

Suicide Loss Survivor Support

www.taps.org

Tragedy Assistance Program for Survivors, TAPS, is a national nonprofit that provides comfort, care, and resources to all those grieving the death of a military loved one. TAPS provides a variety of programs including seminars, retreats, counseling referrals, and casework assistance to help navigate benefits and resources.

www.afsp.org

The American Foundation for Suicide Prevention is a not for profit voluntary health organization that is dedicated to bringing hope to those affected by suicide, including those who have experienced a loss. AFSP creates a culture that's smart about mental health by engaging in the following core strategies: funding scientific research; educating the public about mental health and suicide prevention; advocating for public policies in mental health and suicide prevention; and supporting survivors of suicide loss and those affected by suicide.

www.suicidology.org

American Association of Suicidology promotes the understanding and prevention of suicide and supports those who have been affected by it. AAS envisions a world where people know how to prevent suicide and find hope and healing.

www.allianceofhope.org

Alliance of Hope was created by suicide loss survivors, for suicide loss survivors. They provide online healing support, resources, and information on the survivor experience – including an online forum providing 24/7 support.

www.griefshare.org

GriefShare offers friendly and caring support groups that are led by facilitators who have also experienced loss. The groups give survivors a chance to connect, support, and encourage each other on their healing journeys. You can also sign up for daily emails of encouragement.

www.compassionatefriends.org

The Compassionate Friends organization specifically supports families after a child dies. Their mission is to provide personal comfort, hope, and support to every family experiencing the death of a son or daughter, brother or sister, or a grandchild. They offer bereavement packets, online community support, and local chapters that hold in-person meetings.

www.dougy.org

The Dougy Center (The National Grief Center for Children and Families) focuses on providing grief support for children, teens, and young adults and their families. They created the world's first peer grief support program for children and have created a safe environment for children and families to come together and share openly about their grief. You can find books, resources and groups that meet in your local community.

www.tuesdayschildren.org

Tuesday's Children provides a lifetime of healing for families of fallen soldiers and others who have been impacted by loss due to terrorism, military conflict, or mass violence. They support everyone in the family unit and provide counseling and support, youth mentorship and family engagement, career guidance, or connecting with your local community support.
