Plant One Of These Trees

It seems like we've several phone calls and that haven't gone well, I just made it through the Christmas season and all the decision-making about gift giving, and here we are with Valentine's Day just a few days away. We ponder what we might buy those we love that will express our feelings. Men might be considering delectable chocolate treats, flowers, jewelry, a pampering manicure, pedicure, or a spa day, or perhaps dinner out, or a movie night ... along with the perfect card that communicates just the right message.

Women, trying to be just as thoughtful, are question. Should it be a fresh tomorrow. tool her man would like to golf day 'with the boys', or even a gift certificate to have his vehicle washed and waxed? And, of course, the perfect card.

Sure, it is "sweet" to go to all this trouble for someone you care about but it puts a lot of pressure on both genders to come up with an ingenious idea year after year that will convey your appreciation for having this person in your life. Maybe too much emphasis is placed on the purchase of a gift. Isn't there SOMETHING we could do to express our love that doesn't involve stressing, shopping, and buying???

I found something I'll share with you that, to me, is a truly "sweet" special, thoughtful gift ... and no purchase is involved. troubles and heartaches and bad times. So when I read this story, it shed a new light on a 'loving' relationship.

Α lady was having some home improvements done and had hired a reputable contractor to do the work. On the very first day on the job, some of the supplies had arrived in the wrong quantity AND color.

exchanges were made, at fixing things, he just couldn't seem to get his needed equipment up and running. Now it looked like the entire day would show no progress at all! He apologized for all the delays and told have, a new fishing rod, a to be no end to his bad frustrations home with Topping off his day. frustration, he went to his vehicle and it, too. had decided to fail him! The lady who had trusted his competence offered to take him home and said it would give her the opportunity to meet his wife and children. He accepted her offer. She parked along the road and they walked up a small hill toward his house. She noticed that he paused along the way to rest his hands on a tree momentarily and was still for a few moments. She wondered at first if he was ill, but when he resumed his steps, she didn't ask any questions.

She met his family -acheerful wife and several children, all so delighted to see him come home A trouble tree could from work. The next serve the whole family I hope you will read day when he showed well! People who love up for work, however, you love each day with one another turn to one curiosity got the best of a smile and not just your another to share their her and she asked why troubles would make he had paused at that every day Valentine's tree. She explained that Day! Be sure to share she worried that perhaps your love, more than the day of frustration had been too much for him. He admitted that the day before had been a trying one but that he was fine and then added further smile in you, give it to explanation.

a trip to the supplier, the pause there long enough errors were corrected, to leave my troubles behind because and all was well. BUT, it family doesn't deserve had slowed things down to bear the brunt of my quite a bit and over half bad day. The time I have a day had been wasted. with them is theirs and Finally, the contractor I don't take my work proceeded with the job at home with me. And you hand. An hour into the know, the funny thing project, the contractor is that when tomorrow had a major tool failure, comes, my troubles are and as talented as he was not as numerous as when I left them there on that tree the day before."

How many perfect

days do you have? Let's be honest; there are probably few absolutely perfect days! And what do we do when our days deliberating the same the lady he would start have thrown us many curve balls. It is only But, alas, there seemed natural to bring those us and probably unload on those we care about. It makes us feel better to 'vent' our frustrations and let it out! And now our loved ones also feel our frustration. What a perfect idea this man had ... to lay his burdens on the limbs of his 'trouble tree' ... and what a sweet gift for his family ... to greet them each day burden-free! Maybe we should all plant a trouble tree in our front yard and pause there each day to shelve our frustrations so that we don't cast our aggravations on those who greet us.

Men aren't the only ones who have frustrating days! Women have them too, and children do as well. Greeting those you share your troubles! Just some 'food for thought' .....

system. Imagine the impact on a city sewer system when tens of thousands of employees and children not in school are quarantined at home, using facilities that were never designed for this increased usage. In addition, small businesses and non-profits, were not in their buildings and local police and fire departments had to increase patrols of empty city streets and alleys that were vulnerable to break-ins and fires.

In addition, local governments had to reinvent their ability to do remote meetings to allow governing to continue. Prior to March 2020, few cities were fully online with their meetings and the ability for citizens to access the government meetings via online access. As many businesses and other organizations were quickly moving to platforms like Zoom and Microsoft Teams, local government was also learning this new technology. One unique twist for local government meetings is the requirement for compliance with the "Sunshine" laws in each community. This is important because it is not possible to press the pause button and public hearings, bond hearings and other important decisions are being made at nearly every meeting. Fortunately, cities and towns adapted quickly and revamped their systems to accommodate this new req remen. While sm e smaller cm min ties h d sm e b itch s, v rall, mo t cm min ties were p ad ring with iveload aid o meeting that met the leg l reiq rements, it ctated by the state and ityc harters.

With the development of the COVID-19 vaccines, local governments will continue to play a pivotal role in the orderly distribution of the vaccine. Local health departments are providing the infrastructure to organize vaccine drives and educational programs to deliver accurate information. As the vaccine gets us closer to "herd" immunity, businesses and schools will begin to get back to full operation and local governments will again transition its focus to inperson business and school operations.

Sadly, many local governments are facing budget shortfalls in the coming year, due to the lack of business taxes and fees paid by residents and businesses. Because of the way that local governments collect taxes, most city budgets were prepared in the previous year and did not include the huge losses due to the business closures and reduced employment. Hopefully, Congress will address this lack of funding with the new pandemic relief bill to prevent cities and towns from laying off needed workers.

The COVID-19 pandemic has levied a heavy cost on the entire country but fortunately, many people have done Amazing work in keeping us safe. Be safe out there and have an Amazing day!

Phares Named Bridgeport Football Coach!

The Bottom Line By Bill Nestor Sports Editor

This past week, Tyler Phares was named the Head Football Coach at Bridgeport High School. After approval by the Harrison County Board of Education, Phares became the 19th Head Coach in school history. Phares started his coaching career at his Alma Mater, Elkins High School, in 2010. Phares moved from Tiger Territory to a high school in Virginia for three years. His journey took him to Morgantown High School (his is currently a teacher in the Mon school system) just prior to his arrival in Tribe Territory.

As the Indians offensive coordinator, the squad flourished, especially this past season when he implemented the single-wing scheme. It paid huge dividends as the Indians averaged 46 points per game en route to the school's 10th state championship. A huge plus for Phares in getting the coveted position was the fact that he was already on staff at the school. His familiarity with the other coaches, the players, and the school administration were extremely important in the process.

Phares replaces John Cole, a longtime assistant that stepped in when the program was facing extreme adversity. Cole was there when the program needed him most and he delivered a high level of professionalism while steadying the ship in the process. Cole also kept the wins coming, accruing a 43-6 record as the leader of the program. Cole would continuously throw praise to his assistants and players after wins care and God Bless!

while absorbing the fault for losses.

Phares has left the door open for Cole to return as an assistant on his staff and hopefully he will continue to coach. His contributions are invaluable to the program. Phares is an offensive genius and his accomplishments don't stop with the implementation of the single- wing. Phares also helped Bridgeport put up big numbers with the Power Pistol prior to the move to the singlewing. Phares has the ability to make adjustments to his offensive attack based on the personnel that his roster shows. His ability to adjust and adopt make him one of the best offensive minds in the state. Phares will inherit arguably the most consistent program in Mountain State history. The Indians are approaching 30 consecutive winning seasons. They are two shy of the mark and with the current roster and a top-notch coaching staff led by Phares, there is no reason to believe the winning streak will not keep growing.

Another program that has been on top at Bridgeport is skippered by legendary manager, Robert Shields. Coach Shields has been at the helm of the baseball program for what seems like forever and his record shows it. State titles have mounted up like snow in the middle of the winter and Shields is looking for another one this year.

The only thing that has slowed down the big winning machine is the coronavirus which forced the cancellation of high school baseball a year ago in West Virginia. This year, the Indians are looking for their seventh consecutive state title. This year's edition is loaded with talent and is poised for another championship run. Shields and company look to put the frustration of last year's lost season behind them as they focus on the task at hand.

That will do it for now. Until next week...take

Mountaineer Nation Increases In Numbers!

By Bill Nestor Sports Editor

There is a certain amount of strength in numbers. The more the merrier, especially when it comes to the number of fans that are allowed to attend West Virginia University games. Mountaineer Nation was ecstatic heading into the home tilt with Florida because for the first time this season, they were allowed into the Coliseum to catch the Mountaineers in action. Sure only 1,000 fans were able to view the action, but it was a start.

How important are fans in the stands? Consider last week when WVU travelled to Iowa State to face the two-win Cyclones. On paper it should have been a blowout but instead WVU blew a 15-point lead and had to struggle to pull out a four-point win. The bottom line is that every conference game is a dog fight and easy wins are nearly non-existent. Therefore, any increase in home attendance is a boost that just might make the difference between winning and losing.

A 50% increase to 1,500 total fans was a big deal which was announced just prior to the Kansas game. It is a win for fans and it takes us one step closer to normalcy. Sure, it won't happen this year, but it is hovering in the distance which provides a level of optimism that hasn't been seen since last March. Also, this year's edition is starting to put the final touches on the regular season which means postseason play is just around the corner and it doesn't get any better than that!

The track is threequarters of a mile long and holds more than 200 races every year.

Irby thinks there is hope for the racing industry after the passage on December 27, 2020 of the Horse Racing Integrity and Safety Act.

It bans the use of drugs on horses on race days and creates a national standard for drug-testing and enforcement. The act to be overseen by the United States Anti-Doping Agency, must go into effect by July 1, 2022 at the latest.

working condition and

had fairly low mileage,

and although it passed inspection, the body was showing severe wear.

The refurbishing process took three months to complete. It was first sent to Pittsburgh for body work and then on to Ohio for electrical, pump, and lighting work.

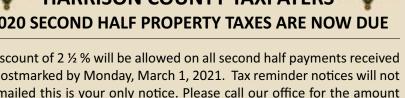

"Although it was fine mechanically, it was really in need of some tender loving care. While it was being rehabbed, we had other apparatus on hand to service our community surrounding areas and were still able to offer aid to other departments," Oliveto added. "We had been saving the funding for this to be done for quite some time, and refurbishing it was a real cost savings for us. To today would have cost neighborhood the $700,000 while completely rehabbing it could be done for less than a quarter of that service area residents. Although Oliveto said that since the pandemic, there had been a decrease in overall call volume, SVFD volunteers were still dispatched for 810 alarms during the 2020 calendar year. Those calls included: 60 fire alarms, 4 brush fires, 11 vehicle fires, 36 miscellaneous fires, 59 structure fires, 34 vehicle accidents, 130 miscellaneous calls, and 476 medical emergencies.

Remember that these dedicated firefighters are VOLUNTEERS who are UNPAID and yet respond at a moment's notice, both day and night, to prevent fire from taking lives and destroying property. With 25 trained volunteers on their roster, not only should SVFD be proud of that, but the community as well should be proud of them and thankful for their protection.
