VODKA TRIBUTE

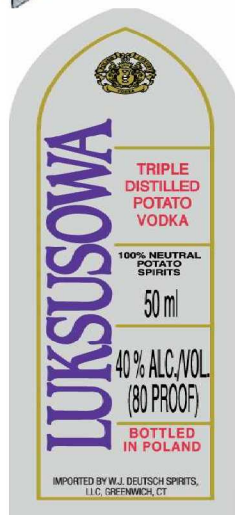

Most vodkas are made from the fermented mash of grain, whereas Lüksusowa vodka, meaning Luxurious (pronounced LUK-SUH-SOVA) is triple distilled from potatoes, through charcoal. Thanks to an unrivaled distillation process, all undesirable fermentation by-products are removed, resulting in a perfectly smooth, richer-tasting vodka.

The process of premium potato vodka has been carried on, almost since vodka was created in Poland (not in Russia, as many believe). In fact, the name "vodka" is a diminutive of the Polish word "woda", meaning water. Vodka was even used as a bartering tool in 15th Century Poland. Word of this spirit spread, and it was soon exported throughout Europe - including Russia.
