Texans Helping Businesses & Protecting Communities

The Monterey coast, with its majestic ocean landscape and moody grittiness of Cannery Row, has always been home to a rugged beauty and complex character. This singular quality extends to the nearby Salinas Valley, where breezes turn into wild wind, creating weather whose drama is transferred to grape vines, and then into Pinot Noir.

Vines emerge from their struggle to create remarkably soft, expressive wine — a unique creation from a stretch of California that remains farming focused, untamed and worthy of acclaim. — Charlie Wagner
