$35 million gift fuels long-awaited project to replace Virginia Tech's Randolph Hall

Norris Mitchell '58 and his wife, Wendy, have committed $35 million to the Virginia Tech College of Engineering. The gift will go toward construction as well as activities and programming for a showcase building for the college, which will replace the more than 60-year-old Randolph Hall.

Per approval of the Virginia Tech Board of Visitors, the new building will be known as Wendy and Norris E. Mitchell '58 Hall.

Plans are for Mitchell Hall to be 284,000 square feet and contain classrooms, instructional labs, space for student team projects, research labs, and office spaces for faculty, staff, and students. Significant space is also earmarked for student advising and a variety of collaborative uses by students and faculty.

Norris Mitchell's personal story began in Virginia's Carroll County, where he grew up without running water or electricity in his home. He entered college on scholarship and worked his way through Virginia Tech in a co-op program. Mitchell earned his bachelor's degree in aerospace engineering in 1958.

"My mother was a school-teacher and principal, and the value of education has been clear to me ever since I was a boy," said Norris Mitchell, who was an aerospace executive with several leading firms before transitioning careers to found companies in real estate and banking. "Virginia Tech equipped me with the knowledge and the skill set to have an extremely fulfilling career across several industries," Mitchell said. "I appreciate the university's key role in my life. Wendy and I are happy to be able to make this gift to help Virginia Tech prepare tomorrow's engineers."

Wendy Mitchell attended Virginia Tech for a brief period before leaving to help address a family emergency, then embarked on a career in banking that saw her rise to senior leadership positions at several institutions.

Bret S. Danilowicz named Radford University's eighth president

RADFORD, VA — The Radford University Board of Visitors announced Thursday the selection of Bret S. Danilowicz as Radford University's eighth president, effective July 1. He succeeds Brian O. Hemphill, who left Radford in June to accept another university presidency.

"He is a proven leader and possesses the background and experience required to take us to the next level and into the future," said Robert A. Archer, rector of the board.

"He clearly demonstrated to both the search committee and the Board of visitors his energy and commitment to higher education, as well as his lifelong goal of becoming a president of a major university such as Radford," Archer said. "I am convinced that Dr. Danilowicz, along with his wife Kay, is a perfect fit for Radford and for the extended Radford community."

The board's selection is the result of a comprehensive search by the 23-member Presidential Search Committee led by chair Susan Whealler Johnston and co-chair Jay A. Brown and assisted by the search firm, Greenwood/Asher & Associates, Inc.

"Being an undergraduate-focused comprehensive institution, Radford University plays a critical role in higher education for the Commonwealth of Virginia," said Danilowicz. "Having already developed a strong reputation for high quality and innovative instruction, Radford is furthering its distinctive mission by strengthening its focus on diversity, sustainability, and economic development. Through the search process, I have become enamored by its mission; its dedicated faculty, staff, and alumni;

Recent census shows Virginia Tech remains a top destination for students

Over the course of an admissions cycle forced to operate almost entirely in virtual spaces as a result of a global pandemic, more students applied for admission to Virginia Tech than ever before in the institution's 150-year history

Out of 42,054 applications emerged Virginia Tech's fall 2021 entering class that continues to move the needle toward achieving the enrollment goals defined in the university's strategic plan.

During the November Board of Visitors meeting, Juan Espinoza, associate vice provost for enrollment management and director of undergraduate admissions, presented a breakdown of the fall 2021 census.

"We've worked hard to engage prospective students throughout the pandemic, and we are pleased with these outcomes," said Espinoza. "Not only did we receive a record number of applications, we also attracted more students from underrepresented and underserved populations."

Virginia Tech welcomed a class of 7,743 undergraduate students this fall composed of 6,802 first-time in college (FTIC) students and 941 transfers. The FTIC students hail from 49 different states/territories and 48 different countries. Transfer students represent 20 different states/territories and 18 countries. For fall 2021, undergraduate enrollment stood at 29,760 students.

FTIC applicants again had the option of submitting standardized test scores for consideration. The applicant pool was nearly split evenly with 52 percent electing to submit applications without test scores.

"I congratulate those freshmen and transfer students who joined our continuing students in an educational program

Bill enjoyed camping, hunting -- especially deer hunting -- fishing, and gardening. Everyone admired his ability to grow beautiful vegetables, especially his huge, delicious tomatoes. He retired from Virginia Tech after a 30-year career in the Agronomy Extension Department where he worked primarily with research on grains, soybeans, and peanuts throughout Virginia.

OPINION

COVID-19 update: New cases nationwide, in Virginia are up

As expected, from the Thanksgiving holiday and people spending more time indoors with the colder weather, new cases of COVID-19 nationwide and in Virginia are up, Dr. Noelle Bissell, director of the New River Health District, told the media Tuesday.

"In the New River Health District, they remain essentially plateaued; but looking at our surrounding regions, we expect to see an increase soon," Dr. Bissell said. "The New River Valley tends to run behind Roanoke and Mount Rogers by a week or so.

"This morning, the New River Health District hospitals reported 29 COVID-19 patients," the health district director said. "Our hospitals are very busy and often at capacity with patients in the ERs waiting for beds. This is not necessarily from COVID, but from other medical issues and seasonal illnesses. We are having an early flu season with predominantly flu A (H3N2). Flu A tends to be more severe than other variants.

"In addition to flu, we are seeing a significant number of pertussis cases right now," Dr. Bissell told the press. "Pertussis is also called whooping cough because of its noticeable high-pitched barking cough. Pertussis is highly contagious, and people at risk include pregnant women, babies, the elderly, and people with weakened immune systems, asthma, or waning immunity. Most people have been vaccinated against pertussis, but immunity wears off over the years and booster shots (Tdap – people mainly think of it as a tetanus shot) are recommended at least every 10 years.

"Our COVID-19 cases are still almost exclusively from the delta variant," Dr. Bissell reported. "We are sequencing about 1 in 7 of the PCR tests and that's how we would find omicron. The state labs have looked at samples from the past few weeks specifically for omicron and have not found it. However, if it's not here now, it will be.

"Scientists are still evaluating how transmissible and severe omicron is compared to prior variants (alpha and delta)," Dr. Bissell said. "There is good evidence suggesting it is more transmissible than delta, and we will continue to follow its course. If COVID-19 follows other viral pandemics, omicron may cause less severe illness than delta. Viruses typically mutate to being more transmissible and less virulent. If so, this is a step towards the virus becoming endemic.

"The omicron variant does not change our advice," the director told the media. "We advise everyone to get vaccinated and, when eligible, to get a booster. We also continue to recommend layered mitigation like masking, respiratory hygiene, hand washing, and distancing in addition to optimizing ventilation of indoor spaces when gathering.

"We are vaccinating anyone age 5 and up," she said. "Vaccines are available at pharmacies and many doctor's offices. In addition, the health department has clinics at our sites across the district. Our typical schedule is Monday and Thursday at Montgomery County, Tuesday at Floyd, Wednesday at Pulaski and Giles and Friday at Radford. Saturday, the Pharm House pharmacy is offering walk in vaccines at the Floyd Country Rescue Squad from 1 to 7 p.m.

"Lastly, many people are planning holiday gatherings and holiday travel. Our best advice is that everyone perform an assessment of how much risk they can tolerate and make plans accordingly," Dr. Bissell said. "Right now, while we are in high transmission, assume everyone could have or be exposed to COVID. Remember that delta is predominant right now and it can lead to poor outcomes for those at higher risk. Those who are young, healthy, and vaccinated will likely behave differently from those who are older or more vulnerable, or from someone who lives with or cares for higher risk people or young children who are not eligible for the vaccine."

"Out of all the ways that we could give money to Virginia Tech, we thought this building project was the right choice," she said. "You can have as many bright students as possible, but if you don't have places for them to get together and work on projects, they're not going to get as far. We hope this building will be a turning point for this great building the university has in mind to get built."

Randolph Hall was built between 1952 and 1959 in the university's North Academic District. After more than a half-century of use, there is a recognized need to replace the building. Along with having modern spaces and resources, Mitchell Hall is projected to be more than 70 percent larger than Randolph Hall, providing needed space to accommodate growth in the university's engineering programs and account for shifts in how research and teaching take place today.

"The Mitchells' inspiring story illustrates the power of education to create new opportunities for service and achievement," Virginia Tech President Tim Sands said. "Their extraordinary gift will make this important project a reality, and I look forward to seeing Mitchell Hall become a nexus of ideas, innovation, and learning experiences that support the success of our students, our university, and the commonwealth."

Total project costs are projected at $248 million, most of which would come from state funding. The gift from the Mitchells satisfies the university's obligation to provide funding to the project. Depending on the timing of approvals from the General Assembly, the project could be ready for construction funding by summer 2023, according to the university's capital budget request to the state.

The Mitchell gift comes at a pivotal moment for the engineering college, which is growing as part of the Commonwealth of Virginia's Tech Talent Initiative, a statewide push to increase graduates in key computing fields. As the university's largest college with programs spanning 12 departments and two schools, engineering's total enrollment grew to over 12,000 in 2020.

WORSHIP DIRECTORY

TRUST THE TRUTH

Read 2 Timothy 1:1 through 4:22

Do your best to present yourself to God as one approved, a worker who does not need to be ashamed and who correctly handles the word of truth (2 Timothy 2:15).

The Greek word orthotomeo, translated here as "correctly handles," is rendered "rightly dividing" in other versions.

It carries the idea of cutting straight like a surgeon and getting to the heart of the matter. Paul's letters to Timothy emphasize sound doctrine, which must be taught in the churches so believers will be established in the truth. Is false teaching being advocated? Stand firm on God's truth. Do unbelievers mock our Christian life? Stand firm on God's truth.

We are all to be students of God's Word—diligently studying it, faithfully putting it into practice in our daily lives, and effectively sharing it. We should never be ashamed to be identified with Christ, nor do we want to be embarrassed by our lack of preparation for witnessing.

We need to be ready with knowledge of the truth and guided by God's Spirit in sharing it with others.

Thought for Today: Train in the truth and trust its teaching.

Brock Hoffman named Wells Fargo Advisors Humanitarian of the Year

RICHMOND – Virginia Tech offensive lineman Brock Hoffman has earned the Wells Fargo Advisors Humanitarian of the Year Award presented by the Touchdown Club of Richmond.

Hoffman is the first Tech student-athlete to receive this accolade, which annually recognizes a football player from a program in the Commonwealth of Virginia who has gone above and beyond to make a positive impact on campus and in his community.

Hoffman (6-3, 310) has served as one of Tech's five captains this season and earned All-ACC honorable mention honors. He has started nine games at center and one at left guard this season. The Statesville, N.C., native has accepted an invitation to play in the 2022 East-West Shrine Bowl all-star contest. Thanks to Hoffman and the rest of Tech's offensive front, the Hokies have averaged 250.5 rushing yards per game over their last six contests, including a 29-24 victory over Virginia to retain the Commonwealth Cup.

Hoffman will be honored during the broadcast of the Dudley and Lannier Awards presentation, scheduled for today, Dec. 11. This awards broadcast will air on WTVR-TV6, the local CBS affiliate in Richmond. The awards show will air live, following the national broadcast of the Army-Navy football game on CBS, which kicks off at 3:00 p.m.

Hoffman's philanthropy and charitable spirit have been recognized nationally this year. He has been named a semifinalist for both the Wuerffel Trophy and Jason Witten Collegiate Man of the Year Award recognizing his off-the-field efforts to serve his community both in the New River Valley and his hometown. He was also Tech's nominee for the Allstate Good Works Team.

During his time at Virginia Tech, Hoffman has served as a mentor to students at Prices Fork Elementary School in Blacksburg and his former elementary school in his hometown. Hoffman serves as a strong advocate for making healthy lifestyle choices and stresses the importance of developing good habits in the classroom. He initiated a fundraising campaign benefitting the National Brain Trauma Association in support of his mother, Stephanie, who had an acoustic neuroma surgically removed in 2017.

Using NIL agreements for the greater good, Hoffman partnered with a local car dealership to donate 350 backpacks filled with school supplies to sixth graders in Wythe County and his hometown elementary school,

Wrestling preview: Radford, Blacksburg, and Christiansburg

Christiansburg
Cody Hughes takes over a Christiansburg wrestling program that has won 17 of the last 20 state Class 3 state championships. He replaces Cliff Warden, who stepped down last month after three years at the helm.

Hughes is a former 4-time Maine state champion who qualified for nationals his senior year at Virginia Tech. He had been helping coach the Blue Demons for the past two years.

"I accepted the job because I know Christiansburg has a rich history of wrestling and was looking to help build on that," he said.

This is his first official head coaching position after helping with numerous youth wrestling camps.

"I want to help each individual accomplish his goals on the mat. Hopefully by doing that the team will have success along the way," Hughes said.

He will be assisted by Brandon Taylor, who has helped with the Christiansburg program for the past three years.

This past year, the Blue Demons finished third in the Class 3 state championships after winning the Region 3D trophy for the eighth straight year.

Four key wrestlers return for Christiansburg. 120-pound Junior Policarpo was injured last year but was a state place winner in 2020. Luke Robie is a 3-time state place winner at 145 pounds and was a 2021 state finalist in Class 3. Parker Ferrell returns at 220 pounds and is currently ranked 12th in the country while heavyweight Aiden Lacombe (285 pounds) took the year off from football after being the 2021 state champion and is ranked 15th in the country.

"We have a lot of young guys on the team and some holes in our lineup at a couple of weight classes," Hughes said. Still, he has high expectations for those key returners on the state and national level. "We have two major national tournaments in December. For the rest of our younger guys, we are excited to see the progress they've made during the offseason and look to have multiple state place winners and a few state champions," he said.

New Kent is the reigning Class 3 state champion and returns a loaded roster. Skyline High School placed ahead of Christiansburg last year and also returns some key wrestlers.

Blacksburg
Chris Johnson enters year number six at the helm of the Blacksburg wrestling program, which finished 2-1 last year in dual meets. Four-year starter Sam Baker has graduated after finishing last season as the Region 4D runner up.

But Johnson returns four experienced wrestlers. Tharun Svetanant will be at 138 and as a junior finished fifth at the 2021 state Class 4 tournament after winning the regional championship at 132 pounds. Garrett Henderson will be at 132. He missed 2021 because of an injury after finishing as the region runner-up in 2020.

Junior Robert Baker will be at 145 and was the regional runner-up last season at 126. But the one to watch could be freshman Braden Henderson at 126. He had a lot of success in middle school and is adjusting to the high school competition.

"We are very young with only one senior in the starting line-up," said Johnson. "We will have early season growing pains but will be a very different team at the end of the season vs. the beginning."

At the state level, Johnson said Great Bridge will be the team to beat.

"We really only worry about doing our job. The goal is to show up, work hard, and get better every day. If we do our job, good things happen," he said.

Radford
Meanwhile in Radford, the Bobcats' hopes for success rests with two sophomores. Lance Duncan (170) finished fifth at states last year while Dawson Martin (195) was third.

Coach Dwayne Martin is in his third season and said the program is continuing to rebuild and grow. "We are bringing back lots of experience in the upper weight classes. We have a team filled with freshmen and sophomores," he said.

Christiansburg's Kara Wright placed 14th in the 200-yard freestyle at the Southwest Virginia Invite last Saturday at the Christiansburg Aquatic Center.

Big South names RU's Moran runner of the year

The Big South Conference has named Radford University graduate student Hannah Moran (Salem) its 2021 women's cross-country runner of the year.

Moran earned All-Region honors for the 2021 season after finishing 18th at the NCAA Southeast Regional in a school-record time of 20:42.8 in the 6K race. She was the Big South individual champion in October -- one of three victories this season -- as she won the conference meet in a time of 17:09.5 to become Radford's first Big South individual winner since 1990.

A two-time Big South Runner of the Week honoree in 2021, Moran opened her season with a victory at the Virginia Tech Invitational with a school-record time of 14:11 in the 4K race. She followed that up with a first-place finish at the James Madison University Invitational, posting a winning margin of 28 seconds. At the Live in Lou meet in early October, Moran finished eighth out of 399 runners with a school-record performance of 16:48.7 in the 5K race.

ACC official makes history

From the Sidelines

Marty Gordon

With little fanfare, three officials walked onto the court at Cassell Coliseum Wednesday for the game between the Virginia Tech men and Cornell. One of the three, however, made history.

Jenna Reneau became the first woman to officiate a men's game in Blacksburg.

A graduate of North Texas University, she officiated NBA G-League games for the past two years and now has slipped into ACC and Atlantic-10 men's games this season. Reneau fell in love with the occupation from day one.

She recently told members of the media, "It kind of just happened and I fell in love with it."

Reneau was introduced to the organized game in third grade and earned all-district honors on the court in high school, helping Krum High School to a 34-2 record as a senior.

Now at the age of 29, she is taking the game by storm. Along the way, she has shaken off the stereotype that men officiate men's games and women/women.

In 2019, Reneau picked up men's games in the Mountain West and Southland conferences. The G-League followed with a long list of Texas high school games.

From an initial field of some 3,000 referees the NBA was observing around the world, Reneau began the NBA's vetting process that accepted the top 150 into its "grassroots" training session.

From there, 48 were selected to participate in a mid-level event. A group of 30 was promoted to train in the NBA's "elite" session, and then 10 were added to the G-League schedule before COVID shut down almost everything.

She is now on the call list for the WNBA with an overall goal of making it to the big show for the men's side of things with the NBA.

But this year, she will be a regular in the ACC and Atlantic-10 as she recently officiated a contest in Richmond.

Five female referees are currently working in the NBA. As many as 20 are working men's Division I college games this season.

According to ESPN, 24 of the G-League's 57 referees are women, plus several who jump between the NBA and G-League (All NBA officials with under four years of experience are commonly assigned as crew chiefs for G-League games to gain experience.) 15 of the WNBA's 33 referees are women, nine of whom also work games in the G-League.

In 2018, Crystal Hogan became the first woman to referee a men's Division I game when Seattle University played Puget Sound University. She is also the first full-time female referee in NCAA Men's D-1 history.

Jenna Reneau is following in her footsteps and knocking down doors on her path to becoming an "official." The words female and male are thrown out the window because of her knowledge of the game.

Several little girls were in the stands at Cassell Wednesday taking notice of Reneau and the job she was doing. Just another person wearing a striped shirt and blowing a whistle to keep players in check.

Tim Smoot to lead Auburn softball program

Marty Gordon
NRVsports@ourvalley.org

Auburn High School did not have to look far to fill its softball coaching vacancy. Assistant Tim Smoot has been elevated to head coach after the departure of David Hurd, who was named assistant principal at Blacksburg Middle School.

Hurd had led the team to back-to-back state titles, compiling a 313-134 record in 22 years. Smoot, who has been an assistant since 2016, hopes to continue that tradition.

"I've been involved on some level with the Auburn softball program since 2009, and I wanted to continue the tradition built on the hard work David Hurd put in to build a program the Auburn community could be proud of," he said earlier this week.

"We have a team that has been together a while now and will remain so for a couple more years," the new head coach said. "My goal is to make this coaching change as seamless as possible so our players can focus on their development the way we have always done things."

Smoot is not a teacher at the school. Instead, he is a realtor with Welcome Home Real Estate in Christiansburg.

"I work mostly with residential buyers and sellers," Smoot said. "My position allows me to set my schedule as I wish. I am fortunate to have this flexibility so I can handle both my career and my passion for coaching."

His relationship to the Auburn program includes his oldest daughter, who is now playing at Emory & Henry College after being part of two high school teams that reached the state semi-finals in 2014 and 2015.

Auburn assistant softball coach Tim Smoot will take over the program as head coach after the departure of David Hurd, who left to take an assistant principal's position at Blacksburg Middle School.

Smoot was an alpine ski instructor and ski school director early in his career, and a family convinced him to become involved in the Montgomery County Parks and Recreation programs in softball and soccer. This led him to travel softball coaching and finally to the varsity softball team at Auburn.

The new coach's goal remains the same in competing for and winning another state championship.

"We have a team that has matured quite a bit over the last year, so if we stay humble and continue to work hard we should be able to put ourselves in a position to be successful," Smoot said.

Hokies add former Savannah State head coach Shawn Quinn to football staff

BLACKSBURG – Virginia Tech head football coach Brent Pry announced Sunday that former Savannah State head coach Shawn Quinn has joined his coaching staff.

Pry and Quinn previously collaborated at Georgia Southern in 2010 when Pry served as defensive coordinator and Quinn worked as the linebackers coach. The duo also worked together at Louisiana-Lafayette from 2002-06.

Quinn has spent the past three years as the head coach of Savannah State where he led the Tigers to a 16-6 record after transitioning from the FCS level to NCAA Division II. Quinn's squad went 8-2 in 2021, the program's most victories in 26 years as the Tigers finished eighth in NCAA Division II in total defense (249.8 yards per game). Due to COVID-19, Savannah State did not play a fall season in 2020. The Tigers went 1-1 during a two-game 2021 spring schedule in 2021.

In 2019, Quinn piloted the program to a 7-3 record, the team's first winning record since 1998. He also became just the second head coach in the program's 100-year history to record a winning season in his first year at the helm. He guided Savannah State to a 5-0 record in the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference en route to the SIAC East Division title and was named the 2019 Black College Sports Network Coach of the Year after the Tigers finished the season ranked No. 8 in the Boxtorow HBCU Top 10 Poll. The Tigers posted the conference's top scoring defense in 2019 at 21.1 points per game.

Under Quinn's leadership, the Tigers boasted 15 all-conference players in two full seasons of competition, including 2019 conference freshman of the year RB Einaj Carter. Prior to being named the 26th head coach in Savannah State history, Quinn served as the defensive coordinator and linebackers coach for the Tigers during the 2018 season. His defense finished the year third in the Football Championship Subdivision in pass defense (138.5 yards per game).

Quinn worked as a defensive analyst at The Citadel during the 2017 season where he assisted with defensive game-planning and opponent preparation. He also ran analysis on opponent tendencies during his time with the Bulldogs. He worked as assistant head coach/defensive coordinator at Tennessee Tech in 2016. Under Quinn, the Golden Eagles improved their scoring defense by 7.2 points per game from the 2015 season, including an 11.0-points-per-game improvement in conference play.

Before arriving at Tennessee Tech, Quinn spent three years as the defensive coordinator and linebackers coach at Western Carolina (2013-15). He held the same roles at Charleston Southern in 2012. He served as linebackers coach and recruiting coordinator at Georgia Southern from 2010-11, where he worked under Pry during his first season. Prior to that stop, Quinn worked as the co-defensive coordinator at Northwestern State in 2009.

Quinn served as the defensive ends coach at LSU during the 2008 season where he helped DE Tyson Jackson earn second-team All-SEC honors. Jackson was the third overall pick in the 2009 NFL Draft by Kansas City. Prior to his time in Baton Rouge, Quinn served as the defensive line coach at Louisiana-Lafayette from 2002-08, working under Pry from 2002-06.

Quinn's collegiate coaching career began in 1999 as a graduate assistant at Tennessee where he worked with the offensive line and special teams. Quinn was part of the staff that led the Volunteers to the 2001 SEC East Division title and three bowl appearances.

A four-year starter on the defensive line at Carson-Newman, he helped lead the Eagles to four straight conference championships. Quinn graduated in 1995 with a degree in history and political science. He then earned his masters degree in 1998 from Lincoln Memorial.
