Matthew Barkley boards the retirement train

Suzanne Stewart
Staff Writer

After 29 years as an officer for the West Virginia Department of Natural Resources, Matthew Barkley has decided to retire – and he's been busier than ever with his retirement plan.

Barkley began his career with the DNR in 1995. He went to school for business, but an elective class in criminal justice led him to pursue a law enforcement degree. He took a natural resources class and realized he wanted to join the DNR.

"Out of the academy, they sent me to Hardy County," he said. "I was there for three months and then they had a shortage of officers in Boone County, so I went there for three months. Then, Doddridge [County] came open, and I wanted to go north."

Barkley spent 14 years in Doddridge County which became a home away from home.

"The people are a lot like they are here," he said. "I still talk to a lot of them there."

After those 14 years, Barkley returned home to Pocahontas County and spent 15 years as a DNR officer here.

The misconception about the DNR is that it's only concerned with hunting and fishing violations, but there's more to the natural resources than that.

"We do a lot of different things," he said. "We mainly focus on fish and wildlife, but we also handle solid waste – just household trash. The main parts of that is if somebody dumps illegally on somebody else, we'll handle the investigation or if somebody isn't handling the solid waste in their home correctly, like burning trash or letting trash build up, we investigate that, as well."

"We do all the boating and waterways stuff, too," he added.

In Pocahontas County, the DNR monitors the rivers and lakes, making sure everyone is licensed and safe. With several large events taking place in the Ohio Valley, the waterways were a big part of Barkley's work when he was in Doddridge County.

"In Doddridge County, I worked the hunting seasons and then in the summer, I was usually on the Ohio River on a boat," he said. "I worked most weekend for the different river events. Lot of boating – Parkersburg Homecoming, Stonewheel Regata, river races and Fourth of July weekend. Those were the big ones."

While there is some boating coverage in the summertime, Barkley said most of his summer was spent dealing with bear and deer damage. Bears have a tendency to get into people's trash while the deer prefer gardens.

After spending 29 years with the DNR, Barkley said his favorite part of his career was working with the people and being part of the communities.

"You get to know a lot of people," he said. "Doddridge was the same way. They roughly had the same population. I did a lot of stuff with the schools – with hunter education and 4-H. I've taught air rifles at our 4-H camp up here ever since I moved back. I did it in Doddridge County, too."

Barkley started his retirement in July by using up leave time, but he hasn't slowed down. In fact, he may be busier now with his new adventure.

His retirement plan is to work at Cass Scenic Railroad State Park – a place that is in the Barkley blood.

Watoga Art in the Park

THE ANNUAL ART in the Park event, held last weekend at Watoga State Park, brought artisans and crafters to the area to demonstrate and to sell their creations. Above, Beverly Guzikowski demonstrates chair caning. She said she learned how to cane chairs in 1975 and continues to hone the craft at her home in Marlinton. Visitors to the event were given the opportunity to test their own artistic abilities with projects such as flower pounding, tie-dying and chalk drawings, as shown below. S. Stewart photos

DESPITE THE SCATTERED rain showers, visitors to Watoga State Park played pickleball on the newly renovated courts Saturday. Watoga unveils new outdoor courts

Suzanne Stewart
Staff Writer

With snacks like pickles on a stick and pickle juice shots, you know it's going to be a unique day. That's what was waiting for visitors to the recreation center at Watoga State Park last Saturday.

It was the official unveiling of the newly refurbished recreation area. What was once two tennis courts and a basketball court is now a place where people can add pickleball and shuffleboard to their recreational fun.

When it came time to fix up the area, Watoga superintendent Jody Spencer said they weighed the options of what people would want to do while visiting the park.

"We decided to just do away with tennis, because out of all these options, we felt like it was probably the least popular thing now," he said.

Ironically, as he was saying that, a couple began using the new courts to play tennis.

That's the great thing about the courts. They can be used for tennis or pickleball, which are similar.

After the courts were finished, Spencer said he was surprised to see how one sport was popular among visitors of all ages.

"Oddly enough, shuffleboard," he said. "Sometimes it's as popular as pickleball."

Those interested in taking up the two new sports, or who want to play good old-fashioned basketball or tennis can rent equipment from the park office.

The courts are open to everyone, not just those staying at the park, so there's no limit to the amount of fun to be had.

Commission appoints Joni Nichols as interim prosecutor

Tim Walker
AMR Reporter

At its September 3 meeting, the Pocahontas County Commission appointed Assistant County Prosecuting Attorney Joni Nichols as interim prosecutor through December. Current prosecutor Terri Helmick (R) submitted her resignation from that office, effective September 6, 2024.

Nichols changed her political affiliation from Democrat to Republican following her loss in the spring primary election to Democrat attorney Laura Kershner. The change in party affiliation qualified Nichols for the appointment since state law requires that an appointed interim be a member of the same party as the departing elected prosecutor.

SWA discusses green box abuse and fence issues

Tim Walker
AMR Reporter

Pocahontas County Solid Waste Authority (SWA) discussed the Green Box sites at Caesar Mountain and Marlinton at its August 28 meeting. Landfill Manager Christopher McComb talked about the many issues at those Green Box sites.

One of the issues McComb brought up was that, if the SWA replaces the fence around the Caesar Mountain site, he believes people will just illegally tear it down again. He said people also abuse the system by placing all sorts of unauthorized things like metal poles, fence posts, construction materials such as shingles, and once even a car engine in the boxes which are supposed to be used only for bagged house-

Kershner is running unopposed in the November General Election.

When the commission took up the agenda item concerning awarding and/or modification of bids for the EMS/911 project, as recommended by Commissioner John Rebinski, they took no action. Rebinski explained he wanted to wait because he does not know if the county would still be committed to paying the winning contractor's bid in the event they cannot come up with the funds for the project. The commission did pass the second part of that agenda item – which authorizes the County Building Commission to proceed with an application for a U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) loan to build the project. He explained that he is also working on other financial resources for the project including Congressional Directed Funding, commonly referred as congressional earmarks, from U.S. Senator Shelley Moore Capito, which could reduce the amount of any loan.

In other matters, the commission

- voted to clarify that any previous official documents referring the hospital as "Pocahontas County Memorial Hospital," should be interpreted as "Pocahontas Memorial Hospital (PMH)," the official name. This was necessitated by questions from the USDA regarding their existing loan with PMH.

ONE OF HUNDREDS of varieties of apples, the crabapple tree originated in the mountainous regions of Central Asia, specifically in what is modern day Kazakhstan. Apple seeds were brought to America by European settlers as early as 1630.

Apples in the ancient world

Laura Dean Bennett
Staff Writer

Today, the apple is the most widely cultivated, has had and still has the most varieties and is most popular fruit. There are at least 7,000 different kinds of apples grown around the world.

Many pomologists say that the first apples came from Kazakhstan in Central Asia, east of the Caspian Sea. The capital of Kazakhstan is Alma Ata, which means "full of apples." They originated in Kazakhstan, in central Asia east of the Caspian Sea. Alma Ata, capital of Kazakhstan, until 1997, means "full of apples."

Carbonized apples dating back to 6500 B.C. have been found in Anatolia.

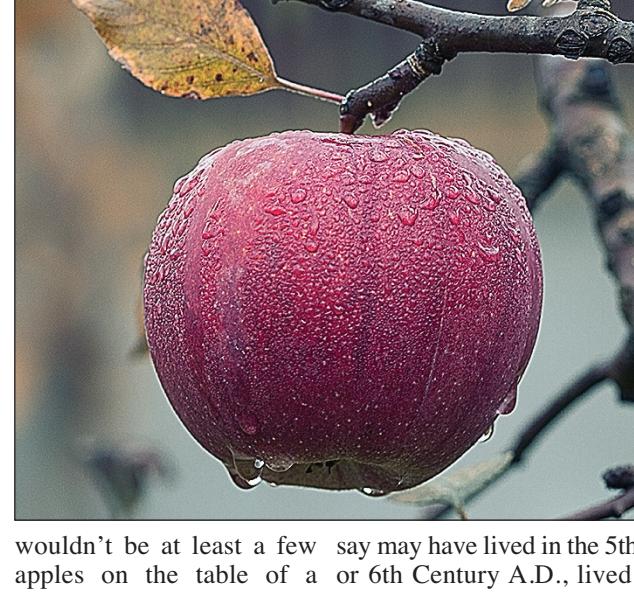

The Greeks, Etruscans and Romans were known to cultivate many varieties of apples.

Evidence of apples has also been found in prehistoric settlements in Switzerland and the imprint of an apple seed appears on a fossil found in a Neolithic archeological site in England. Egypt's King Ramses II had apple trees planted in the Nile delta in the 13th Century.

Apples have been cultivated since the Seventh Century B.C. in Greece and Greek mythology is full of references to apples. They were on the table at wedding feasts in Athens.

Apples were so symbolic of love and marriage in ancient Greece that tossing an apple to a woman was tantamount to a proposal of marriage. And if she caught it, the hopeful bridegroom could assume his suit had been successful.

Although they were expensive, it was rare that there wouldn't be at least a few apples on the table of a Greek wedding feast. Tradition held that the newlyweds must consume an apple before retiring to their bedchamber to ensure their health and fertility.

The Greek general Alexander the Great, lived in the 4th Century B.C., became king of Macedonia and established one of the largest empires in the ancient world. He was a great believer in the power of apples to convey health and longevity.

He took them with him wherever he went, even on long military campaigns. Legends said that many of Alexander's priests lived as long as four hundred years because they consumed only apples.

Alexander was 32 when he died in 323 B.C.E. During his 13-year reign as the king of Macedonia, Alexander created one of the largest empires of the ancient world,

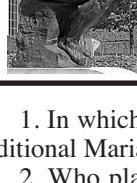

He was a great believer in the power of apples to convey health and longevity. say may have lived in the 5th or 6th Century A.D., lived, worked and "held court" in an old grove of apple trees. He believed that eating apples gave him wisdom, foresight and the power of prophecy.

The Celts were making cider during the reign of Julius Caesar and cider was always on the table in Medieval Normandy, in France. In the Old Testament, in one of his psalms, King Solomon wrote: "Comfort me with apples: for I am sick of love."

By the late 15th century, the apple was a regular part of life in Spain, and Spanish ships were carrying apple seeds and trees along their trade routes back and forth between Europe and the Far East.

Since ancient times, the apple has had an important place in the culture of the Old World.

It's no wonder that immigrants to the New World brought their knowledge of apple cultivation with them.

Library Lines

by Joe Miller,
Director of Development

Last weekend, my wife and I enjoyed one of our favorite weekend excursions—we biked the Greenbrier River Trail, stopping off for pizza at Jack Horner's Corner. As we sat on the deck waiting for our order, the opening chords of "Every Breath You Take"—the 1983 hit from The Police—began to play.

I observed to Caroline that if that song was released today, it'd be much less likely to have been a hit.

The observation kicked off a long discussion about problematic art.

Now there are a couple of ways that art can be problematic. The content itself could be objectionable.

"Every Breath You Take"—which many would argue romanticizes stalking women—is an example of problematic content.

Art with objectionable content is a thorny problem that we'll leave for another day.

I'm interested in the second way art can be problematic—when the art is good but the person who produced it is problematic. (I'm not assuming a particular definition of "problematic" here. You can read the term as "something that you personally find significantly objectionable for moral/social/religious reasons.")

Take the 1974 film, Chinatown. It won an Oscar for best screenplay and secured nominations for its lead actor and actress and for its director.

That director, of course, is Roman Polanski, a man who drugged and raped a 13-year-old girl.

I'm confident we can all agree that someone who rapes a child is a Very Bad Person.

But what do we then want to say about Chinatown—a film that many critics argue is among the best ever made?

Chinatown is a relatively clear-cut case—an objectively important work of art made by an obvious villain. Other cases are harder. If you're a left-leaning fan of outlaw country, what do you say about racist comments from Charlie Daniels or Hank Williams, Jr? If you lean right, can you still enjoy Rage Against the Machine when Tom Morello calls a Republican presidential ticket "the embodiment of the machine our music rages against?"

How much can we really separate the art from the artist?

In the early part of the 20th century, most critics believed that art and artist are fundamentally intertwined.

For this school of thought (which is known as formalism), an artist's biographical circumstances are the key to understanding any piece of art, music, film, book or poem.

A formalist would say that it's impossible to separate Chinatown the film from Polanski the child rapist.

By the 1960s, formalism had given way to a new form of interpretation that viewed a work of art as a self-contained item—a thing that could be judged solely on its own merits. This strategy reached its peak in Roland Barthes 1967 essay, "The Death of the Author."

Barthes—whose essay is one of the defining works of a school of thought known as post-structuralism—argues that authors (and any other type of artists) are simply vessels through which the artwork passes. The author/artist's views and intentions have no bearing on the interpretation of a work. Each individual's interpretation is uniquely valid.

That's probably about the best any of us can do. Enjoy what we enjoy, but do it reflectively and with kindness toward those who reach a different conclusion.

Stop by your local library branch and check out some things you enjoy. And if we don't have it, just ask and we'll get it for you.

The same is true for art by problematic artists.

I'll be honest: I like a lot of art made by people I find problematic. But there are also things I once liked but no longer enjoy because I can't get past the terribleness of the artist.

I don't have a universal principle to share. I just try to ask myself in each example, "why do I like this thing even though I know it's problematic?"

Sometimes I emerge from that process liking a thing less. Sometimes I emerge liking it more. But in every case, I find that by taking the time to think through why I still enjoy (or don't) a problematic work, I have far more sympathy for those who reject things I like or like things I reject.

That's probably about the best any of us can do. Enjoy what we enjoy, but do it reflectively and with kindness toward those who reach a different conclusion.

We're unlikely to solve a century-long academic debate in a newspaper column. But I'd suggest that both the formalists and the post-structuralists are partly right. Individual interpretations are perfectly valid. But the artist's intentions aren't completely irrelevant.

Hall pleaded not guilty to one count, person prohibited from possessing a firearm. Bond was set at $1,000 PR with the added condition that the defendant will be allowed to travel out of state for healthcare.

Steven K. Bennett, 49, of Green Bank, waived his right to an evidentiary hearing and stipulated to the allegations in the petition to revoke alternative sentencing of home confinement.

The State relates that the defendant has served most of the time he was initially sentenced to, and the Court accepted the relinquishment of the initial sentence and sentenced Bennett to 120 days in the Regional Jail with credit for jail time and home confinement time served. Bennett was remanded to custody.

Christopher Gibson, 47, of Buckeye, failed to appear for his arraignment, and a capias was issued.

Calm in the Chaos

by Dawn Reed

Never before has life been more chaotic. More stressful. More intense. More expensive. We need some calm in the chaos. Of course, the Bible speaks to that.

In Mark 4:35-41, Jesus told the disciples, "Let's go to the other side of the lake." They did. A storm came. They were terrified.

Just because the disciples were with Jesus didn't keep them from being in a storm. Obeying Jesus is the BEST THING. But that doesn't mean we will always have unicorns and rainbows.

Just because the disciples were with Jesus didn't keep them from being afraid. They were human. We, too, can become fretful and fearful. What can we do? Since storms will always be coming, we need an action plan.

The next time a storm comes, we can take the word STORM and use it for good.

S-Stand in His Strength.

Not your own. I cannot stand in my own strength, but I can in HIS. Ephesians 6:10 tells us, "Be strong in the Lord and in His mighty power."

T-Take Him at His Word.

All through the Bible, God tells us He will be with us. He will not leave us. He will deliver us. He will help us. He will rejoice over us. We can believe every single word.

It is our defense against worry, anxiety, and over-thinking. If we take it up, it is a weapon. If we take it in, it is a balm for our soul.

O-Overcoming is possible with Christ. In John 16:33, Jesus said, "I have told you these things, so that in Me you may have peace (or calm in the chaos). In this world you will have trouble. But take heart! I have overcome the world." Overcoming is a mindset. I can't overcome on my own. But overcoming is possible with Christ.

R-Rest in His Presence. I'm not talking about laying on the couch rest, but leaning on Him rest. In the OT, Exodus 33:14 tells us, "The LORD replied, 'My Presence will go with you and I will give you rest.'" In the NT, Jesus said in Matthew 11:28, "Come to me, all you who are weary and burdened, and I will give you rest." Rest, too, in knowing everything is not dependent on you, but on Him.

M-Move at His leading. (AKA: Don't burn down anything. Don't jump off anything. Don't post anything. And you may not want to get a tattoo about it.) We can act when we are emotional, in fear, anger, jealousy, depression, frustration, from hormones...or because of the full moon. Before we over-react or do something crazy, let our first move be to call on our heavenly Father. Ask Him for guidance. Then move when and how He says.

That day on the lake, the disciples panicked. They forgot Who was with them. They yelled, "Don't you care?" Oh, yes, He did. And

Dawn Reed

He cares about us. As we face storms in life, we can count on Him. He will give us calm in the chaos.

A mini squall kicked up a few days ago. My heart was racing, mind spinning, emotions bubbling. I spoke my STORM plan. Out loud. S-Stand in His strength, T-Take Him at His Word, O-Overcoming is possible with Christ, R-Rest in His presence, M-Move at His leading. It helped!

Note of Thanks

I would like to thank Dr. Lee and the ED staff at PMH for their prompt and attentive care during my recent illness, and Raleigh General Hospital for the wonderful care I received during my stay there.

To my family and friends, thank you for checking on me during and after my hospital stay; the calls, messages and prayers were greatly appreciated. And a special thanks to Caleb Diller and Carolyn Dean for their generosity.

Debbie Burgess

THANK YOU

The family of Gertrude Taylor would like to thank their friends and neighbors for the many kindnesses shown them at the time of the passing of someone so special and dear to our family. We were so blessed to have her with us for so many years.

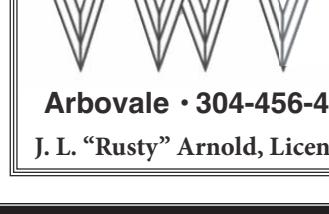

The prayers, cards, calls, food, flowers and donations were all greatly appreciated.

Thank you, Wallace and Wallace Funeral Home for assisting the family; Pastor Amy Barkley Paul for officiating at the service; and to the community for providing an outstanding meal for the family and others.

We extend our deepest thanks to you for all your support which has been such a comfort to us during our time of sorrow. We appreciate it more than words can express, and it will always be remembered.

May God richly bless each one of you.

Shirley, Rusty and all the family.

LEGAL HOLIDAYS

As this is written on a Friday morning, it is proper to put down that Monday will be Labor Day. An earnest young man was in this office to inquire the meaning of Labor Day. Without going into long, tedious and involved discussion of times when and places where sinful class distinctions prevented recognition of manual labor as honorable and dignified, I could only tell him that beginning away back in 1892 the first Monday was set aside as a day for labor organizations to celebrate. Since that time every State has made the day a legal holiday.

And speaking about holidays, a couple of generations back an American philosopher is known to have remarked that the time was fast approaching when, with the rapid increase in population, it would be necessary for the United States to celebrate two Fourth of July each year. The second glorious Fourth would become necessary to weed out and keep the number of fools in right ratio and proportion to the rest of the population.

According to his figures, one national holiday Fourth had proven its value in keeping in check the weak minded part of our population by supplying a day in which to kill themselves off. However, the country was growing too fast for one Fourth to properly take care of the situation, and there is a distinct need for a second fourth.

LOCAL HISTORY NOTES

A good many weeks ago, a reader came in to inquire what I knew about Hugh McKeever, who had been killed by Indians on Stamping Creek away back about Revolutionary War times. I had to confess total ignorance, but did promise to inquire around to see what basis there was to the rumor of the tragedy.

A clue was the name of a field now owned by Joe Sharp on Blue Lick of Stamping Creek, the "Huey Field." Yes, it was named for Hugh McKeever, who lived there. He was killed in the field which now bears his name. He was scalped and his body left in a sitting position against a stump.

Another citizen had recollection of having been told by his mother that Hugh McKeever was killed at the big spring just beyond the stockade of Days Fort. The time was the raid in which the Bridger brothers were killed. The fort was at Millpoint, at the site of the present home of J. Lanty McNeel...

There is tradition to the effect that Mrs. Hugh McKeever and a young son made it to the fort, but a daughter in her teens was taken captive when and where her father was killed and scalped.

There is further tradition that this young girl was taken by the Indians to their towns beyond the Ohio; the Pickaway Plains are even named. From there, she escaped and made her way back to the Greenbrier Valley. One day, she appeared at the Warlick Fort at Cloverlick, just about half starved. Her appearance on Clover Creek, instead of Stamping Creek, 25 miles down the Greenbrier, could be accounted for by following the trail up Elk River instead of coming on up the Kanawha to the trail leading up Gauley River.

The McKeever name is still with us in the Greenbrier Valley. I have no way of knowing if some of them are the descendants of Hugh.

Thomas Gray did some strong thinking along the line of country life. He was a teacher himself and owes his eminence to the writing of one poem, an elegy written in a country church yard. He wrote many other poems, none of which were very well received. For instance, his Ode on the Death of a Favourite Cat Drowned in a Tub of Gold Fishes, had no universal appeal. But the elegy will survive as long as the English language lives.

He does not glorify country life to the extent that it may be glorified today. He writes before America had become the light of the world and before such men as he came to the sun bright mountains to be monarchs of all they surveyed. He writes in a resigned and colorless way of the compensations of country life. That life that wise men now exalt above all other kinds of existence.

"Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,

Their sober wishes never learned to stray;

Along the cool sequestered vale of life

They kept the noiseless tenor of their way."

Not very enthusiastic is he? In this day and time, we can be thankful that our lot has been cast in country places. Not merely resigned, but rejoicing therein. Every day and in every way, it becomes more apparent that the best that is in life is in the country, where "peace comes dropping slow, dropping from the wings of the morning, till when the cricket sings."

All the most ambitious can plan is to be born in the country, go to the city to make enough money to move back and live in the country.

JUDGE McCLINTIC'S WAY IMPRESSES NEW YORK

The New York Times has the following sketch of Judge Geo. W. McClintic, of Charleston, who recently held a session of federal court in that city.

Judge McClintic has not found the New York courtroom entirely to his liking. In West Virginia, said his attendant, he preserved the dignity of the court to the fullest. The first-time offender of that dignity he fines; the second he sends to jail. The other day, when a burst of mirth was occasioned by a bit of repartee of opposing counsel, Judge McClintic informed the crowd in the room:

"If that happens again, there will be no more exclusion from the courtroom. The persons offending will go to jail for 30 to 60 days. Exclusion is not my method..."

SHAVERS FORK

"Shavers Fork must be declared off-limits to all strip mining," congressman Ken Hechler declared in a telegram last Friday to Governor Arch Moore.

"The heart of this beautiful trout stream, 14 miles of river below Cheat Bridge, is gravely threatened by a huge 500 acre proposed strip mine to be opened by Energy Enterprises of Beckley. This operation would destroy historic Fort Milroy, White Top and much of Barton Knob which overlook the famed 'fish for fun' section of Shavers Fork. Two smaller strip mining operations are reportedly in the planning stage, as well. These strip mines will mean the death of this precious stream and the destruction of the Bowden National Fish Hatchery," Hechler said.

"Shavers Fork is one of the finest trout streams in the eastern United States – one of West Virginia's most prized assets..."

SNOWSHOE

Sunday afternoon, we took a look at Snowshoe and it seems that they will be ready for skiers when the snow comes. Given a start with a snowstorm or two and some cold weather, they are prepared with miles of water pipe to make their own snow. When all of the slopes are completed there will be nine miles of water pipe laid.

This year there will be four ski slopes ready, ranging from a beginner slope to the Cup Run Slope, with a 1,500 ft. drop, for expert skiers. The names chosen for the slopes reflect the early logging days of the area – Gandy Dancer, Ballhooter and Narrow Gauge...

Footsteps through History

The Pocahontas Times

Thursday, September 7, 1899

Our State has suffered from the illicit sale of liquor if ever a State did, but so far as we know the only plan taken to prosecute the sellers is by the time honored grand jury route, and the number of indictments vary with the personnel of the different grand juries. Some sets of men will not want to "spoil the lick."

the most trouble, is all we can recall. The pie, with 24 blackbirds was our 24-hour day, and when the pie was opened was morning, and the birds that sing were not the birds that had been baked, but the birds generally, which sing in the morning.

The above has so taxed us that we cannot with any certainty give the hidden meaning of

"Hey, diddle diddle,
The cat and the fiddle,
The cow jumped over the moon;

The little dog laughed to see such sport

And the dish ran away with the spoon."

We will attempt, however, to unravel it. We believe it bears on the condition of things today. "Hey, didle didle" is the essence of political stump speeches; "The cat and the fiddle," the only two classes, the crafty and those who seek enjoyment; "The cow jumped over the moon" – one man rich enough to own all the property in a State; "The little dog laughed to see such sport" – the attitude of the daily papers. "And the dish ran away with the spoon" – the public, the dish, allowing itself to be seduced by the manufacturer's trust.

Mother Goose was a great philosopher. The wisdom is couched in such language that it is handed down from mother to child, and will never be lost.

BURDETTE TO HIS SON

"There are young men who do not work, my son, but the world is not proud of them. It does not know their names even. It simply speaks of them as Old So-and So's boys. Nobody likes them, nobody hates them; the great busy world doesn't even know that they are there."

So find out what you want to be and do so, and take off your coat and make a dust in the world.

The busier you are, the less deviltry you will be apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier your holidays, and the better satisfied will the world be with you."

WARRIOR SPORTS

Warriors fall in season opener

Mitchell B. Koerber
Student Sports Journalist

Many would consider this first game to be an unfortunate start to kick off the Pocahontas County High School Football season. Despite losing 54-6, the Warriors see this as a strict learning opportunity to hopefully improve from their mistakes, work harder during their own practices, and bring home a welcome victory.

The game, in Parsons, started with a tremendous kick-off from the Warriors to the Mountain Lions by junior, #5, Hayden Moore. Then on Tucker County's fourth play from scrimmage #30, Jared Reel, pulled off a whopping 46-yard cut back run before finally being brought down by PCHS sophomore, #8, Anthony Bennett. As the next three plays went on, the Warrior defense held strong until, on a fourth and two, Lions' QB Samuel Marx found Lukas Barr leading to a two-yard touchdown pass and a Mountain Lions' lead.

After a three and out, the Mountain Lions were able to block a Pocahontas County punt. An unfortunate call after an obvious turnover, gave the Mountain Lions the ball back at the Warriors' 20-yard line. On the next play, Marx completed a 20-yard touchdown pass to #13, Reid Kizamore.

The Mountain Lions never looked back. Now at 16-0, and with the Mountain Lions on defense, the Warriors attempted a long pass but it was intercepted by #26, Keelyn Echelberger. This would then lead to yet another 15-yard touchdown pass from Marx to #14, Garrett Wilfong, with the Mountain Lions jumping to a quick 24-0 lead.

As time ran out in the first quarter, Warrior QB Logan Keatley went down with an apparent rib injury. After a nervous delay in regulation play, Keatley was carted off the sideline bench by EMS and taken to the hospital. His prognosis was later diagnosed as positive, and he is expected to return within four to five days.

At the start of the second quarter, the Warriors turned to sophomore QB Gavin Delair. Making his debut for Pocahontas County, Delair, on his first play of the game, connected on a colossal 65-yard touchdown pass to #4, senior, Devon Burgess. Burgess made an outstanding catch, stayed in bounds and found his way to the end zone. Afterward, Delair remarked, "seeing Logan get hurt was rough, but it motivated me to step up and make a big play for our team."

After the game, Coach Doug Burns traveled to the hospital to visit Keatley.

"It was an enormous relief to get the news from the doctor about Logan," Coach Burns said.

Coach Burns stated that Keatley was eager to get back to playing football but the coach will monitor him and not rush his return.

The Warriors are on the road again this week as they head to Fayette County to face the Meadow Bridge Wildcats. On August 30, Meadow Bridge won their first game of the season after Van High School forfeited due to lack of players.

Kickoff is at 7:30 p.m.

The stadium address is 762 Meadow Bridge Rd., Meadow Bridge, WV.

The second goal is to increase the leadership support to include, but not limited to, strategic planning, scheduling, evaluation process and instructional leadership.

"The reason I went with this is we've been talking with the instructional team about having strong instructional leaders, that would fall down to our teachers, to our staff, and hopefully, then we would be able to make a difference that way," Bostic said. "We already have monthly meetings. We're trying to turn the monthly meetings away from talking about memos and have them do work sessions. They really do seem to appreciate that."

Next, the board reviewed its goals for the school year and chose the following five:

- Monitor the school's strategic plans
- Reinstate surveys
- Provide PRO [Professional Resource Officers] when possible
- Meet with the staff –

service and personnel – at least once a year and in each community

- Purchase a van for Pocahontas County High School sports and clubs

In other action, the board approved:

- Refund check for bus purchase.

• Accepting the Architectural and Engineering Design Services of William Shrive Architects, of Charleston, as the architect for the Major Improvement Project [MIP] for electrical upgrades and gym floor replacement at Pocahontas County High School.

it takes to complete the purchase of the landfill, some of that money may be returned. She pointed out that tire recycling and white goods recycling both lost money in July. During that month, the first month of the 2024-2025 fiscal year, the SWA had an income of $187,667.01 and $196,014.73 in total expenditures. You can find a link to this total financial report with this story at allegheny-mountainradio.org

It was reported that the SWA received its annual Solid Waste Management Board Grant award in the amount of $15,000, which was about the average received by counties across the state.

It was also announced that the Public Service Commission has approved the landfill tipping fee rate increase and the tire recycling fee increase. Those will take effect on September 1.

McComb also reported that the West Virginia Department of Environmental Protection (WVDEP) Inspector came out to the landfill and found two violations of stone placement and a violation for wind blown trash. He said the inspector seemed satisfied with the remedies the SWA had implemented to fix prior violations.

There was a discussion about spending an estimated $20,000 to repair the broken Mack garbage truck, which might be more of an expense than that old truck is worth. They decided to not repair it at this time. McComb said, however, this will only leave them with one aging Peter-Built front loading garbage truck, and if that breaks down, they will be in trouble. He said new front loading garbage trucks cost between $350,000 to $400,000 and used ones are about $200,000.

They also reviewed the drafted deed for the proposed purchase of the landfill which had been prepared by the county commission's attorney, Mike Doss. They found one item regarding the spraying of herbicide along the road into the property to be objectionable, and said they thought that there had been an agreement to drop that from the deed. Commissioner Jamie Walker said he should be able to get that item removed from the deed.

Dr. Peters brings a wealth of experience and a strong commitment to rural healthcare, having served as a dedicated physician at Community Care of Buckhannon since 2009.
