ARTIST 0005/1800
ARTILLERY
CHICAGO

Artillery's creativity is drawn from the aggressive energy of the drum and bass, dub step and metal constantly pouring through his headphones. Armed with some stolen X-acto blades, almost every color of Montana spray paint and his wry sense of humor, he has created an arsenal of hand-cut stencil designs featuring candy-coated colors and an almost Warhol-esque twist on banal imagery. He currently curates street art shows in Chicago's eclectic Wicker Park neighborhood, giving an outlet to up-and-coming artists. Artillery's latest works can also be seen on the street signs, buildings and bridges of Chicago—because even though he's quickly becoming so much more than a "street artist," that boy just can't resist the urge to "get up."
