

Park history

Riverside became a state park in 1933 and many of the park's distinctive structures, including a suspension bridge across the Spokane River, were built by the Civilian Conservation Corps. Prior to white settlement, the area was a major gathering site for Native American cultures. The Spokane House Interpretive Center at Nine Mile Falls features the history of the early fur trade and its effects on the Native American population.

Overnight accommodations

Riverside's main campground is in an area of the park known as the Bowl and Pitcher. There are 16 standard (tent) campsites and 16 RV utility sites with electricity and water. Maximum site length for RVs is 45 feet. The Nine Mile Recreation Area has three tent sites and 21 RV sites of varying lengths with trailer dump station.

Reservations for campsites can be made online at www.parks.state.wa.us or by calling (888) CAMPOUT or (888) 226-7688.

There are two large group camp areas located at the Bowl and Pitcher campground that accommodate either 40 or 60 tent campers.

Fees are based on the number of campers.

The two group camps may be reserved by calling (888) CAMPOUT or (888) 226-7688.

Riverside State Park

Welcome to Riverside State Park

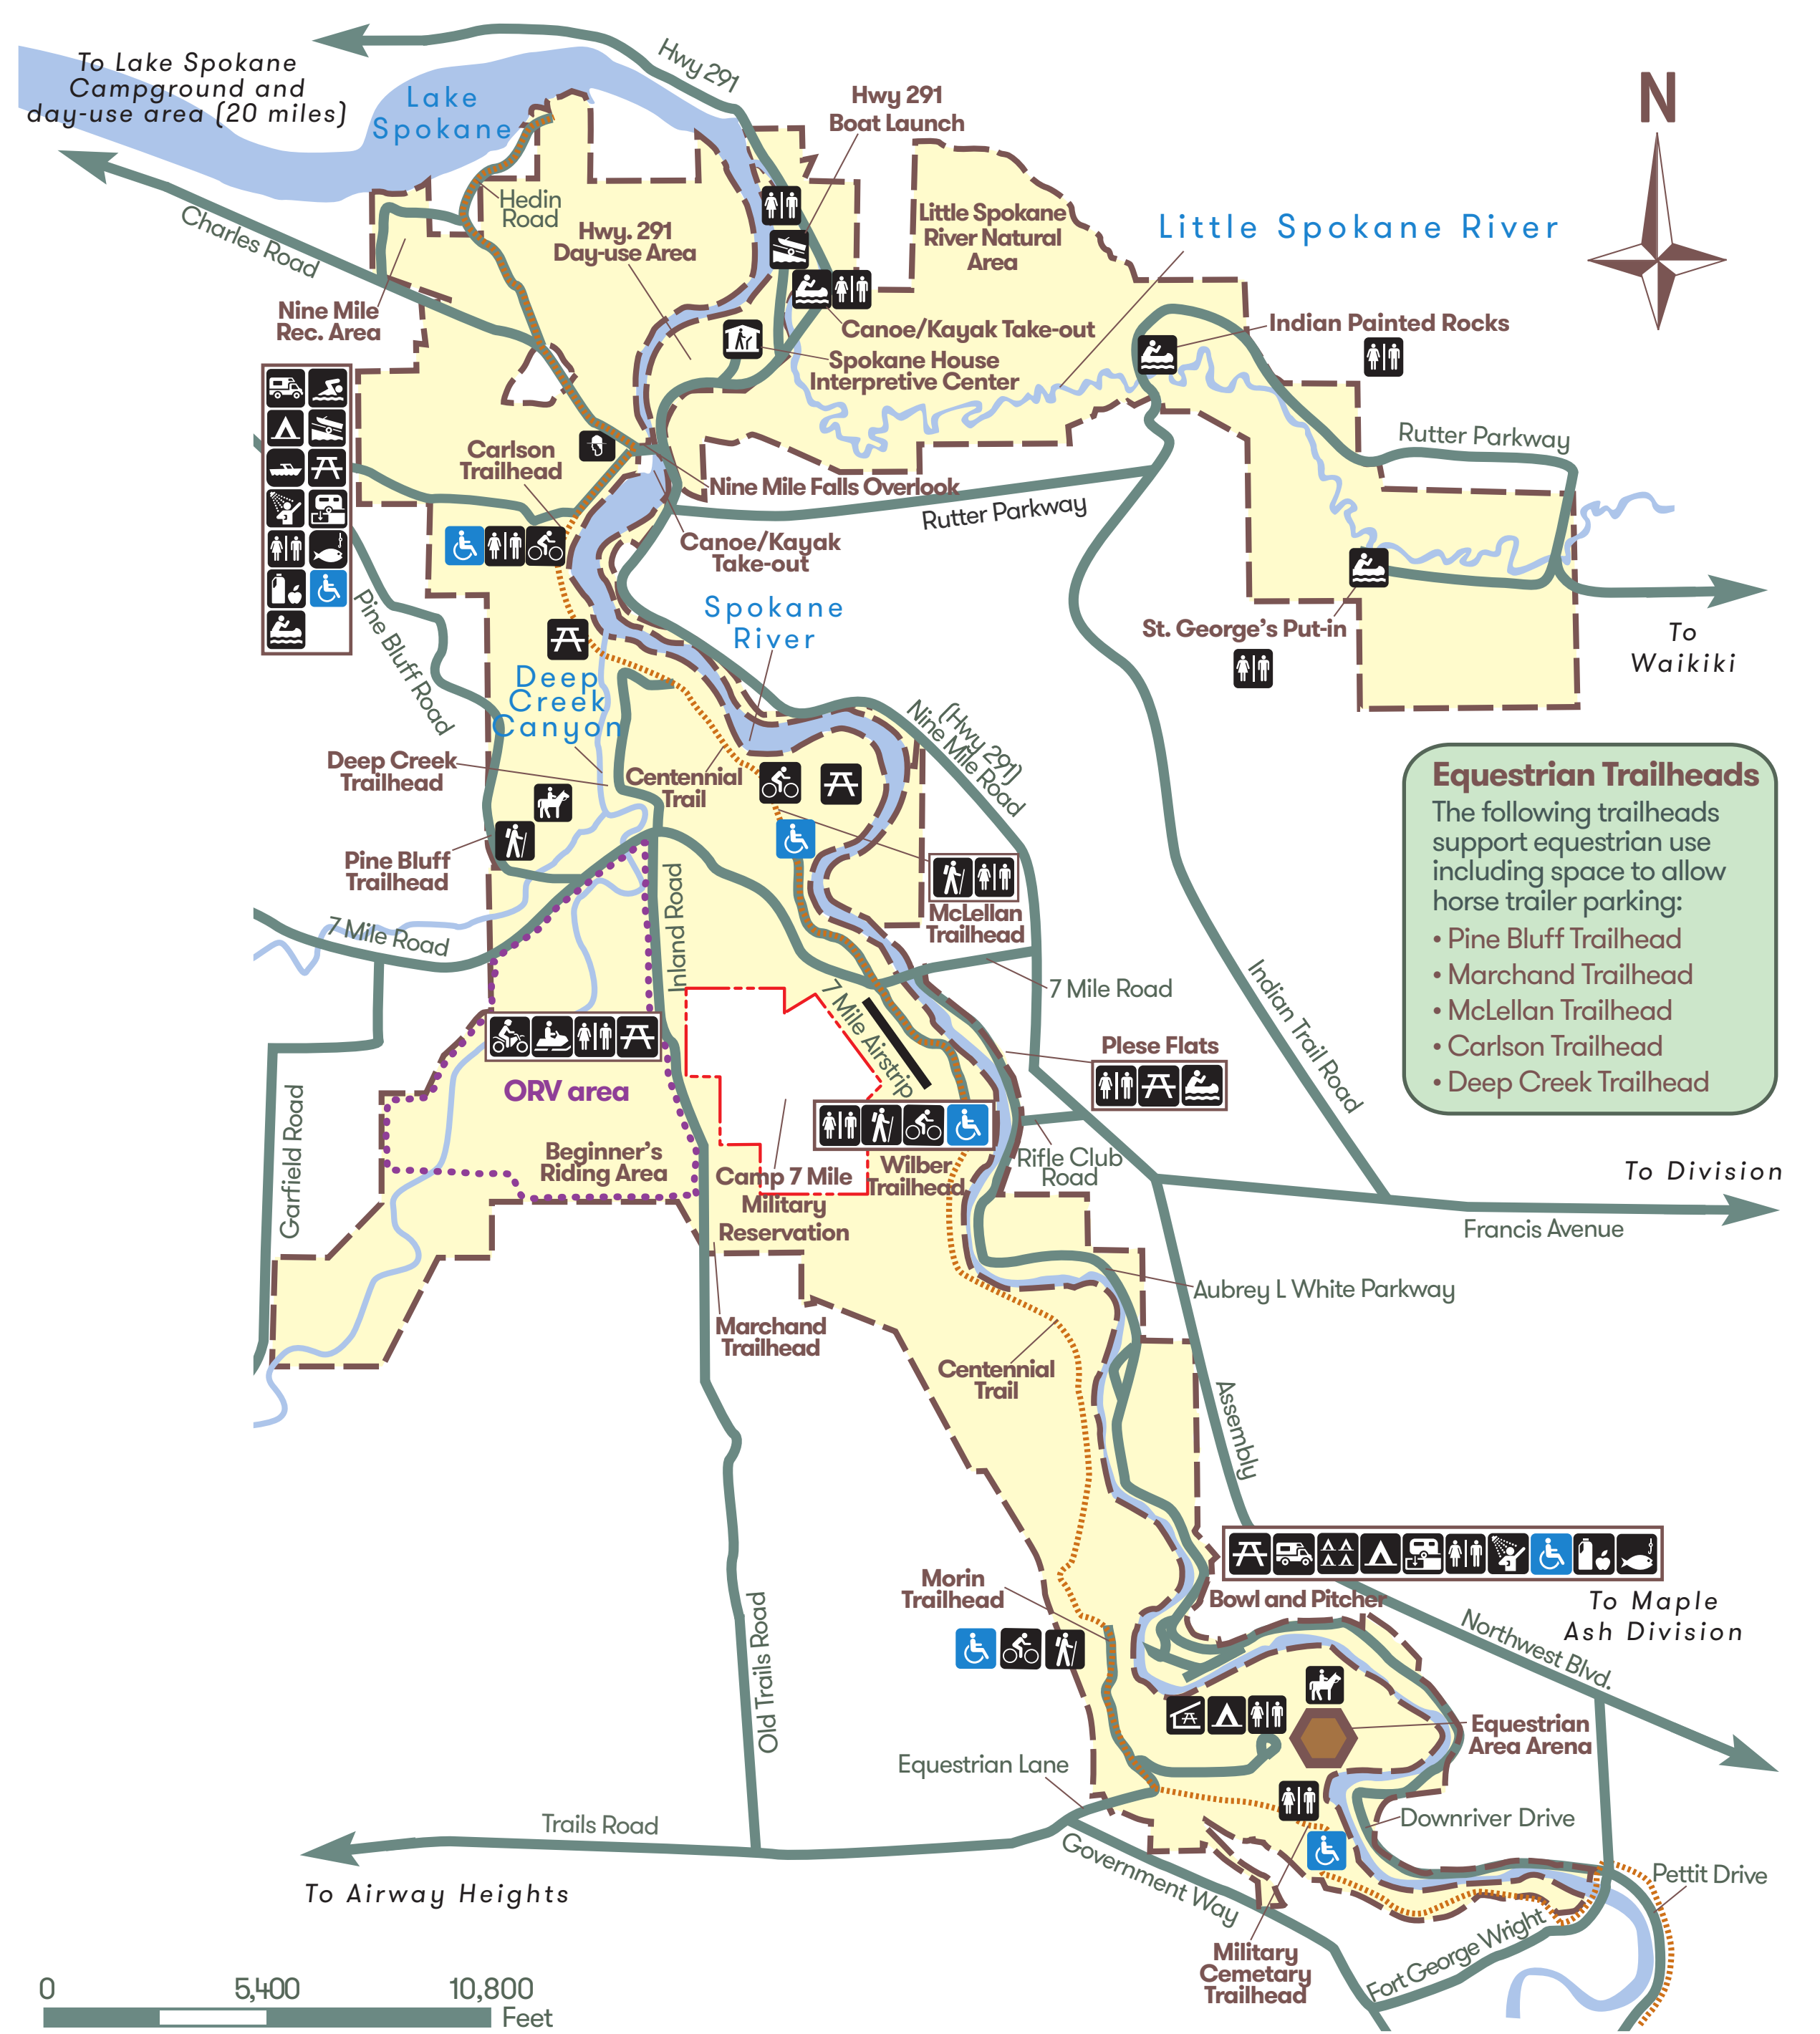

Riverside State Park is a beautiful camping park that lies along the Spokane River near the City of Spokane. Riverside has the second largest land area of any state park in Washington, with 12,000 acres and nearly 200,000 feet of shoreline along running rivers and freshwater marshes.

Within the park is Riverside's main campground known as Bowl and Pitcher which is nestled along the Spokane River amongst towering Ponderosa Pines and known for the iconic swinging bridge connecting the campground and day-use area to miles of trails on the other side of the Spokane River; the Nine Mile Recreation Area offers camping, swimming, picnicking and other water recreation opportunities;

the Lake Spokane Area provides secluded camping spots, a variety of picnic shelters overlooking the lake, a swimming area, and a boat launch with a dock for fishing; an equestrian area offers horseback riding with several hundred acres of loop trails, camping, and an arena; a 600-acre off-road vehicle park includes a dedicated beginner riding area; and the Spokane River Centennial State Park Trail which features nearly 40 miles of trail for walking, hiking and bicycling along the river. The Centennial Trail runs beyond park boundaries and connects with urban portions that continue through the city of Spokane and connects with the North Idaho Centennial Trail in Post Falls. Visitors to Riverside can enjoy the diverse array of recreational opportunities, including picnicking, camping, rock climbing, hiking, fishing, boating, wildlife viewing, kayaking, biking and snowshoeing.
