

Choral Service For Mitchell-Eagle Wedding In Marton

When Pamela Margaret, daughter of Mr and Mrs K. Eagle, Marton, became the wife of Bernard John Mitchell of Wellington, St. Stephen's Church, Marton, was the venue of a very pretty choral wedding. Rev. D. C. Mercier officiated, with Miss L. Deighton at the organ.

Escorted by her father, the bride wore a classical gown of pale magnolia embossed brocade, with round neckline, the skirt falling in soft folds to form a short train, finished with tiny rosebuds. From a dainty coronet fell her fingertip veil. She carried a white prayerbook and orchid spray.

Attending the bride were her sister, Sue, and cousin, Cathie Spencer, who were dressed alike in maize embossed brocade, with full skirts and choir-boy tops. They carried lavender sprays and on their heads wore lavender circlets of flowers.

The tiny flower girl, Dallas Stead, wore a lavender frock and carried a posy in lemon shade.

Mr. Ron King, of Wellington, was best man, and the groomsmen was Mr. Barrie McLaughlin, also of Wellington. Messrs Jeffrey and Bruce Eagle were ushers at the church and also at the reception.

During the service the choir sang "Jude's Consecration". At the wedding breakfast guests were entertained with delightful songs by the bride's grandfather, Mr C. Wadman, and a quartet, comprising Mr Wadman, his son Charles (Bulls) and daughters, Helen Eagle and Bessie Managh.

At the reception, the bride's mother wore a pale blue embroidered satin gown, pale blue flower hat, a pink spray and grey and black accessories. The bridegroom's mother had chosen a mushroom tie silk coat over a dainty floral frock. She wore a mauve spray and completed her ensemble with a green hat.

Mr Winder acted as master of ceremonies at the reception.

The couple's future home will be in Wellington.
