9MILE
ROAD

SOUTH AUSTRALIA
2004 SHIRAZ

A road exactly 9 miles long runs through the valley of Langhorne Creek, one of Australia's prime wine growing areas. When the settlers arrived in the 1800s, they planted grape vines.

Today, a new generation travels the road, seeking full-bodied, flavoursome wines.

This is the home of my first selected wine from downunder, and I think it's a real beauty. Deep red-purple in color, it evokes aromas of ripe black fruits, with hints of licorice, chocolate and exotic spices. The palate is full and juicy, reminiscent of luscious berries with a long, soft finish. Although this wine will improve over the next 4 to 5 years, I'm enjoying it with my mates now. If we couldn't wait, why should you? George Galey
