2007 NAPA VALLEY MERLOT
There is a town in France that the Romans called Cordaxnum, which means "place of thistles." Steve MacRost, long known as a producer of great California wines made from classic French grape varieties, such as Pinot Noir, traces his own origin to a place of thistles—the thistle being the national flower of Scotland, his ancestral home. All MacRost wines share a long, proud tradition of rugged individualism, but unlike the thistle, they are soft, luscious, and full of rich, ripe flavors.
