cross named to All-ACC, All-Freshman teams

Virginia Tech outfielder Gavin Cross has been named to the Atlantic Coast Conference All-ACC and All-Freshman teams, the league announced Monday.

Cross became the first Tech freshman to be named First Team All-ACC in program history, and the first All-Freshman team honoree since Ian Seymour in 2018.

The Bristol, Tenn., native finished the regular season with a .357 batting average in 196 at-bats. He led the ACC in hits (70) and triples (5) and finished third in total bases (126).

He was previously named a 2020 Collegiate Baseball Freshman All-American.

Three Highlanders receive conference baseball honors

Radford University catcher Straton Podaras was this week named to the Big South All-Conference baseball first team.

Three Radford University baseball players have received Big South Conference honors, the Radford baseball team announced this week.

Catcher Straton Podaras was named to the all-conference first team. Junior infielder David Bryant, who led the team in batting average and home runs, was named to the all-conference second team. Senior outfielder Anthony Galati was named to the conference all-academic team.

Podaras led the team both on the offensive and defensive fronts all season long. Defensively behind the plate, Podaras had his best season of his career catching 31 runners attempting to steal. This pushed his career total to 79, a program record. Offensively, Podaras posted an impressive .302/.434/.414 slash line. His batting average and on-base percentage both ranked second on the team while he also racked up eight doubles and two home runs.

David Bryant broke out this season offensively, leading the Highlanders in many offensive categories which garnered him second team all-conference honors. Bryant slashed .364/.480/.594, leading the team in all three categories of batting average, on-base percentage, and slugging percentage. His seven home runs were also a team-best while he also had nine doubles and four triples.

Rounding out the Big South annual awards for the Highlanders was Anthony Galati, who was named to the all-academic team after his perfect 4.0 GPA as a marketing major. Just a week ago Galati was a recipient of the Big South Christenberry Award for Academic Excellence. On the field he was a strong contributor to the Highlander offense this season with a .235/.373/.333 slash line to go with seven stolen bases and 25 RBI’s.

Transferring to VT from Delaware, midfielder Gabby Johnson tied for the Blue Hens team lead in points and goals and was named Third-Team All-Conference for the recently completed season.

VT women’s soccer lands transfer

Virginia Tech women’s soccer head coach Chugger Adair announced Thursday the signing of Delaware transfer Gabby Johnson. The Midlothian, Va., native will be eligible to compete for the Hokies right away and will have two seasons of eligibility remaining beginning with the 2021 season.

In her three seasons of competition with the Blue Hens, Johnson scored six goals and had two assists, while racking up 39 shots. She was named to the All-Colonial Athletic Conference Third Team this spring.

A midfielder, she appeared in five matches and tied for the team lead in points and goals.

“On behalf of the staff, we are excited for Gabby to join our program,” Adair said. “She has proven to be successful with Delaware and a consistent performer in the Colonial Athletic Association (CAA) as she has made their all-league team. Gabby will bring not only her soccer playing ability, but leadership, experience and joy for soccer to our program. She will be a wonderful fit with our current midfield unit.”

Blacksburg's Ben Carroll honored as conference Freshman of the Year

Blacksburg High School graduate Ben Carroll has been voted the Big South Conference's Freshman Golfer of the Year.

Campbell junior Pontus Nyholm was voted the 2021 Big South Men's Golfer of the Year by the league's head coaches, it was announced this past Tuesday afternoon at the Men's Golf Championship Awards Ceremony. Charleston Southern head coach Jason Payne was voted Coach of the Year, and Winthrop senior Rohan Boettcher was voted Men's Golf Scholar-Athlete of the Year by the Big South's sports information directors.

Nyholm is the fourth consecutive Camel to earn Big South Golfer of the Year honors. He is the Big South's leader in stroke average (69.48) and in Top 10 finishes (six) in 2021, and was the only Big South golfer to win three events this spring: the Southern Invitational, the Golfweek Spring Invitational, and the Stitch Intercollegiate. Nyholm carded a 17-under 199 (68-69-62) to win the Stitch Intercollegiate, which was part of a string of nine consecutive rounds in the 60s, that earned him a sponsor's exemption in the Korn Ferry Tour's Rex Hospital Open June 3-6 at TPC Wakefield in Raleigh. The four-time Big South Golfer of the Week honoree entered the Big South Men's Golf Championship ranked No. 13 nationally by Golfstat, No. 16 in the PGA TOUR University rating and No. 52 in the World Amateur Golf Ranking.

Payne led the Bucs to one of their strongest seasons in program history as the squad finished the 2021 regular-season with the conference's best stroke average and No. 2 seed in the Big South Championship. Charleston Southern went 22-1 against Big South competition leading up to the conference tournament and had all five players sit among the Big South's top-20 individual scorers prior to the event, including three in the top-10 in the standings. Under Payne's leadership this season, the Bucs took the tournament title at the Pinnacle Bank Intercollegiate while finishing among the top five teams in six different tournaments this spring.

Carroll (Blacksburg) was the Bucs' lone underclassman to crack the starting lineup for Charleston Southern in the spring 2021 season. He entered the postseason with the eighth-lowest stroke average during the conference regular-season and turned in top-10 performances at the Wofford Invitational (ninth) and the Pinnacle Bank Intercollegiate (fifth). Carroll's final-round 68 (-4) at the Wofford Invitational marked a career-low for the freshman in the Bucs' final tune-up to the 2021 Big South Championship. He tied as the Bucs' second-highest finisher at the conference championship with a 3-over par 216 (71-73-72).

Boettcher (Santa Cruz Do Sul, Brazil) is a 3.99 GPA student majoring in business administration. He was a 2020 Golf Coaches Association of America (GCAA) All-America Scholar and has been named to the Big South Presidential Honor Roll three times. Boettcher played in all six events this spring and finished the Big South Championship with a 4-over 217

(73-69-75), which featured a season-low 69 in the second round.

Also announced this past Tuesday afternoon were the Big South Men's Golf All-Conference and All-Freshman teams, which are selected by the head coaches and based on regular-season play plus performance in the Conference Championship. The members of the All-Academic Team and the league's All-Championship Team (the top five finishers) were also announced.

Basketball Hokies land berth in NIT season tip-off tourney

Virginia Tech, along with Iowa State, Memphis, and Xavier, will headline the 2021 NIT Season Tip-Off at Barclays Center in Brooklyn as announced Thursday by the tournament.

The event semifinals are set for Wednesday, Nov. 24, with the final and consolation games set for Friday, Nov. 26.

The Hokies will be making their first appearance in the tournament since 2011. That season, they beat Monmouth (91-46) and Florida International (78-63) in Blacksburg before making the trip up to Madison Square Garden where Tech lost to Syracuse and beat Oklahoma State.

Coming off their fourth consecutive NCAA Tournament berth (2017-19, 2021), the Hokies are set to return their top four scorers from last season. Under the direction of 2020-21 ACC Coach of the Year Mike Young, Tech is ranked No. 10 in ESPN's latest "Way-Too-Early Top 25."

The tournament bracket and schedule will be announced this summer. Tickets are not yet on sale, but fans can secure first access to the best seats and discount offers by signing up for the official pre-sale at nitseasontipoff.com.

Field Highlights
Head coach Penny Hardaway led his alma mater, Memphis, to the 2021 NIT championship and his third consecutive 20-win season. Hardaway, who had a 14-year NBA career, was a four-time All-Star and spent two seasons with the New York Knicks.

Xavier is led by head coach Travis Steele and returns its top seven scorers, including second-team All-Big East point guard Paul Scruggs and three-point shooting specialist Nate Johnson.

In his first year, Head Coach T.J. Orzelberger will lead Iowa State, which made the NCAA Tournament both in 2019 and for six consecutive years from 2012-17. The team will welcome top recruit Tyrese Hunter, ranked No. 37 overall and ranked as the No. 7 point guard in the country by ESPN.

The NIT Season Tip-Off has been played in New York City since 1985, and this fall marks the sixth year the tournament will be held at Barclays Center. The 2020 event was canceled due to COVID-19. Oklahoma State won the tournament in 2019.
