2008 SONOMA COAST PINOT NOIR

There is a town in Burgundy that the Romans called Cordunarius, which means "place of thistles." Steve MacRostie, long known as a producer of great California wines made from grape varieties first grown in Burgundy, such as Pinot Noir, traces his own origin to a place of thistles—the thistle being the national flower of Scotland, his ancestral home. All MacRostie wines share a long, proud tradition of rugged individualism, but unlike the thistle, they are soft, luscious, and full of rich, ripe flavors.
