

Seaquest State Park

is a beautifully forested park and sits along the shoreline of Silver Lake, a shallow wetland lake. This 475-acre, year-round camping park is near Mount St. Helens, a national volcanic monument.

The Mount St. Helens Visitor Center within the park details the history and geology of the volcano.

The Visitor Center is located on the shores of Silver Lake, formed when a previous eruption of Mount St. Helens permanently dammed Silver Creek.

A one-mile-long trail opens to a view across Silver Lake of Mount St. Helens. The trail is accessible to people with disabilities. There is excellent wildlife viewing in both wetland and lowland forest habitats.

Bird watching and wildlife viewing are popular activities along the park's 7 miles of hiking trail. Silver Lake is only 10 feet deep and fish are occasionally seen from the ADA-accessible trail.

Overnight accommodations

The park offers several options for overnight accommodations. There are 55 standard (tent) campsites and 33 utility campsites. Some campsites can accommodate RVs up to 50 feet long. The north, south and mid-camp loops are in forest settings. Reservations are suggested in the summer. The campground is located on the north side of Highway 504.

A group camp also is available by reservation. The group camp includes a covered shelter for tables, a tent area, a fire circle, two braziers and hose bib. Maximum occupancy is 25 guests. The group camp is reservable May 15 through Sept. 15 and available on a first-come, first-served basis the remainder of the year.

Looking for an alternative to tent camping? Seaquest State Park also offers five reservable yurts. All yurts are situated in a wooded area of the park and are within walking distance of the Mount St. Helens Visitor Center. Each is 16 feet in diameter by 10 feet high and furnished with a queen-size futon, a bunk bed that sleeps three, small end table, an electrical outlet and heater. Outside each yurt is a picnic table and fire circle with grate. All yurts are heated, but visitors should take along blankets and warm clothing as no bedding is provided and evenings can be cool. Yurts accommodate up to five guests.

Reservations for individual campsites, the group camp and yurts may be made online at www.parks.state.wa.us or by calling (888) CAMPOUT or (888) 226-7688.

Park history

Alfred L. Seaquest willed the property that became Seaquest State Park to the state upon his death. The property was the homestead of C. J. Seaquest, Alfred L. Seaquest's father. Seaquest stipulated in his will that if liquor were ever sold on the property, the land would "revert to the ownership of Willamette University."

The Mount St. Helens Visitor Center opened to the public in 1987. Under a cooperative agreement, the U.S. Forest Service built and operated the center on State Parks' lands. In October of 2000, alternative operation of the center was required and State Parks entered into an operating agreement with the U.S. Forest Service to allow continued operation of the facility.
