OKHA

Negative space or empty space, AKA the VOID, holds energy, shape and form and holds the observer in much the same way that physical structures do.

“Subliminal, negative space resonates deep within us in a tantric way and in due course may have a more profound effect on the senses.”

Adam Court - OKHA

In the VOID series of chairs, counter and barstools, emptiness is filled with energy or vibrations that we connect to on subconscious, primal level; there is the mystery of the unknown, of what may be.

Structure and VOID are inter-relational entities, one cannot exist without the other, the elemental structure of VOID frames and holds negative space.

The VOID collection uses a reduction-ist composition and form to investigate the inter-relationship of structure and space, one cannot exist without the other; the physical structure of VOID frames and holds emptiness; structure and space are unified and come together as one.

“The style is brutal, fundamental and purist, the character of the chair purposefully raw and a provocative contradiction of elegance and visual candour.”

Adam Court - OKHA

“The conundrum and paradox of empty space is that the VOID can appear to have form and weight.”
