THE MEXICO COLLECTION

SOLID

This is how most of our clients refer to The Mexico Collection.

Manufactured from solid reclaimed Teak, and offering generous proportions, the 3 seater bench can double as a bed.

Cushions are included.

So what is reclaimed teak? Reclaimed teak is teak wood harvested from old, unused structures. Due to teak's natural decay resistance and durability over eras, this wood has the same quality that freshly-cut teak does. By using recycled teak wood, we ensure that the world's forests can recover, and we can continue providing you with quality furniture.

THE CAMBRIDGE COLLECTION

The colour and grain of teak wood that Cambridge collection is made of is the most attractive to furniture makers and home owners. Whilst outdoor teak furniture can be left to the elements and become an elegant silver-grey colour, teak used for indoor purposes is often oiled to retain its warm golden colour. Its strength is a real plus-point for furniture designers.

The durability of teak wood is world renown and it has been used to construct ship railings and similar products because it can stand up to the elements—especially rain—year after year. Teak wood originates in Southeast Asia and takes nearly 4 decades to reach maturity and a stage where it can be used to make furniture and other fine products. The oil content of teak is very high and helps give the wood its weather-resistant qualities. Because of this high oil concentration within the wood itself, teak outdoor furniture can literally be left outside season after season with little to no care.

GARDEN POTS

ITALIAN TERRACOTTA

The most traditional of flower pots is the classic terracotta. Its sheer earthiness makes terracotta the natural choice to anchor any plant. Terracotta has a long timeline in human history and a place in the gardener's heart.

Terracotta refers to natural clay fired at a low temperature. Iron compounds in some clay give terracotta its familiar "rusty mud" hue, though terracotta does exist in other earthy colours. When the clay is fired, the minerals are partially melted, resulting in a hardened but still porous material. Humans have used terracotta for many hundreds of years.

FRENCH ANDUZE POTTERY

The town of Anduze in the South of France is very well known for its colourful glazed and large garden planters. Many of the Manor houses, large parks, and historical sites are decorated with these beautiful urns.

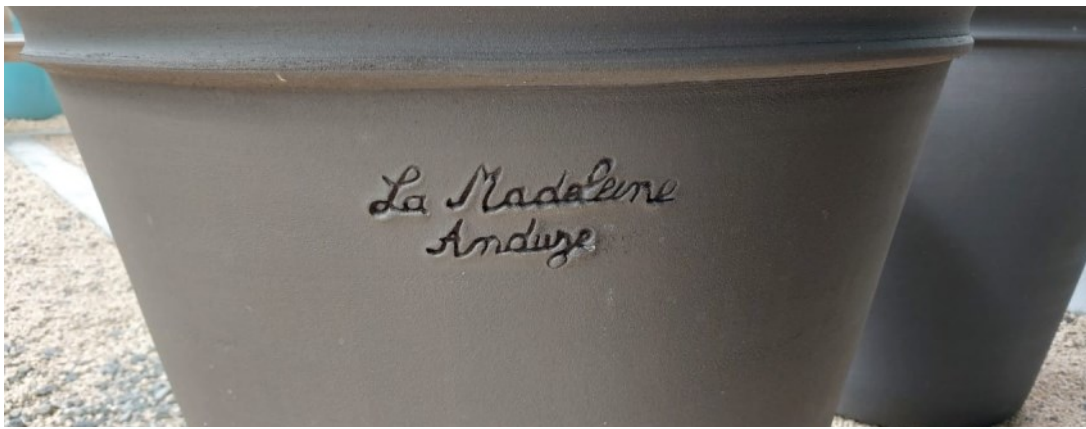

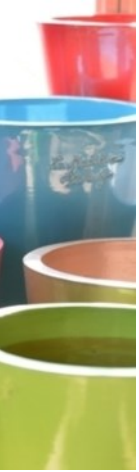

The technique of the handmade pottery in Anduze is centuries old. The story of the Vase d'Anduze began in the 16th century under the reign of Henry IV, when a potter was inspired by a Medici vase he had seen in Florence, Italy.

Today, many gardens and parks are decorated with these masterpieces. Giving them a royal, and grand ambiance.

Throughout the century the traditional planter was joined by elaborately painted and burned designs, finishes from high gloss to antiqued finish and available in many sizes

Please see our website for designs and colours.
