VINEYARD
MAQUIS
CABERNET SAUVIGNON 2009

The label depicts a piece of silver jewelry previously used as an adornment by the Mapuches, who are local indigenous Chileans.

This wine is made from Cabernet Sauvignon grapes grown between the Chimbarongo Creek and the Tinguiririca River on the Maquis Estate in central Colchagua Valley.

The two-meter-deep alluvial soil contains 25% clay, which produces Cabernet Sauvignon that is ripe and elegant and has extraordinary complexity.

The grapes were picked during the last week in March due to a long dry summer with temperatures almost 3°C higher than average allowing for an earlier harvest. The grapes show good concentration and black fruit aromas.
