When I told friends and colleagues I would be the first in Portugal to make a pure Alicante Bouschet, their consensus was that I was aluado, meaning moonstruck or crazy, but it was delicious (and they all enjoyed a glass or two!). Alicante Bouschet produces some of the world's most deeply-coloured wine and is prized for that very quality, but only those wines awarded the highest scores by our region's official tasting panel can be labelled Reserva. Incredibly opaque, this dark wine exudes intense berry fruit and sweet spice aromas leading to a full, deliciously fresh palate of damson, cassis, blackberry, vanilla and cinnamon. With its firm, ripe palate and long, melting finish, Aluado is perfect with richly flavoured dishes and prime cuts of red meat.
