COURTESY PHOTO

American Pickers Mike Wolfe and Danielle Colby are close friends and business partners who hit the back roads in a search for America's most valuable antiques.

The American Pickers are returning to Virginia. Business partners and close friends Mike Wolfe and Danielle Colby plan to film episodes of The History Channel hit television series in Virginia in March 2023. "American Pickers" is a documentary series that explores the fascinating world of antique "picking" on The History Channel. The hit show follows skilled pickers in the business as they hunt for America's most valuable antiques.

As Mike and Danielle hit the back roads from coast to coast, they are on a mission to recycle and rescue forgotten relics. Along the way, they want to meet characters with remarkable and exceptional items. They hope to give historically significant objects a new lease on life while learning a thing or two about America's past along the way.

The Pickers have seen a lot of rusty gold over the years and are always looking to discover something they've never seen before.

Alumnus sparks superstardom with popular YouTube channel

John Jennings '12 was preparing for the day ahead when he was stopped in his tracks. The voices off in the distance sounded all too familiar.

He walked into the living room where his daughter was focused on a Harry Potter theory video. She had recently discovered the magic of the series that Jennings enjoyed all those years earlier with his best friends, the same best friends whose voices now were emanating from his living room.

"I walk into the living room to see Jonathan and Ben staring back at me on the screen," Jennings said. "That was one moment that really solidified what I already know — they've truly made it."

Thor Sparks is a 12-year-old retired narcotics detection dog. Over the holidays, he swallowed one cloth decoration and one chew toy essentially whole. They were removed at the Virginia-Maryland Teaching Hospital of Veterinary Medicine.

Former police dog Thor receives life-saving care

It's much easier to get a cloth elf and a plush teddy bear chew toy into a dog than to get them out.

But out they came, thanks to the combined efforts of more than 20 personnel at the Veterinary Teaching Hospital within the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine just before the winter break. Thor's care was financed by compassionate care donations through Paws of Honor and the Veterinary Teaching Hospital's Working and Service Dog Support fund.

A 13-year-old Dutch shepherd and retired police narcotics dog, Thor swallowed the two items — a Christmas decoration and his canine buddy's favorite chew toy — at the home of owner Chris Sparks sometime on or before Dec. 10.

Thor threw up several times that day, then seemingly returned to normal for a few days before throwing up again on Dec. 13 and 14. By the morning of Dec. 15, Thor was mostly vomiting bile, and Sparks took his dog to a veterinary clinic in Floyd.

"The vet said his pancreas readings were off the charts," Sparks said, so Thor was treated for pancreatitis.

That seemed to work for a while, but by Dec. 18, Thor was back to vomiting and refusing all food and medicine. "I called my vet's office but

Virginia farmer represents industry in national committee discussion on high energy costs

WASHINGTON—The petroleum-based plastic bags used to package Virginia-grown potatoes cost David Hickman 12 cents each in 2020. That price jumped to 16 cents in 2022.

In the face of ongoing energy price hikes, a 4-cent increase per bag seems insignificant.

"But if you buy a half million of these, there's a $20,000 increase just in packaging costs," explained Hickman, who represents Eastern Shore and Hampton Roads farmers on the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation board of directors.

He described the strain farmers are experiencing as the world grapples with sharp price increases for fuel, fertilizer, electricity, shipping rates and truck shortages. On Jan. 10, the U.S. House of Representatives Committee on Energy and Commerce heard testimony from him and other stakeholders in impacted sectors.

"We have an opportunity with this Congress to address what American families and businesses are suffering from: Some of the highest energy prices we've seen in decades," said Rep. Cathy McMorris Rodgers, committee chair. "My colleagues want to hear from people on the front lines."

Hickman, who also grows green beans, soybeans, and corn on Dublin Farms in Accomack County, said, "Last year had the most devastating input cost increases I have seen."

Diesel fuel escalated 186% to $5.24 a gallon. The farm's irrigation pumps run 24 hours a day,

Simulating self-driving security

By Kelly Izlar
writer

Self-driving technology can save lives, but adding autonomous vehicles multiplies the number of cyberattack targets on the road — endangering not only those in the affected vehicle, but those in nearby vehicles and buildings. Road testing to improve security is expensive and time-consuming, but Commonwealth Cyber Initiative (CCI) researchers developed a virtual option: a vast digital library of real-world driving scenarios to help manufacturers craft more secure autonomous vehicles.

A team from the Virginia Tech-affiliated company Global Center for Automotive Performance Simulation (GCAPS) is working with researchers at the Virginia Tech Transportation Institute (VTTI) to validate the security and performance of automated technologies virtually. Their project is supported by the Innovation: Ideation to Commercialization program from the Commonwealth Cyber Initiative in Southwest Virginia, which provides funds to commercialize technology generated from research at the intersection of data, security, and autonomy.

Virtually, scenario-based testing is a safe, cost-effective alternative to the traditional distance-based validation of autonomous technology, which requires the onerous and sometimes impossible task of driving billions of miles on public roads.

“The library establishes ground truth based on real-world data for vehicle interactions with the road, the infrastructure, vulnerable road users, and other vehicles,” said Miguel Perez, associate professor of biomedical engineering and mechanics who leads the VTTI data engineering program.

To construct a highly reliable virtual training library, the research team is leveraging a unique resource: the massive treasure trove of real-world recorded events in VTTI’s naturalistic driving databases.

For more than 30 years, VTTI has been collecting data from cameras and sensors unobtrusively installed (with permission) in regular cars belonging to regular people all over the country. The data — which includes basic vehicle dynamics, video, and sensor information — represents over 70 million miles of real-world driving behaviors exhibited during normal daily commutes, culminating in over 10 petabytes so far.

Over the past five years, GCAPS has worked with VTTI to apply the data to automated driving technology. The team has been developing an algorithm to classify a vehicle’s lateral and longitudinal micro movements by assigning objective values to the displacement of a vehicle at certain rates and distances. Once an event has been classified, it can then be recreated: converted into a simulation-ready dataset that includes trajectories, positions, road features, and terrain.

The researchers have been exploring questions like how close do people really drive to each other? Does a person’s age affect their reaction? Would a person in a different region react differently?

In the event of a cyber attack

“It’s a really powerful tool that’s only getting stronger and richer,” said Jonathan Darab, operations director at GCAPS. “Now, with CCI support, we’re utilizing it to enhance the cybersecurity of automated driving technology.”

With this focus, the question set has expanded to include what might happen with vehicle performance in the event of a cyberattack? How will a vehicle compensate for a spoofed sensor? Will the autonomous vehicle be safe on the road if it’s actively being hacked?

“Because the interactions in the events represent real-world data, the accuracy and timing of the interactions provide a highly valid foundation,” said Perez. “As such, the library enables the determination of cybersecurity risk severity associated with vehicles, but in a safe and repeatable way through simulation.”

This capability will help engineers determine the requirements for cybersecurity products on automated vehicles, such as the required response lag times to minimize vehicle issues, or the percentage of computing resources that can be safely reassigned to defend a hacked network.

LewisGale Medical Center breaks record of babies birthed for second year in row

LewisGale Medical Center has broken its record for babies birthed at the hospital for the second year in a row. From Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 2022, 1,249 babies were delivered, the most in the hospital’s 113-year history.

“Our recent investment into renovated patient rooms, delivery suites, and birthing tubs, among other advanced resources for pain management, makes this the hospital of choice in the region,” said John Harding, MD, labor and delivery department chair. “We have a great team, and this kind of positive momentum is an indicator of why our patients choose LewisGale Medical Center for their women’s health needs.”

The hospital recently began construction of a new neonatal intensive care unit (NICU).

The previous birth record was set in 2021 with 1,181 babies born, topping 1995’s

1,075 babies.

“Every delivery plan is customized to the specific family’s needs,” said Lisa Wade, maternal care services director. “Our birthing experience begins long before the first contraction and continues well after delivery. We are pleased to be able to celebrate this tremendous accomplishment.”

Home Country by Slim Randles: Finding Jenkins’s cabin

We all know someone will find Jenkins’s cabin. Someday. Oh, it’s up there in those hills somewhere. We all know that.

It’s become a friendly object of conjecture and speculation. No one living has seen it, as far as we know. Jenkins himself died quietly when he was on one of his infrequent trips to town for supplies. Funny guy, that Jenkins.

He worked in the city for years, mostly as a night watchman in a factory that made diapers. Didn’t really enjoy people much, and told us many times how nice it was to just be in the huge factory when it was quiet.

Then one day he decided to move to the mountains and make pretty things out of leather. Once in a while he’d have his coffee at the counter at the Mule Barn, but often as not, he’d camp out on the edge of town for the two or three days it took him to sell his crafts and buy supplies. He’d smile and wave from his campsite, then he’d be gone one morning. We wouldn’t see him again for months.

Now and then someone would ask him where his cabin was, and he’d just point toward the mountains and say, “Up there.” How far up there? “A ways.” What was his cabin like? “Not too big.”

And so we came to regard the little cabin as an intriguing mystery, an object of local legend. After he died, several of the fellows tried to backtrack him to find the place, but Jenkins evidently didn’t take the same trail each time, as though he wanted his quiet times protected from even a friendly visit from one of us. During his lifetime, we respected his wishes. In this country, a man has a perfect right to be a little strange. And, truth be known, we hold a certain admiration for those of us who hear different instructions.

But there is something in the human spirit, also, that begs to have its mysteries solved. So now, several times each year, one or two of us will use the mystery of the lost cabin as an excuse to poke our noses into the nuances and seclusions of these hills. We play off our curiosity against our wishes to respect a man’s privacy, even when he’s gone.

We have yet to discover Jenkins’s lost cabin. Maybe we never will. Maybe that wouldn’t be such a bad thing, either.

Virginia gas prices zoom up 18.6 cents per gallon

Gas prices across the commonwealth rose by a whopping 18.6 cents per gallon last week, averaging $3.34 per gallon as of Monday, Jan. 23, according to GasBuddy’s survey of 4,081 stations in Virginia.

Prices in Virginia are 39.7 cents per gallon higher than they were a month ago and stand 18.7 cents per gallon higher than they were a year ago.

The national average price of diesel has risen 2.6 cents in the last week and stands at $4.60 per gallon.

According to GasBuddy price reports, the cheapest station in Virginia was priced at $2.78 per gallon Monday while the most expensive was $3.99 per gallon, a difference of $1.21 per gallon.

The national average price of gasoline rose 11.3 cents per gallon last week, averaging $3.39 per gallon Monday. The national average is up 30.2 cents per gallon from a month ago and stands 7.3 cents per gallon higher than a year ago, according to GasBuddy data compiled from more than 11 million weekly price reports covering over 150,000 gas stations across the country.

“Gasoline prices continued their upward trajectory last week as oil prices pulled them higher across the majority of the country, and continued refinery challenges kept the supply of gasoline from rising more substantially,” said Patrick De Haan, head of petroleum analysis at GasBuddy.

“Macroeconomic factors have continued to weigh on oil and refined products as strong demand in China hasn’t been slowed much by a surge in new COVID cases,” according to De Haan. “In addition, releases of crude oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve have wrapped up. Concerns are increasing that without additional oil, supply will tighten in the weeks ahead, especially as the nation starts to move away from softer demand in the height of winter. Moving forward, it doesn’t look good for motorists with prices likely to continue accelerating.”

*GasBuddy is the authoritative voice for gas prices and the only source for station-level data. GasBuddy’s survey updates 288 times every day from the most diverse list of sources covering nearly 150,000 stations nationwide, the most comprehensive and up-to-date in the country. Host Christiansburg was the highest placing area team finishing in ninth place with 131 points. Christianburg's Brady Hand took first place in the 120 class, winning by major decision over opponent Dominc Pascoe of William Byrd in the finals match. Evan Mefford of Christiansburg took second place in the 126 class, and Jake Robie was a first-place winner at 150 pounds, defeating Bo Ice of Staunton River

Christiansburg's Zack Cummings took fourth place in the 157 class.

Blacksburg High School finished tenth in the tournament with 99 points and Radford High School finished in 16th place with 54 points.

In the 215 class, Abdullah Mastrogiovann of Blacksburg took second place while Braeden Henderson claimed fourth place in the 126 class.

Charlie Davis of Radford took third place in the 215 class. Teammates Taven Williams placed fifth in the 150 class, Lance Duncan seventh in the 175 class, and Joshua Porter of Radford seventh in the 215 class.

As the tournament champion in the 120-lb. class, Staunton River's Noah Nininger was named the "Most Outstanding Wrestler" of the tournament.

One of the top female wrestlers in the state, Natalia Sanchez of Powhatan, finished third in her Big Blue weight class and received the "Jackie Toney Memorial Scholarship," presented by the Christiansburg Blue Demon Wrestling Club.

The $1,000 scholarship is in honor of Toney, who volunteered countless hours to promote the mission and vision of the club. The award is made during the tournament to a senior wrestler for the college of his or her choice. The wrestler must maintain a grade-point-average of at least 3.0 and must participate in the Big Blue Tournament.

Now a senior and coming off a junior year that featured state titles in the VAWA Folkstyle Championships and the Virginia Girls Championship, Sanchez is using her final year at Powhatan as a chance to get other girls involved in the program.

Powhatan now has five girl wrestlers on its roster. Sanchez is currently ranked number 1 in the girls' competition at 106 pounds.

As it stands now, Virginia has no female wrestling division. Female competitors have to compete with boys. Separate tournaments specifically for girls, like the Virginia Girls Wrestling Championship, exist and are sanctioned by the Virginia High School League. Sanchez brought home the Virginia Girls Wrestling Championship title this past season.

But the Virginia High School League is on the verge of adding girls wrestling as a sanctioned sport in the commonwealth. In September, the VHSL Executive Committee voted to designate girls wrestling as an "emerging sport" starting with the 2022-23 season.

Gage Cockram of William Byrd was honored for the most number of pins in the least amount of time during the tournament

Hokie wrestlers down No. 5 NC State Wolfpack in front of record Cassell crowd

BLACKSBURG – In an electric night in Cassell in front of a record-breaking 5,943 crowd, the No. 8 Virginia Tech wrestling team defeated conference rivals the No. 5 NC State Wolfpack, 16-14. The Hokies won six out of ten bouts – including the highlighted return of No. 6 Bryce Andonian – to begin 1-0 in conference competition.

The highly anticipated dual began at 125 with No. 20 Eddie Ventresca taking on NC State's No. 29 Jarrett Trombley. The only points exchanged during regulation were escapes by both wrestlers to send the bout into the first sudden-victory match of the evening. Ventresca attempted to score, but Trombley was able to counter for neutral danger to put NC State on the board first.

No. 5 Sam Latona recovered for the Hokies and got Tech on the board with a 3-1 victory at 133-pounds against No. 25 Kai Orine. Latona was persistent with attacks and re-attacks throughout the bout, nearly finishing on a multitude of attacks but was unable to finish as time expired or the wrestlers went out of bounds. Latona's victory tied the dual at 3 two bouts into the dual.

Freshman No. 12 Tom Crook took the No. 6 wrestler in the country in Ryan Jack to the brink in the next bout. Crook and Jack had previously met in December at the Cliff Keen Las Vegas Invitational – won by Jack via major decision. Friday night would be different as Crook was nearly able to secure the upset as time expired but ultimately fell 1-2 via escape and riding time point.

The Hokies were revitalized with freshman sensation No. 9 Caleb Henson at 149 pounds. Henson faced fellow true freshman No. 15 Jackson Arrington and was on the attack often. It was all Henson as the Hokie garnered two takedowns, an escape, and riding time to secure the 6-1 decision to tie the dual at 6.

No. 6 Bryce Andonian was electric as he put up 20 points on the No. 7 Ed Scott in the fifth bout of the night. Andonian was explosive early, going bodylock straight to back points to go up 6-0 just :40 into the bout. He would then add four more back points before giving up a reversal and surrendering back points of his own. Andonian would go true Hollywood fashion and secure two more sets of backpoints and flurry of takedowns throughout the match to secure the 24-10 major decision for the Hokies. Andonian is now 5-0 against Scott in their careers after Friday's victory.

Tech would then drop 165-pounds in sudden victory as No. 22 Connor Brady fell to No. 32 Matt Singleton in sudden victory. With the bout tied at 4 in sudden victory, Brady pushed for a double but was countered on the edge by Singleton to give the Pack their third victory of the evening.

Making a bounce back performance after a close match against App State last weekend, No. 3 Mekhi Lewis was vintage at 174-pounds – knocking on three takedowns, riding time, and an escape to garner the 8-2 decision over No. 32 Alex Faison to increase the Hokies' lead 13-8.

The marquee match of the evening at 184-pounds was everything billed up to be. No. 7 Hunter Bolen dropped a tough sudden-victory decision to rival, No. 3 Trent Hidlay, 3-5. Bolen led after an escape and a takedown in the second period, but Hidlay garnered the same score in the third period to force sudden victory. Hidlay would secure a takedown on the edge in sudden victory to slim the Hokies' lead 13-11. This was the most points scored between the two wrestlers in their six meetings.

In the bout of the evening, No. 26 Andy Smith took out No. 6 Isaac Trumble in what proved to be the clincher for the Hokies. After a scoreless first period, Trumble would get an escape in the second period to lead 1-0 into the final frame. Smith would get an escape of his own in the third to tie the dual with 1:00 remaining. With just :40 on the clock, Trumble would attack, only to be met by Smith's stout defense and counter offense, giving the Hokie a 3-1 lead. Trumble would then get an escape and look to attack but Smith's defense was too much and would eventually hold on for the 3-2 decision and the final win for the Hokies to secure the dual.
