A small piece with three wrought iron links...

This was one of the few remains that we recovered from the old family winery. However, it holds great meaning: it mimics the interweave of vine shoots and tendrils, and symbolises the union of body, mind and soul, which the wine brings into harmony. A balance that provides wellbeing. It is also associated with spring and fertility. Today, it is the symbol of our project, in honour of those who taught us and instilled in us their love for the vineyard and their passion for wine. The central part forms the "A" of Aldonia; a depiction of our desire to bond with people to continue sharing in harmony this fascinating culture.

Cheers!
