CHARDONNAY
ARROYO SECO, CALIFORNIA
4,000 CASES

+ Story: The Arroyo Seco forms from rainwater and snowmelt rushing from the Santa Lucia Mountains into the Salinas Valley below. Over centuries, the force of these waters formed the unique landscape of California's smallest viticultural area. Here, Chardonnay vines spring up from alluvial soils, and ripen according to the seasonal cycle of cool evening air, intense morning fog and warm daytime sunshine. Out of this beautifully rugged terrain come some of California's most flavorful white wines.

+ Taste: Tropical aromas of citrus and pineapple dominate, underneath which you'll discover more subtle scents of vanilla, baking spices and a bit of campfire. It has a creamy, full-bodied texture, but enough tanginess to make your mouth water for another sip. Try it with grilled corn on the cob and chili lime butter, or crispy fried chicken.
