Store sells “clean and local”

Sarah Benson, owner of Soul Miner’s Daughter, makes a sale in Lost Creek at a holistic health fair. She sells not only at her brick and mortar store, but at local events and online.

By Kara Linaburg

Wife and mother of three, Sarah Benson, started creating clean, plant-based products for her family out of concern about the chemicals found in cleaning and beauty merchandise sold in the general market. Overtime her passion for homeopathic remedies turned into a growing business, and she quickly realized that others shared her love for all-natural alternatives. “It was a small scale... for myself and my family. I didn’t really expect to turn it into a business,” Benson said. Her brick and mortar storefront, Soul Miner’s Daughter at 221 Pike St. in Shinnston, opened its doors in August 2022, but she also sells online and at local events. She has since created a wide range of merchandise, including cleaning spray, beard oil, chapstick, facial toner, dish soap, and tea. Benson explained that homeopathic remedies have always been an interest. “I’ve always been into the oils. I’ve kinda lived that way for a little bit, and I’ve gotten a lot of herbal medicine books.” She went on to explain the difference between what she sells and the more familiar name-brand products many use in their homes. “With my products, there are five, six, ingredients tops, and if you get anything off the store there’s going to be a laundry list of ingredients that you’re not even going to be able to pronounce,” she said. Benson is concerned about the side effects these toxic chemicals can have on bodies. “It’s obviously not to replace medicine, but if you can replace your soap with one less harmful chemical, why not?” Benson said that the

Local film to be shown at Maryland festival

By Erin Beck

“Lilac Gulch: An Appalachian Fairy Tale,” a short film by local film production company, BIG THINK PICTURES, in collaboration with The Vintage Theatre Company and Geminye Studios, has been accepted into the seventh annual Ocean City Film Festival in Ocean City, Maryland. “The director, Jason A Young, is the owner and operator of the Vintage Theatre Company and has been to Shinnston many times over the years with their improv group ‘The Fearless Fools’ and their Shakespeare troupe ‘The Rustic Mechanicals,’ said Christopher Swann, writer and producer of “Lilac Gulch.” Big Think Pictures is a locally grown production company, owned and operated by West Virginia native Christopher Swann. The film festival will be March 2-5 and includes 70 independent films from around the world. Included in the festivities are parties and Q&As with the filmmakers, workshops with industry experts, and happy hour events. “Big Think Pictures strives to make true Appalachian art and one of the ways that we kept true to that mission is having our principal shooting location on a small family owned farm just outside of Lumberport,” Swann said. “We are all local artists who dedicate ourselves to promoting Appalachian culture in every aspect of our creative endeavors.” “Lilac Gulch” is the story of a runaway 12-year-old boy and his childhood imaginary friend as they traverse the untamed wilds of the Appalachian countryside on a magical quest for a place where parents never die. Swann aimed to fill the story with adventure and wonder. He says “Lilac Gulch” is a tale of grief,

Fundraiser feeds Shinnston

First Baptist Church in Shinnston held a luncheon to raise money for The Lord’s Pantry Feb 12. “All proceeds will be given to the pantry to be used for whatever they may need; nonperishable food, cleaning supplies, and personal hygiene items,” said pastor Kevin Nuzum. The fundraiser was sponsored by the church’s youth group, and had a wide variety of soups, from broccoli cheddar to chili, to desserts of cakes and cookies, and of course, no West Virginia luncheon can be complete without pepperoni rolls. Folks, many of whom had just gotten out of church, lined up at noon to donate and get a good, hot meal and socialize with the community.

A teacher’s impact lasts

I recently went to a funeral mass for a person I had known for most of my life. His name was Walter Kulczycki and his sister is married to my cousin. I would often see him at family gatherings and church picnics over the years. The funeral service was a small family gathering and the family members barely filled four rows of pews at the church. He was 91 years old when he died, and I can remember seeing him over 60 years ago when his parents were customers on my paper route. He was a very dignified person and generally wore a suit and tie. After graduating high school, he attended business college, which led to a position in some local businesses. He joined the Army during the Korean War and was stationed in Germany. He returned home and enrolled in college, obtaining a teaching degree in his favorite subject, science. This led to a long career teaching science at Roosevelt-Wilson High School. As I sat in the pew, I thought of his life and listened as the deacon related that although he did not know Mr. Kulczycki well, he visited the funeral home’s website and copied some of the comments left by former students. Here are a few: “This man was one of three teachers I credit with having a great impact on my life. He taught a poor kid from Nutter Fort to believe in myself and work my way through college. One of the good guys in this world for sure.” “He was a tough but understanding teacher. After having him for science for 3 years he still remembered me when we saw each other 40 years later Rest in Peace.” “Mr. Kulczycki was one of my favorite teachers at RW. He always made science fun whether it was

There are certainly many careers that pay more than teaching and few teachers have their names up in lights, but teaching has one benefit that few other jobs can boast. Their impact is felt for centuries after they leave this earth. They plant the seeds of curiosity and bring understanding to complex problems. Their words are passed down from generation to generation.

It would be great if every teacher could read the words written about them on a funeral home guest book but, alas, that is not possible. A message from this week’s column is to think about those teachers in your life, that made a difference. And maybe, send your thoughts to them in a card or a note. It will be treasured like gold! Rest in peace, Mr. K!

Play was exciting and professional

This week I have contemplated writing about several things in the column but changed my mind several times. First I wanted to bring to you highlights of Rhonda Holyfield Mangieri, the keynote speaker at the Women of Distinction luncheon on Friday. She used “What In The World” as her theme. Then I was listening to PBS and I thought about writing the column about traditions. Time caught up with me and I did not start either column. Mike Queen called and asked me to join him at Bridgeport High School to see the school play. I came away so excited that I am going to share with you a few of the play highlights

The play was “Bright Star,” a musical by Edie Brickell and Steve Martin. First I must tell you that they had live music with the musicians seated on the stage throughout the entire play. The play takes place sometime around the 1940s and tells the story in both music and dance. All the costumes were created to fit the period and were in such good taste. The dance ensemble presented great and authentic dances. I caught myself several times beating my foot to the step

Let March Madness begin

The Bottom Line

By Bill Nestor
Sports Editor

It is officially March Madness time and even though it is extremely early in March, the excitement is at a high level.

The big question surrounding the West Virginia men's team is are they in or out of the NCAA Tournament? This past month has provided a roller coaster ride for Mountaineers fans. A 3-4 record in February wasn't exactly stand-out, but considering the strength of schedule, it wasn't quite as bad as it could have been.

The wins included back-to-back triumphs over Oklahoma and Iowa State to start the month, and the third victory was an 18-point shellacking of Oklahoma State.

Sandwiched between the second and third wins was a three-game skid that included losses to Texas, Baylor, and Texas Tech. The setbacks to the Longhorns and the Bears were by a combined 46 points. Sure, both are ranked in the top ten in the country, but that doesn't lessen the setbacks when the full body of work is reviewed by the NCAA selection committee.

The best loss of the month, if there is such a thing, was to Kansas. The narrow two-point loss to the Jayhawks showed the Mounties could play well on the road. WVU had possession of the ball with 20 seconds left and an opportunity to win the game. That is as close as they have come to garnering a signature win away from Morgantown. The three wins in February all came at home and they could be viewed as expected by the selection committee.

Depending on the day and the prognosticator, the Mountaineers have done either just enough to get in the tournament or they are one of the first teams on the outside looking in.

The best news is that veteran mentor, Bob Huggins, doesn't have to turn his resume in just yet. Huggins is already doing his team's bidding by announcing that his squad doesn't need to win any more games to get into the dance. Huggins is lobbying early in hopes of planting a premeditated seed that could sway the committee on judgment day. Huggins is doing all he can off of the court for his team.

On the court, WVU has a few more lockups to beef up the resume before Huggins has to hand it over. Kansas State comes to Morgantown on Saturday. Everything is going Huggins' way heading into the clash with the Wildcats. The 'Eers are 4-1 in their last five tilts in Touchdown City. It is also Senior Day, which always brings an emotional edge to the home team that tends to charge up fans who already have reason to get up for this battle.

A trip to the T-Mobile Center in Kansas City for the Big 12 Tournament might be a deciding factor for the Mountaineers.

The worst thing for any fan, player or coach is knowing that the journey is over and there is a hurt that sometimes lasts a lifetime when the ride is over. However, today the glass is half full and this group has their fate in their own hands. Could WVU make its way into the NCAA tournament? We will find out soon.

That will do it for now. Until next week... take care and God Bless!

Athletes of the Week

It's that time once again to acknowledge the efforts of Harrison County's student-athletes. Each week we review the performances of the athletes from the six schools (Bridgeport, Liberty, Lincoln, Notre Dame, Robert C. Byrd, and South Harrison) in our county.

The Shinnston News & Harrison County Journal's Athlete of the Week award is an avenue to promote the youth of our county while bringing attention to their athletic accomplishments.

This week's winners of the Shinnston News and Harrison County Journal's Athletes of the Week are Robert C. Byrd's Avery Childers and Bridgeport's Anthony Spatafore.

Flying Eagle basketball standout Avery Childers started the week by helping her team to a win over Liberty in sectional play. Childers recorded a double-double with game-highs in points (20) and rebounds (16) to go along with three steals. Childers led her squad to a sectional championship with a win over Lincoln. She scored a game-high 19 points and hauled down six rebounds in the victory over the Cougars.

Indian hoopster Anthony Spatafore scored a game-high 25 points in Tuesday's setback to Fairmont Senior. Spatafore also collected seven rebounds in the contest.

Congratulations to Robert C. Byrd's Avery Childers and Bridgeport's Anthony Spatafore for being named the Shinnston News and Harrison County Journal's Athletes of the Week!

Cable announces retirement from Fairmont State

Longtime Fairmont State University administrator and head athletic trainer Robert Cable has announced his retirement following the 2022-23 academic year, according to a news release. Cable is currently in his 32nd year at Fairmont State and currently serves as senior associate director of athletics for sports medicine & game day management.

"When I came to Fairmont as the athletic director in the fall of 2020, Bob was one of the few people I remembered from my previous experience at Glenville State in the early 2000s," said Fairmont State Director of Athletics Greg Bamberger. "The knowledge and experience he had accumulated during his entire career helped greatly in my transition. Bob's dedication to the health and safety of our Falcon student-athletes is unquestioned and he will be greatly missed by many."

Cable, a well-respected leader in the athletic training community both regionally and nationally, was inducted into the West Virginia Athletic Trainers' Association Hall of Fame in April 2022 as he was presented the crystal trophy that honored his dedication and achievement in athletic training. Five years earlier, Cable was also inducted into the Mid-Atlantic Athletic Trainers' Association (MAATA) Hall of Fame in May of 2018. The achievement celebrated his service to Fairmont State University, the National Athletic Trainers' Association (NATA) and MAATA.

Cable was also honored with the NATA service award during the summer of 2018.

"I have spent many great years at Fairmont State," said Cable. "I want to thank Colin Cameron for bringing me to Fairmont State. The second day I was at Fairmont State I met Rusty Elliott. Those two taught me what Fairmont State is all about: family & tradition. I have been fortunate to be a part of an excellent athletic department. I want to thank the athletic trainers, coaches and student-athletes I worked with. They helped me just as much as I helped them."

In addition to his work with NATA and MAATA through the years, Cable also chairs the Mountain East Conference Committee of Athletic Trainers. Cable was also named the co-Athletic Trainer of the Year by the West Virginia Athletic Trainers Association (WVATA).

The WVATA Athletic Trainer of the Year Award recognizes Cable's exemplary accomplishments in helping lead Fairmont State University through the challenges presented by the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic.

In addition to the recognitions mentioned above, Cable also earned the MAATA Service Award in May 2015. In 2010, Cable was named the NCAA Division II Trainer of the Year by the NATA and in 2007 he was named the Trainer of the Year by WVATA, the first of two times he received the prestigious honor.

Dino exhibit to open to public on weekends

From The World of Parks & Recreation

By Doug Comer

In less than two weeks, the popular dinosaur exhibit will be open to the public on weekends at the Parks and Recreation complex on U.S. Route 19. File photo.

For close to five weeks, Director Mike Book and staff have worked on the main floor getting the area prepped for its annual dinosaur exhibit, and beginning Saturday, March 11, the doors will be open to the public for weekend visits. Repeating customers will get to see some newer fossils and some of the fan favorites from the past will be in stock again this year. Director Book anticipates another great turnout as he explained in a recent interview.

"Everything is pretty much ready to go for the field days, which begin next week," said Book. "We gathered a ton of new information for the kids, and we are always excited about this program as we include the public as well during the weekends. Staff will be working hard over the next two months, but it will be well worth the effort given. This is by far one of the favorite things we do for Harrison County."

But the exhibit goes well beyond the county as some visitors come from the outlying counties as well. By the entrance, we encourage families to sign the register letting us know where they are from and how many are attending that day. We gather that information to tell us how many visit on the weekends and overall as well as their location. Email addresses are collected so we can send information about various events that are available throughout the year. Book is always surprised by the distances that some people travel when visiting the Recreation Complex.

"We have had people from Alaska come and visit the exhibit," said Book. "Of course, we were not the primary reason, but those who live in the area have something to offer their guests when visiting Harrison County in March and April. Our exhibit is free of charge to all visitors for the weekend visits and many take advantage of a family day where the kids get a chance to teach their parents something about dinosaurs."

Historically, the dates were in mid-February through early April, but last year the date was pushed back in hopes of warmer weather allowing the children a chance to get in some exercise on the playground. Warmer weather did pay off on many days for the kids as they did have some recreational time, but that is not the only reason for the later dates.

"Primarily, the main reason for the later dates of the exhibit is to lessen the amount of cancellations due to school closings. Over four years ago, we had numerous days called off due to the weather and because our dates are booked completely, the kids miss out on their date. Pushing the event back to March and April limits the amount snow day cancellations as the weather is normally warmer during those months," said Book.

Hours of operation for the exhibit will be Saturday and Sundays from noon until 5 p.m. The location of the Recreation Complex is U.S. Route 19 south past Rosebud Plaza. For more information, please contact the office or find us on Facebook.

BUSINESS MATTERS

Building new garage was a “calling”

From left to right, Tina and Paul Owens, managers of Road Warriors Auto Repair; and Jeff and Ashley Dytzel, the owners of the new auto shop, hope the business will be an asset to the community.

By Kara Linaburg

Shinnston continues to grow as more businesses are opened. 2023’s first ribbon cutting began with Road Warriors Auto Repair, managed and run by Paul and Tina Owens.

“This was a vision. This building here was a vision. God just directed me this way. It’s all him,” Paul Owens said of his garage.

He’s been repairing vehicles for 40 some years and says that getting Road Warriors off the ground with owners Jeff and Ashley Dytzel has been two years in the making.

“I prayed about it, God spoke to me about it and he brought it to pass,” he said. “I never wavered on it. I stood on my faith.”

Road Warriors on 201 Pike St. offers a variety of services for vehicle needs, including oil changes, diagnostics, and suspension repairs, and he is hoping to include inspections sometime in the next month.

Even though Road Warriors has only been open for a few weeks, he says that business is doing well and slowly picking up over time. “(We) had a lot of good response from the community. People are just thankful to have a garage right here in town. I believe it will do well.”

Ashley Dytzel, who purchased the building for Road Warriors along with her husband Jeff Dytzel, said they were extremely grateful for all the love they had received from locals. The ribbon cutting Feb. 13 was met with success, and she is thankful for businesses such as Minor’s Auto and NAPA that have given them connections and support. She agrees with Owens that the local response is confirmation that they are where they Road Warriors Auto Repair’s goal is to give back to the community. One way is by participating in a free clothing giveaway for locals.

Mountain Grown marketing to expand

The West Virginia Department of Agriculture (WVDA) has launched a West Virginia Grown Partner Program to incorporate supporters of local agricultural products into the branding program, according to a news release. West Virginia Grown has historically focused on only those who produce agricultural products. The WVDA wants to expand the reach of the program by bringing in new affiliates.

“We recognize we have to create more resilient food systems given recent supply chain issues and the pandemic. What West Virginia Grown does is identify to consumers the businesses working on building those food chains. Now, we want to bring in other partners dedicated to that same mission,” said Commissioner of Agriculture Kent Leonhardt.

Developed in 1986, West Virginia Grown was designed to market West Virginia grown and made products to consumers. By placing the West Virginia Grown logo on a product, they are assuring buyers that product was grown or processed, with quality ingredients, in the Mountain State. Building on the success producers have experienced from West Virginia Grown branding, the Partner Program will attract new members, enhancing the reach of the brand to help increase production and consumption of locally grown and manufactured foods.

The West Virginia Grown Partner Program will provide the same benefits that current members enjoy:

- Use of the popular logo
- Inclusion in WV Grown directories
- Promotion through WVDA’s many media channels and special events
- The goodwill of consumers throughout the state who are anxious to support local food and farms

“With more than 300 existing producer members, and the logo appearing on hundreds of products, there is no doubt about the growing value of West Virginia Grown. We hope people will be lining up to join this partner program,” Leonhardt said.

For more information or to join WV Grown, contact Buddy Davidson at wvgrown@wvda.us or 304-558-2210. Membership is free.

The West Virginia Department of Agriculture protects plant, animal and human health through a variety of scientific, regulatory and consumer protection programs. The Commissioner of Agriculture is one of six statewide elected officials who sits on the Board of Public Works.

Capito discusses economic development projects in Harrison County

U.S. Senator Shelley Moore Capito (R-W.Va.) visits STOCKMEIER Urethanes USA, Inc. in Clarksburg on Thursday, February 23.

U.S. Senator Shelley Moore Capito (R-W.Va.), a leader on the Senate Appropriations Committee, made several stops in Harrison County on Thursday of last week focused on economic development and Congressionally Directed Spending (CDS) projects.

First, Senator Capito visited the Kelly Miller Community Center where she toured the facility and met with the center’s leadership and local leaders, according to a news release.

“As a leader on the Appropriations Committee, I have made sure West Virginia’s needs are front and center when our nation’s funding decisions are determined. The Kelly Miller Community Center is a perfect example, and I was proud to help them secure a CDS request earlier this year that will directly impact their facility—and ultimately the surrounding community,” Senator Capito said.

Sarah Benson’s homeopathic journey took off when she sought clean alternatives to what is typically found on store shelves. The products she sells are what her family uses daily and what has worked for them.

products on her shelves are what have worked for her and her family, and one of her favorite products so far is the toner. “I use it regularly. I use most of my products regularly, but this one is a high seller and it works. It made a huge difference (for) my personal skin. I (also) do an all-purpose healing salve called Nana’s Cream, and that one sells really well. That was actually a recipe that my mom had passed down to me, and it’s one of those staples that we use in my house. We put it on everything.”

Benson’s goal is to not only sell items that have been proven to work, but to also sell the product at prices locals can afford. “I don’t put a price on my product that I wouldn’t be willing to pay,” she said.

As she continues to get returning regulars and positive reviews, it seems that locals would agree that her products are not only affordable but well worth checking out.

“When I first discovered Soul Miner’s Daughter, I was delighted to finally be able to shop local and clean together in one place,” said Maria Cusack. “It’s been so exciting to see the business grow into a full shop in Shinnston! I regularly use Sarah’s products and I am never disappointed.”

Benson said that her favorite part of owning Soul Miner’s Daughter is being creative. “If I want to carry something new, I can; all I have to do is make it. And if I don’t want to carry something anymore, I can. It’s kinda like an art form, it really is.”

Soul Miner’s Daughter is open downtown Monday, Thursday, and Friday from 12-7 p.m. and Saturday from 10-12 a.m. Or you can shop online at <https://soulminersdaughterwv.com>.

Shinnston Memorial Cemetery & Mausoleum

Have you heard these words before?

The family will have a service at a later date. The days turn into weeks, which turn into months, then years and sadly there will be no service. Families return home, emotions begin to fade, and all that remains is a distant memory. There is no closure, no burial, no place to visit, and no way to honor the person that has passed.

If you have not made cemetery arrangements and are looking for a place of remembrance, beauty, protection, well maintained and trusted for over 100 years, look no further than Shinnston Memorial Cemetery & Mausoleum.

We offer a variety of options, both in-ground and above ground to accommodate your price and preference.

Call or visit our office to hear about our 0% interest payment arrangements and cremation specials now being offered.

How to prepare your garden for spring

The cold winter months can seem to stretch on forever for those of us who love our lawns and gardens! Instead of staying shut indoors, why not make the most of your time and bundle up for some springtime lawn prep?

Some planning and work on the front end will help make your garden all the better and spring garden maintenance more manageable. Here is a short checklist of items to work on this winter.

Get your tools ready

Winter is a great time to dust off your spring tools and arrange for any cleaning or repairs needed. It's also the time to take stock of what might be missing from your shed that you'll need come springtime.

Think about items like your mower, garden spreader, blower, rakes, shovels, etc. There is nothing more frustrating than going to do yard work on a beautiful spring day only to realize that the tools and equipment you need either aren't there or don't work.

Clean up beds

Get the not-so-fun task of cleaning up the beds in your yard out of the way during winter so that in the springtime, you'll be able to enjoy planting and seeing the plants and flowers you cut back thrive with new growth.

Clip away anything that didn't make it through the winter or needs pruning and think about making room for new plants and flowers. Think about adding fresh straw or mulch to beds if needed.

Create a spring planting plan

If it's just too cold and miserable to be outside but you still want to get a jump start on your spring garden, get your creative juices flowing and create a spring lawn and garden plan.

Think about what you'd like to grow, what grows best in shade vs. sun and begin to map out where things will go in relation to what you already have growing. Taking time to draw up a plan will prove beneficial in the end as opposed to figuring things out as you go... things like timing and placement are important!

Select a spring fertilizer

Temperatures are finally starting to warm up and the arrival of spring draws closer. As temperatures increase, soil temperatures also increase and this creates different conditions within the soil. Your garden will require certain nutrients at this time. We like to recommend the Lawnifi® Spring Fertilizer Box, a liquid fertilizer with a unique blend of nutrients that serve to help your lawn and garden establish strong roots, promote the return of green leaves and prepare for the hot summer season. Powered by Catalyst Technology™, Lawnifi maximizes plant uptake and nutrient availability to help improve soil structure and enhance the growth of microbial populations needed to thrive in the spring.

Pull winter weeds & get rid of pests

Garden weed control is much easier to tackle on the front end, so now is the time to get rid of those weeds that will hamper spring growth. It might seem like everything is either dormant or dead in the winter, but not those pesky weeds! They seem to hang on no matter what.

Go ahead and rid your lawn and beds of weeds so that you will have healthy soil to plant your spring plants and flowers in the spring. Be sure to apply a pre-emergent herbicide to prevent spring and summer weeds!

Pests are another issue that will quickly get out of control come springtime, so consider pre-treating your garden with a broad-spectrum insecticide to make sure that grub worms in your garden don't move in.

Parkinson's registry funded

A new West Virginia Parkinson's disease registry has taken a big step forward with the announcement of a planning grant from The Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson's Research, the world's largest nonprofit funder of Parkinson's disease research, according to a news release.

The Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson's Research has provided a grant of $160,000 to the West Virginia University's Rockefeller Neuroscience Institute to host key stakeholder discussions to shape a potential framework for the statewide Parkinson's registry. The framework could be used as a best practices plan for other states to follow.

According to The Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson's Research, five states have established varying Parkinson's disease registry concepts that range from partial registries to attempts at building a broader neurodegenerative registry.

"Our grant is aimed at helping WVU and its partners engage all the right stakeholders to design a state-of-the-art registry," said Ted Thompson, JD, senior vice president of public policy for The Michael J. Fox Foundation.

"The West Virginia registry, when it's up and running, will provide population-based data that will be critically important to moving the science forward and getting us closer to better treatments and a cure," he said.

The West Virginia Legislature passed legislation in 2022 to establish the West Virginia Parkinson's Registry. The registry will be managed by the WVU Rockefeller Neuroscience Institute.

The West Virginia registry will be one of the first patient registries managed by an academic medical center and the first in the Appalachian region. An advisory committee will work with WVU to establish the registry. The board will include representatives from the state's two other medical systems: Marshall Health and Charleston Area Medical Center.

The registry advisory committee will also consist of patients, policymakers, researchers, and other individuals who will bring valuable insights to a registry design.

The Michael J. Fox Foundation along with other Parkinson's organizations and industry partners commissioned The Economic Burden of Parkinson's disease study in 2019 to estimate the cost of Parkinson's in the United States. It found the economic burden of Parkinson's disease to be more than $52 billion annually in direct and indirect costs such as hospitalizations, medication, missed work and family (unpaid) caregiver time.

According to the study, West Virginia has the third highest prevalence rate of Parkinson's disease in the country with more than 7,000 people affected and costs $344 million annually to care for people living with Parkinson's disease.

"The West Virginia Parkinson's community worked hard to pass the registry legislation a year ago and this grant will allow us to take the registry from concept to reality," said George Manahan, founder and director of the Charleston Parkinson's Support Group.

Manahan says his organization has partnered with The Michael J. Fox Foundation for the past ten years, raising funds through its annual Fox Trot fundraiser and helping to push for legislative solutions on both the state and federal levels.

Parkinson's disease occurs when brain cells that make dopamine, a chemical that coordinates movement, stop working or die. Because the disease can cause tremors, slowness, stiffness, and walking and balance problems, it is called a "movement disorder." But constipation, depression, memory problems and other non-movement symptoms also can be part of Parkinson's. It is a lifelong and progressive disease, which means that symptoms slowly worsen over time. Estimates suggest that Parkinson's affects nearly one million people in the United States and more than six million people worldwide.
