Biodynamic® 101: → Native Yeast ←

Spontaneous fermentations yield wines that are site-specific, complex and express local terroir. Biodynamic winemaking standards prohibit the use of added wine yeasts. Our Biodynamic wines are fermented by numerous strains of native wild yeasts naturally present on the grape skins and unique to each vineyard block and growing season.

Notes of lemon custard, pineapple and guava form a deftly balanced acidity in our Sauvignon Blanc with fruit from the Sparrowhawk Vineyard in Potter Valley. Its fresh and expressive character makes a lovely pairing for Vietnamese spring rolls or a minted honeydew melon salad.

Our vineyards are located at the headwaters of the Russian River in beautiful Mendocino County. Our Biodynamic wines are crafted in harmony with the rhythms of nature and fermented on native yeasts without chemical pesticides or preservatives. As three generations of organic farmers and winemakers, we find that our care and respect for the earth is reflected in the expression of purity and true terroir in our wines.
